Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public, as an efficacious remedy it is as known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. In cases of Impotency, Hemorrhages, Disordered Sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluor Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a Tonic Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not supperior to any Compound ever used.

TO FEMALES.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies would exist, where they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to, are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN,

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVIOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excess have brought on themselves Premature Impotency. Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the sensual passions, occasioning the necessity of renouncing the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE.

It is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations, Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL."

is put up in 8 oz. Pannel Bottles, and is easily recognized by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle, (to counterfeit which is forgery) as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

THE LAST DAYS AT MOUNT VERNON.

From the Custis Recollections and Private Memoirs of the Life and Character of Washington.

ON WASHINGTON'S resignation of the Presidency, in 1797, one of the first employments of his retirement as a private citizen was to arrange certain letters and papers for posthumous publication. With this view he wrote to Gen. Spotswood, in Virginia, to select a young man of respectable family, good moral habits, and superior clerkly skill to copy into a large book certain letters and papers that would be prepared for such purpose.

Now, these letters and papers were by no means of an official character; neither did they come within the range of Recollections of the Revolution or Constitutional Government; they were more especially private, and could with propriety be termed Passages, Personal and Explanatory, in the Life and Correspondence of George Washington.

Gen Spotswood selected a young man named Albin Rawlins, of a respectable family in the county of Caroline, and well qualified for the duties he was to perform. He soon after arrived at Mount Vernon, and entered upon his employment.

The letters were delivered to Rawlins by the Chief in person, were carefully returned to him when copied, and others delivered out for copying. As the duties of the clerk lasted for a considerable time, very many of the most interesting and valuable letters that Washington ever wrote or received were copied into the Rawlins' Book. While we repeat that these letters were not of an official character, we must observe that they were written to and received from some of the most illustrious public men who flourished in the age of Washington, and shed more light upon the true character of the men and things of that distinguished period than any letters or papers that ever were written and published.

Washington postponed the arrangement for publication of his private memoirs to the last; all such matters lay dormant during the long and meritorious career of his public services. It only was when retired amid the shades of Mount Vernon that he thought of self, and determined in his latter days that nothing should be left undone to give to his country and the world a fair and just estimate of his life and actions.

A portion of the letters of the Rawlins' Book were of a delicate character, seeing that they involved the reputation of the writers as consistent patriots and men of honor. These letters are no where to be found. But, although the veil of mistery has been drawn over the lost letters of the Rawlins' Book that time or circumstance can never remove, our readers may rest assured that there is not a line, nay, a word, in the lost letters that Washington wrote, that, were he living, he would wish to revoke or blot out, but would readily, fearlessly submit to the perusal and decision of his countrymen and the world.

During the agitation of the public mind that grew out of the subject of the lost letters more than fifty years ago, it was contended that the rumors were groundless; that there were no such letters. Faithful to our purpose at the close of our labors, as at the commencement of our humble work more than a quarter of a century ago to give in the Recollections and Private memoirs of the Life and Character of the Pater Patriæ only of what we were, only of what we saw, and only of what we derived from the undoubted authority of others, we do not hesitate to declare, and from an authority that cannot be questioned, that there were such letters as those described as the Lost Letters of the Rawlins' Book.

The ancient family vault having fallen into a state of decay, the Chief surveyed and marked out a spot for a family burial during the last days at Mount Vernon—The new situation is particularly unfavorable and ill chosen, being a most uncomfortable location for either the living or the dead. The executors, conceiving themselves bound by the provisions of the Will to erect a burial vault on the spot marked out, proceeded to do so to the best advantage; but all their endeavors, together with the labors of skillful mechanics, have resulted in the tomb of Washington being universally condemned as unfit for and unworthy of the purpose for which it was intended, while it serves as a matter of reproach to the crowds of pilgrims who resort thither to pay homage to the fame and memory of the Father of his Country.

It is certain that Washington never gave even a hint of his views or wishes in regard to the disposition of his remains. He no doubt believed that his ashes would be claimed as national property, and be entombed with national honors; hence his silence on a subject that has agitated the American public for more than half a Century. On the decease of the Chief the high authorities of the nation begged his remains for public interment at the seat of the National Government. They were granted by the venerable relict, conditioned that her own remains should be interred by the side of her husband in the national tomb. This memorable compact, so solemn in itself, is still in full force and binding on the nation, inasmuch as no subsequent authority could alter or annul it.

In the faith of this compact Col. Monroe when President of the United States, ordered two crypts or vaults to be formed in the basement story of the centre of the Capitol for the reception of the remains of the Chief and his consort, agreeably to the arrangement of 1799, which vaults are untenanted to this day.

Surely it cannot be denied that Mr. Washington had the right, the only right, to the disposal of the remains of the Chief, and by virtue of this right she granted them to the prayer of the nation as expressed by its highest authority.

On her death-bed the venerable Lady called the author of the Recollections, her grandson and executor, to her side, and said, Remember, Washington, to have my remains placed in a leaden coffin, that they may be removed with those of the General at the command of the Government.

And yet we hear of the right of a State! No one State can appropriate to itself that which belongs to the whole. Of the glorious Old Thirteen, little Delaware has as much right to the remains of the beloved Washington as either of her large sisters; for, though small in size, she was great in value in the 'times that tried men's souls,' and in proportion to her resources furnished as much courage, privation, and blood to the combats of liberty as those that were far larger than she. From Long Island to Eutaw, from the first to the last of the War of Independence, her banner was ever in the field, and ever floated mid the 'bravest of the brave.'

It is high time that subject of the remains and the remains themselves were at rest.—Presuming that Government should purchase Mount Vernon, and determine that the ashes of the Chief should there find lasting repose, we would respectfully suggest that a sepulchre be erected on the site of the ancient family vault, a magnificent location having an extensive view of the surrounding country and of the noble Potomac that washes its base; the massive structure to be formed of white American marble, in blocks each of a ton weight, a dome of copper, surmounted by an eagle in bronze, a bronze door, and for inscription two words only, that will speak volumes to all time—Pater Patriæ. The key of the receptacle to be always in custody of the President of the United States for the time being. This done, and if done 'tis well it were done quickly,' the Tomb of Washington would cease to be a reproach among nations.—The pilgrim from distant lands, as he journeys through a mighty Empire with his heart filled with veneration of the fame and memory of America's illustrious son, when he arrives at the National Sepulchre, that casts its broad shadow o'er the Potomac's wave, will become awed by the solemn grandeur of the spot. The American of generations yet to come will behold with filial reverence, the 'time-honored receptacle that contains the ashes of the Father of his Country;' the enduring marble mellowed by age, the inscription freshly preserved in never-dying bronze; when proud of such a monument erected by the piety of his ancestors, the future American may exclaim, in the words of the immortal Bard:

"Such honors Ilion to her Hero paid,
And peaceful sleeps the mighty Hector's shade."

Another object claimed the attention of the Chief during the last Days at Mount Vernon—the complete survey and remodelling of his farms, with a view to their improvement. These surveys he made in person, the calculations and estimates drawn out by his own hand; and indeed it was a rare spectacle to behold this venerable man who had attained the very topmost height of human greatness, carrying his own compass, the emblem of the employments of his early days.

His correspondence with Sir John Sinclair and other eminent characters in Europe gave a great deal of information touching the improvements in agriculture and domestic economy in the Old World.—This valuable information was carefully digested by the Farmer of Mount Vernon, with a view to its adaptation to the climate and resources of the United States. Nothing that tended to public benefit was too vast to be undertaken by this man of mighty labors. The whole of his public as well as private career was marked by usefullness. His aim was good to his country and and mankind, and to effect this desirable and untiring were his energies and onward his course as a public benefactor.

Washington ceased to be a sportsman after 1787, when he gave up the hunting establishment. True, he bred the blood horse, and a favorite colt of his, named Magnolia, was entered and ran for a purse; but this was more to encourage the breeding of fine horses than from any attachment to the sports of the turf. All the time that he could spare for active exercise in his latter days was devoted to riding about his farm and inspecting his improvements. In this he was ably assisted by several of his stewards and managers, who were Europeans, and who had brought from their own countries habits of industry and a knowledge of improved agriculture and rural affairs; so that, had the Farmer of Mount Vernon been spared but a few years longer, his estate would have exhibited a series of model farms, examples to neighboring improvers and to the country at large.

Mount Vernon, in the olden time, was celebrated for the luxuries of the table.—The fields, the forest, and the river, each in their respective seasons, furnished the most abundant resources for good living.—Among the picturesque objects on the Potomac to be seen from the eastern portico of the mansion-house, was the light canoe of Father Jack, the fisherman to the establishment. Father Jack was an African negro, an hundred years of age, and, although greatly enfeebled in body by such a vast weight of years, his mind possessed uncommon vigor. And he would tell of days long past, of Afric's clime, and of Afric's wars, in which he (of course the son of a king) was made captive, and of the terrible battle in which his royal sire was slain, the village consigned to the flames and he to the slave ship.

Father Jack possessed in an eminent degree the leading quality of all his race, somnolency. By looking through a spy-glass you would see the canoe fastened to a stake with the old fisherman, bent nearly double, enjoying a nap, which was only disturbed by the hard jirking of the white perch that became entangled by his hook.

But the slumbers of Father Jack were occasionally attended by some inconvenience. The domestic duties at Mount Vernon were governed by clock-time. Now, the cook required that the fish should be forthcoming at a certain period, so that they might be served smoking on the board precisely at three o'clock. He would repair to the river bank and make the accustomed signals; but, alas, there would be no response; the old fisherman was seen quietly reposing in his canoe, rocked by the gentle undulations of the stream, and dreaming no doubt of events "long time ago." The unfortunate artiste of the culinary department, grown furious by delay, would now rush down to the water's edge, and, by dint of loud shouting, at length the canoe would be seen to turn its prow to the shore—Father Jack, indignant at its being even supposed that he was asleep on his post, would rate those present on his landing with "What you all mek such a debil of a noise for, hey; I want sleep, only noddin."

Poor Father Jack! No more at early dawn will he be seen, as with withered arms he paddled his light canoe on the broad surface of the Potomac, to return with the finny spoils and boast of famous fish taken "on his own hook." His canoe has long since rotted on the shore, his paddle hangs idly in his cabin, his "occupation's gone" and Father Jack, the old fisherman of Mount Vernon, 'sleeps the sleep that knows no waking."

A hunter too was attached to the household establishment. Tom Davis and his great Newfoundland dog, Gunner, were as important characters in the department for furnishing game and wild fowl as Father Jack in that of fish. So vast were the numbers of the canvass-back duck on the Potomac in the ancient time that a single discharge of Tom Davis's old British musket would procure as many of those delicious birds as would supply the larder for a week.

George Washington Lafayette, and his tutor and friend M. Frestel, became members of the Mount Vernon family during the last days. These estimable Frenchmen, driven by persecution from their native country, found refuge in America.

While reasons of State prevented Washington as President from receiving emigres, so soon as he became the private citizen he warmly, joyfully welcomed to his heart and his home the son of his old companion in arms, bidding the young Lafayette consider George Washington as a friend and father. The French gentlemen, from their superior intelligence, together with their highly accomplished and amiable manners, endeared themselves to all who knew them during their sojourn in the United States. They remained members of the family of Mount Vernon until a change in European affairs enabled them to embark for their native land.

The sentinel placed on the watch-tower by Fate to guard the destinies of Washington might have cried all's well during the last days at Mount Vernon. All was well. All things glided glided gently and prosperously down the stream of time, and all was progressive. Two blades of grass had been made to 'grow where but one grew before,' and a garden "bloomed where flowers had once grown wild."

The best charities of life were gathered around the Pater Patriae in the last days at Mount Vernon. The love and veneration of a whole people for his illustrious services; his generous and untiring labors in the cause of public utility; his kindly demeanor to his family circle, his friends, and numerous dependants; his courteous and cordial hospitality to his guests, many of them strangers from far distant lands; these charities, all of which sprung from the heart, were the ornament of his declining years, and gave benign radiance to his setting sun; and that scene, the most sublime in nature, where human greatness reposes on the bosom of human happiness, was to be admired on the banks of the Potomac in the Last Days at Mount Vernon.

Extracts from the Revolutionary Letters.

Fredericksburgh (N. Y.) Oct. 26, 1778.

DEAR JACK:. The enemy still continues to keep us in suspense and baffle all conjecture They have five or six thousand men actually on board transports lying in New York. and a fleet of more than one hundred sail left the Hook on the 20th inst. for England. said to contain invalids, officers of reduced corps, &c. This fleet comprehended empty provision ships, merchant ships, and private adventurers taking the benefit of convoy. Admiral Byron, with fourteen or fifteen sail of the line and some frigates, sailed from the Hook, it is supposed, with design to look at the French squadron at Boston. and keep them shut in there till the transports can get well advanced to their respective places of destination.

It remains a matter of great uncertainty whether the enemy mean to evacuate New York or not. I do not think myself that they will, but can give no better reason for their staying than that they ought to go.—Their uniform practice is to run counter to all expectation. I am therefore justified in my conclusion in the present instance.

Sincerely and affectionately yours
GO. WASHINGTON.

CAMP NEAR DOBB'S FERRY,
July 25, 1781.

DEAR CURTIS: That so few of our countymen have joined the enemy is a circumstance as pleasing to me as it must be mortifyingly evincive to them of the fallacy of their assertion that two-thirds of the people were in their interest and ready to join them when opportunity offered. Had this been the case the Marquis's force and the other third must have abandoned the country.

I am much pleased with your choice of a Governor. He is an honest man, active, spirited, and decided, and will, I am persuaded, suit the times as well as any person in the State. You were lucky, considering the route by which the enemy retreated to Williamsburg, to sustain so little damage. I am of opinion that Lord Cornwallis will establish a strong post at Portsmouth, detach a part of his force to New York, and go with the residue to South Carolina.

I returned yesterday from reconnoitering (with Count Rochambeau and the engineers of both armies) the enemy's works near King's bridge. We lay close to them two days and a night without any attempt on their part to prevent it; they begun and continued a random kind of cannonade, but to very little effect. I am waiting impatiently for the men the States (this way) have been called upon for, that I may determine on my plans and commence operations.

My best wishes attend Nelly, who I hope is perfectly recovered. My love to the little girls, compliments to friends.

Sincerely and affectionately, yours
GO. WASHINGTON.

JOHN PARK CUSTIS, Esq.

Powles' Hook.

West Point, Aug. 24. 1779.

DEAR CUSTIS: Our affairs at present put on a pleasing aspect, especially in Europe and the West Indies, and bid us, I think, hope for the final accomplishment of our independence. But as peace depends upon our allies as well as ourselves, and Great Britain has refused the mediation of Spain, it will puzzle, I conceive, the best politicians to point out with certainty the limitation of our warfare.

We have given the enemy another little stroke in the surprise of Powles' Hook, (within cannon shot of New York,) and bringing off seven officers and one hundred and fifty-one men. This was a brilliant transaction, and performed by a detachment of Virginians and Marylanders, under the command of Major Henry Lee,* of the light dragoons, with the loss of not more than ten or a dozen men. The colors of the garrison were also brought off.

Remember me affectionately to Nelly and the children, and be assured that, with the truest regard, I am yours,

GO. WASHINGTON.

JOHN PARKE CUSTIS, Esq.

TO BAYARD TAYLOR.

I send thee here no valentine,
I only dash thee off a line,
In trembling haste I send it;
Give earnest heed to what I say,
I've a grievous rent in my heart to-day,
I prithee Taylor mend it.

SHANGHAIS.—Extract from a young lady at boarding school, in answer to the present of a baked Shanghai:

On Shanghai-feathers may you rest:
On Shanghai-hen's eggs tread:
May Shanghais rouse you from your dream
And hover o'er your head:
Nice old Shanghais,
Long-legg'd Shanghais,
Real kind old Shanghai-hens.

And if you're ever left alone
By your companion true,
May I, or some one handsomer,
Cook Shanghai-hens for you;
Well fed Shanghais,
Great fat Shanghais,
Real Shanghai hens for you.

How to see the Teeth of a Beautiful Young Lady. Praise her rival before her face, and you may depend upon it, she will soon show her teeth.

☞ The state of politics "is intolerable." That's no blunder, gramatically or otherwise.

A CASE.—Miss Pitznancy—elderly maiden—charged Mr. Cleaver, the gay young man who was accustomed to carry home her marketing, with having forcibly kissed her in the entry of her own house. Mr. Cleaver, although proud of his personal appearance, was short—very short—considering his whiskers; his height, even in French boots, reached only to four feet eleven inches. Miss Pitznancy, on the contrary, being fond of extremes, run up a foot higher—and stayed there; being of an upright deportment, She swore the abbreviated, yet amorous butcher kissed her! by assault—and hauled him up for it.—Butcher—with some expression of disgust, more emphatic than necessary—denied the charge. Butcher was fat—lady wasn't—Cleaver had antipathy to what he irreverently termed—'scraggy' woman, and vowed that he hadn't kissed her, and wouldn't. Money couldn't hire him to.

Being cross-examined, lawyer inquires of the lady the circumstances—when, where, how, &c, Lady replies with great particularity:—On Monday morning—ten o'clock—in the entry—resisted all she could, but he persevered, and triumphed! Lawyer asks—'Did not he stand on anything but the floor?'

'No! he stood on the floor—no chair, stool, or anything else being brought into requisition.'

'But, my dear madam, this is impossible, you are twelve inches taller than him. How could he reach your lips?'

Lady hadn't thought of that, but she was not to be tripped by the glibbest lawyer of them all, so she replies—

'Oh! ah! well—I know—yes! to be sure! but then you know—I scrooched a little!'

'Exactly! Thank you, madam; that'll do.'

'Nothing further, your honor.'

Verdict for the short defendent.—Clinton Courant.

"HE HAS A HARD ROW TO HOE."—Who not in cities bred, has not heard this a thousand times, and said it a thousand more, about anybody and everybody that encountered some difficulties, and did not advance at a 2.40 rate toward the acquisition of fame or fortune.

"Poor fellow! a hard row to hoe," so they say, some with a sigh, but more with a laugh. Like many sayings, it is the casing of a pretty picture; a field of waving corn, and a bright blue sky in June, and the workman going through the rustling ranks for the last time; the rows so long that they seem to come together across away, and the weeds all the while on a great race with the corn.

That's the picture, but there is something more than a specimen of the fine arts in the expression—there's a bit of philosophy.

It occurs to us, there is all the difference in the world in the way people ply that humble instrument, the hoe; and almost everybody works with something very like it, whether they work in the field, or the mechanic-shop. The thing is done that is worth doing, by hard diging. Some people go through the field and through the world, slashing this way and that, now through a hill of corn and now through a weed, making the whole area look like the lightening's summer-fallow. Such people certainly have a hard row to hoe, if indeed when they finish it, it proves worth hoeing at all.

Others, again, strike at the little weeds with a sufficient expenditure of strength to fell quite a respectable tree, and the result is, that about midway of the field, and on the first row, they lean upon the implement and sigh to themselves. 'We have a hard row to hoe.' And they tell the truth, for so they do.

Now and then a man manages to strike every stone in the vicinity a perfectly annihilating blow—annihilating to the hoe we mean—and before the day is half done his weapon is disabled and he fancies, like the rest, that he has a hard row to hoe.

Sometimes a little green remnant of the fall springs up close at the root of a blade of corn, as much as to say, 'touch me if you dare.' Well, the man is too lazy to stoop and pluck away the intruder from its anchorage, and so he levels a very dexterous blow at the offender, cuts it off without benefit of clergy, in a twinkling, and—the blade of corn too!—and when harvest comes, and the corn-cribs are half filled, he murmurs that 'he has a hard row to hoe.'

In fact the world is a huge cornfield, and there's nothing like knowing how to handle the hoe.—N. Y. Tribune.

TOUCHING THE RIGHT SPOT.—The following incident is related of a sad steamboat disaster near New Orleans recently:

"An individual was pointed out to us among the survivors. He was apparently about forty years old, from Georgia. On our inquiring if he had lost any of his family, he replied, "no, nobody but my wife and a small gal." "How many children had you, sir?" "Seven in all." "No, dad," said a strapping boy of 17, "you had eight—there was Jim, and Dave, and Bill, etc., etc." "Well, I b'lieve you're right;" said the father, and we walked on.

On relating the circumstance in the cars as an evidence of what we consider a total destitution of sensibility, a passenger remarked "you are mistaken, sir. He is a man of very tender feelings. While he was telling me about $900 all in $5 gold pieces, that he had left in the clerk's hand, the big tears rolled down his cheeks. He is not wanting in sensibility, if you only touch him in the right place."

A State Flag.

THE ADJUTANT GENERAL'S REPORT.—The report of Adjutant General Temple, which has just been published, contains a concise statement of the present condition of the militia of the State, with several valuable suggestions as to the modes in which it may and ought to be improved. We have not the space to publish it at length It concludes with the following recomendation:

It has occurred to me that it would be proper and appropriate, for the Legislature to establish a State Flag. So that we may not ever be suspected of an intention to dissolve the Union, I respectfully recommend that the flag of the State of New York, except that in place of the star on the national flag which represents the State, the arms of the State, shall be placed in the centre of the stars, which represent other States. If all the States of the Union will adopt this advice, Nationality would be respected and States be characterized by a standard of their own.

Statistics of Colonization.

FROM 1820 to the close of 1853, a period of thirty-years, the Colonization movement to Liberia was as follows:

	Expeditions.	Emigrants
By Am. Col. Soc.,	101	8,202
By Md. Col. Soc.,	28	767
		8,968
Add recaptives landed in Liberia, by the Gov. of the U.S.		1,044
		10,013

—Living under a government established and conducted by these are many of the native population, who have taken an oath of fealty, and many tens of thousands bound by treaty to wholly abandon the slave trade, and thus are brought under civilizing influences. Nearly six hundred and fifty miles of sea-coast, and ten millions of acres of land, have been by fair and peaceable purchase secured for the American settler. If a feeble benevolent Society has instrumentally effected so much, what could be accomplished by state and national encouragement?

*The Maryland Society really fitted out two of the expeditions credited to the American Colonization Society, carrying 174 emigrants, but it was while they were auxiliary to the American Colonization Society. The reader can make the correction if desired.—[Col. Journal.

FRIED OYSTERS.—Select the largest oysters for frying. Take them out of their liquor with a fork, and endeavor, in doing so, to rinse off all the particles of shell which may adhere to them. Dry them between napkins: have ready some grated crackers, seasoned with Cayenne pepper and salt. Beat the yolks only of some eggs, and to each egg add half a table-spoonful of thick cream. Dip the oysters, one at a time, first in the egg, then in the cracker crumbs, and fry them in plenty of butter, or butter and lard mixed, till they are of a light brown on both sides. Serve them hot.

(We prefer Oysters fried to any other mode of cooking this delicious food.—Ed. Rep)

Why The Butter Don't come.

Mr. Editor:—A farmer's wife, in the last number of the Farmer, wishes to know 'Why the butter don't come.' A lady of my acquaintance has ventured to give her opinion.

'It is supposed by many, that in cold weather, cream may be kept a greater length of time without churning than in warm weather. This is a mistake, for, though the cream may not become sour so soon, yet it will become 'bitter,' which is the secret of the trouble.

'The milk should not stand too long before the cream is taken off, and the cream, when taken off, should be stirred frequently, unless churned soon Freezing the milk is of no injury, provided it freezes just enough to separate the cream properly. But in this case the cream should be kept frozen until wanted for the churn, at which time it should be brought to a proper temperature.

Yours respectfully, THOS. BURRILL.

A Plot Exposed.

Correspondence of The N. Y. Tribune.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Feb. 24, 1854.

The extraordinary course of the southern Whigs, and the remarkable changes and subterfuges of Douglas, on Nebraska, have been matters of profound astonishment in all quarters.

It turns out that those twin brothers of agitation, audacity and imperious misrule, Messrs. Toombs and Stephens of Georgia, are the men who have instigated, nourished, and finally matured this nefarious scheme; and that Douglas and the President are but their confederates in the plot.

We see now how it is that the scheme was initiated, and we are in possession of the secret springs of the ground and lofty tumbling of Douglas, which, have been a matter hitherto so inexplicable.

Since Mr. Toombs's accession to the Senate until his manifestation to-day, he has been an apparently quiet member. But everobody who knows anything of the fiery, restless and imperious character of the man, and his unquestioned capacity, knows that this is but a superficial appearance. The real truth is, that instead of being idle he has been hard at work during the session in aid of his long-cherished object of extinguishing all political and legislative opposition to Slavery, and in bringing it under the active protection of Congress, and also in crippling the power and abridging the area of the free States.

Such are the antecedents of Messrs. Toombs and Stephens, touching the important movements of 1850, so closely connected with those of to-day. Their acts were not trivial nor unmeaning. Mr. Toombs is a man of great resolution and indomitable energy. With ordinary men, his fire and impetuosity are sure to succeed. His fierce invectives, his implacable hatreds, his bold front, his urgent and imperative demeanor, would, in 1850, have triumphed over almost any other person than Gen. Taylor. Mr. Stephens is Mr. Toombs's potent ally, a man of keen intellect, intense passion, and fierce and despotic nature. These are the men who professing to be Whigs, destroyed the Whig ascendancy in Congress by defeating Mr. Winthrop's election for Speaker in 1850, who made war upon Gen. Taylor and his Cabinet, and who have been the stormy spirits of disorganization, and misrule, and savage agitation, from the beginning of their career. They now appear as the projectors and backers of a bolder and more gigantic outrage than was ever before hatched in their prolific nest of evil.

Here is unfolded the true view of the Nebraska outrage, which has till now baffled all attempts to unravel its secret history. That the southern Whig Senators have consented to become tools in the hands of Mr. Toombs, to be by him transferred over to confederate with certain Democratic leaders, for the purpose of striking down the rights and power of the North, by the shameless violation of an ancient and sacred compact, is monstrous And not more scandalous and astonishing is it that northern Democratic leaders have suffered themselves to be seduced into the the recommendation and support of these hideous projects of southern disunionists. Is it yet too late for the Democratic leaders themselves to avoid the pit into which these restless mischief-makers and apostates from Whiggery are about to betray them? Or will they persist in this infamy, till an aroused constituency shall indignantly overwhelm them? The measure is the creature and offspring of a virulent and chronic hatred of the North and northern institutions, and is stimulated by an inordinate malice, and a hateful and domineering spirit of Slavery aggression, which, if not resisted, will be fatal to the free States. It is the first of a series of measures intended to convert the Government, under the lead of violent men, into a vast engine for the oppression of the free States, and for the spread and perpetuity of African Slavery.

The Real Issue Fairly Stated.

Edmund Burke, of New Hampshire, is an open, avowed, and one of the few self-consistent supporters of the Nebraska bill. We can but commend, however, the honest and manly fashion in which he supports this measure. There is none of the skulking, dodging and creeping warfare, such as characterises the course of the Post, or its owners at Washington. He meets the consequences fairly, and looks its results right in the face. He admits that no one can with any pretence deny, that inasmuch as slavery was the law of the land in the Louisiana territory before the passage of the Missouri Compromise, the repeal of that law revives and re-establishes slavery, in a word, restores the original condition of things, as they existed before its passage. Here is the extract. The italics are his own:

"The Nebraska bill, if it shall pass both houses of Congress and become a law, repeals the Missouri compromise. And what will be the effect of such repeal? Unquestionably to revive and re-establish slavery over that whole region. When Louisiana was ceded to the United States, the law of slavery existed over that whole vast territory. It required no law to establish the institution—it then existed in fact and by law. And out of that territory already three slave States have been carved, and admitted into the Union, viz: Louisiana, Arkansas, and Missouri. When they came into the possession of the Union as territories, slavery had been planted and was flourishing upon their soil; and the whole territory of Louisiana was under the dominion of the law which established and legalized the institution. Therefore when those States came into the Union, the people did not have to establish and ordain slavery. The Missouri compromise repealed and excluded the institution above the line of 36° 30'. The repeal of that Compromise revives and re-establishes slavery in all the remaining territory of the Louisiana purchase. Therefore the law which permits slavery will be revived, and slavery will exist in Nebraska and Kansas the very moment the Nebraska bill receives the sanction of the President. This is the only deduction which can legally be drawn from the premises.

The proposition, therefore, which the Northern men are to look fully in the face, and to meet without the possibility of evasion, is this: Shall slavery be revived and re-established in Nebraska and Kansas?—And as a necessary consequence, shall the slave States gain that political preponderance in the Senate of the United States which they have lost by the more rapid multiplication, of late, of free States?—These are the propositions which Northern men must meet, and which they cannot now dodge or evade."

Here we have the highest democratic authority to show us what Senator Douglas, Frank Pierce & Co. are striving to bring about by their infamous measures. He is one of the few honest enough to face the music and to avow the truth. He tells the Democrats of New Hampshire and of the North, that when they gave their sanction to the Nebraska bill, the not only allow, but absolutely establish slavery in the whole of that territory, large enough to make a dozen States as large as New York!

CHESTERFIELD.

"We have met the enemy and they are ours."

The Whig ticket in Chesterfield is elected by majorities ranging from 20 to 250! This is the most complete triumph the whigs have ever achieved in this town. In fact the democratic party is utterly annihilated, and the question may well be asked "is there a democratic party in Chesterfield?" We have, however, promised a democratic neighbor to be civil about this matter and we will state it exactly as it is Whigs owe very much, not only to the divisions, but to the votes of democrats.—Hards cut Softs, and Softs cut Hards.—But they owe more to a mercenary press which if continued will utterly prostrate that party in all this section of the State. Supported through the campaign of 1852 by donations of from 50 cts to $5 its editor has since been pensioned on the Post Office and made a Notary to spunge out of unfortunate debtors at the rate of $250, a year. Thus has that party furnished weapons for its own destruction. We do not state these latter facts to reflect upon the democrats, but only to acknowledge what many, both Softs and Hards, are sensible of. In the above promiso, however, we did not mean to deprive ourself of the pleasure of stating that whigs exult in their triumph. Though the whig caucus engendered wide spread ill feeling it was all subsequently reconciled, and every whig worked faithfully for the whole ticket, and nothing but the ticket. Indeed, whigs never worked more industriously than on Tuesday, and they accomplished what they mutually pledged themselves on Monday to accomplish, and whigs are all friends and all happy, and all glorious. There is universal good feeling & general rejoicing among whigs of course & while they acknowledge their indebtedness to the divisions and votes of democrats, the latter can not ask them to forego exultation at the existing state of things.

But this is not all; whigs owe a deep debt of gratitude to the Irish and French, who have forever established their independence and intelligence. The former begin to read, and think and act for themselves and are no longer to be entangled in the meshes of democratic falsehoods, and the latter are not to be seduced by a degenerate descendant of tory stock imported and paid for that purpose. There is now only one thing to be regretted, and that is, that a Hard could not have been placed upon our ticket, but whigs wanted the places & they had the preference of course. On the whole, all is well, and whigs are content.

WILMINGTON, March 8, 1854.

DEAR COLONEL:—I noticed by your last paper that you wished your friends in the different towns to send you the entire list of officers elected. It affords me much pleasure to comply with your request so far as this town is concerned:—

Jacquis, Overseer, free soil dem., 35 maj.; Harvey Wood, Inspector, Ab., 35 maj.; Lewis Bliss, Inspector, free soil dem., 35 maj.; Aaron Hays, Sealer, Ab., 75 maj.

You may conclude, I reckon, that this town is pretty well "aroused" to the 'agitation' of the Slavery question, as the Whig caucus itself adopted unanimously strong anti-Nebraska Resolutions.

Please remember me to my good friend, the Hon. Richard Keese, with whom I have such a perfect understanding politically.

W. LANSING.

ELIZABETHTOWN.—Alanzo Finney, whig, Supervisor, elected over Col. Williams in consequence of local divisions of long standing. For these very reasons, as the Col. had the regular nomination, he ought to have been elected as a pledge of reconciliation and future harmony. His defeat only increases past differences. Mr Finney, however is a worthy citizen and will make a faithful officer.

The Supervisors, as far as heard from are thus:

Whigs 8, Dem. 2, Ab. 1. To hear from 7. If the remaining towns come in as last year the board will stand:

Whigs 14, Dem. 3, Ab. 1. Had Jay and Wilmington have done their duty the board would have stood, Whigs, 16, Dem. 2.

Since the above was in type we learn that Jacob Tappan, whig, is Sup't. of Moriah.

Clinton County.

AUSABLE.—For the first time in several years this town has elected whig officers.—The entire whig ticket was elected by majorities ranging from 60 to 150. Ausable is a whig town and has only been lost by divisions and jealousies among whigs and between localities. The late victory was complete and we trust will be permanent, as it may be by proper care. That town can certainly have no better set of officers than those now elected, headed by one of the best business men in this section of the state.

The Siberian Region.

Northern New York has hitherto been little regarded at Albany, politically, or otherwise, but its boundless wealth begins to be known and appreciated by a few. S. H. Hammond of the Albany Register has made extensive explorations of these Western Wilds, and the following, which we commend to our readers, is from actual observation.—[Ed. Rep.

The Racquett River.

"The same committee, Mr. HALSEY in the chair, considered the bill for the improvement of the Racquett river"—Senate proceedings of Monday.

The Racquett is one of the most beautiful rivers of the wild regions that are spread out in the northern part of the State, regions almost as secluded and little known, or thought of by the people of the State at large, as are the slopes of the Rocky mountains. Every body has a sort of floating idea that there are vast tracts of land laying between Champlain, the mountain ranges that line Hudson, the St. Lawrence and the valley of the Mohawk. They have an imperfect notion of a broad sweep of country, embracing portions of Clinton, Franklin, Essex, Hamilton, St. Lawrence and Herkimer counties, where rocks and mountains are piled up in cold sterility, where the moose, the panther, wolves and deer dwell, and where trout abound, but where man can hardly subsist, and which contains nothing to minister to progress or advance civilization. There never was a greater mistake made. Those regions are high, and in winter, cold and snowy, but they possess immense wealth; vast forests of timber are spread out all about the region of country where the rivers, and especially the Racquett, take their rise.

The mountains that stand up in seeming desolation furnish inexhaustable supplies of iron ore, and every where are the facilities for converting it into a shape for the use of man. There is no county in the State, and hardly in the Union, containing a larger amount of mineral wealth than does Essex. Franklin, Hamilton, and Clinton also possess an immense amount of ore, while the forests, that stretch away into the wild interior, are capable of furnishing an immense amount of lumber and timber which lack only the facilities of being transported to market.

In the region drained by the Racquett, is an immense amount of pine, hemlock, and spruce timber, now utterly valueless, because the obstructions in that river prevents the floating of either the logs or lumber down to market. Some three or four miles above Tupper's Lake, is what is called 'the driftwood,' a Red River raft in miniature, which completely shuts out a well-timbered region, containing hundreds of thousands of acres. This raft (we speak from recollection) may be some fifty rods in length, in a short bend in the river, over which the hunter drags his boat, or around which he carries it. We were there last fall, and while our guide was hauling his boat over the bridge of timber, we took a survey of the locality with a view of seeing how this obstruction might be overcome. A canal of half of a mile in length across a point made by a sharp angle of the river, would open a free passage for logs or lumber, and that without any necessity for locks or masonry. Or the driftwood might be removed. Either of these might be accomplished at an expense insignificant, when compared with the wealth it would create, and the vast amount of lumber it would open to the market of the East. The removal of this raft would give an outlet to the timber and lumber for fifty miles along the Racquett river, and around Long lake and the Racquett lakes. We know of no place or manner in which the amount asked for ($10,000) could be so profitably expended as on the Racquett River.

It is difficult for men who have not visited, and for themselves seen those northern and wild regions to comprehend their value. Thousands and hundreds of thousands of acres are sold and resold for taxes, made a sort of barter to be thrown in to make up the difference in bargains about other matters, nobody seeming to regard them as of any particular worth. Everybody seems to look upon them as a barren and rocky desolation, spread out, there only to furnish a source for the rivers and a hiding place for wild animals. Rocks are there, hills and mountains in abundance, doubtless, but there are too lakes and streams, the most beautiful the eye of man ever looked upon. Mineral wealth and the means of conveying it to practical use are there. Timber, consisting of pine, spruce, hemlock, in abundance, is there, waiting only for the means of being brought out to market. Water power, in any amount, is there. The time will come when these despised regions will be teeming with busy men, hardy miners, lumbermen, mechanics, and they will pour into the eastern markets an amount of products of the mill and the forge that will astonish many who now regrad that portion of the state only as the field of the sportman and the resort of game.

WM. PITT FESSENDEN.—The new Whig Senator, from Maine:—

The Bangor Mercury, in congratulating its readers upon the election of Mr. FESSENDEN to the Senate of the United States from the State of Maine, speaks thus glowingly of his character:—

Mr. Fessenden will worthily represent Maine in the United States Senate; Taking together the soundness of his views his power as a debater, and his clear and full intellect, he will be the leading man from New England in that body. He will be brave, but he will be prudent. His constituents will not be called to blush or fear for him. They will find him doing his duty to himself and them in his high place—

"One of
A cold and constant temperament,
Not quickened into ardent action soon,
Nor prompt for petty enterprise, but bold,
Fierce when need is, and capable of all things."

He will take his stand in the national councils by the side of Seward, and of Washburn, and the few who dare, in spite of all obloquy, pursuing a hopeful and honest line of duty, pointing the country to wise and noble progress, apprehending the high destiny of the American people, and holding, however others may waver and falter, an undying faith in the Republic. With these men Mr. Fessenden will stand. One hundred guns, as we write, are firing in honor of his election. It is honest and not misused powder.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HOGS!—The running at large of horses, cattle, hogs and geese, had become such a nuisance that the Electors, on Tuesday, were compelled to pass an ordinance imposing a fine of $2 50 upon any person suffering either of the above animals to run at large, to be sued for by the informant. The owners of hogs suffered to annoy their neighbors please to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

Irishmen Read!

Where are the damning Handbills and newspaper articles headed as above that we are accustomed to behold in the Pierce Organ here about election times? A democratic U. S. Senate has passed a law to organize Nebraska, but foreigners are not permitted to vote as heretofore in like cases. And a democratic House has passed a Homestead Law, excluding from its benefits all foreigners not now naturalized!

Ho! Ye Pierce Organ and Pierce democrats, arouse! Dont you see that catholics and foreigners are in danger? Out with your handbills, only in place of 'rascally whigs' let them read, HYPOCRITICAL PIERCE DEMOCRACY."

TROUBLE IN N. H.—The Boston Custom House has been assessed to the tune of seventeen hundred dollars, to save New Hampshire! What can this mean? Can it be that there is any danger of the Administration losing Pierce's own State?

Election in that state comes off next Tuesday.

Of the Whig Senator just elected from Ky. the Rochester American thus speaks:

Hon. J. J. Crittenden.

There are very few men now living who have performed such great and valuable public services as Mr. CRITTENDEN. He has recently for the sixth time been elected to the U. S. Senate by the Legislature of Kentucky. As the intimate friend and colleague of Henry Clay, he enjoyed the fullest measure of that great man's confidence and love, while in their own State he shared with his illustrious friend the regard and attachment of the Whig party.—In the Senate they always acted together for the welfare and glory of the country. When in 1842 Mr. Clay formally retired from that body, his place was filled, so far as any successor could fill it, by Mr. Crittenden. Gen. Harrison when he came into the Presidency, called Mr. C. to his Cabinet, and in 1850 Mr. Fillmore in like manner availed himself of his counsel to the eminent satisfaction of the public. As an orator, statesman, and legislator, it is not going too far to say that he will find, if any equal, certainly no superior in the Senate; and as a Whig it may well be claimed that if there be one whose escutcheon bears no shadow of blemish or stain, he is that man.

Local Correspondence of the Republican.

JAY, March 4, 1854.

MR. TARBELL:—The opinion has been expressed by many individuals, that no town of an equal number of inhabitants in the Northern, or even in any other part of the State, has given so much in the way of Donations to ministers within the year as the town of Jay. The last of the season closed yesterday. It was given the Rev J. W. Sawyer, and was one of the finest affairs I ever witnessed. These things, whatever objections some may utter against them, are attended with substantial benefits, especially in a county subject to "upheavals" like that lying on and along the two branches of the Ausable. Not the least of these is the reinstating community on its ancient base of peace and harmony. Not only so, cold and dull humanity becomes quickened into newness of life, and a new spring tide to the "genial current of the soul." Taken altogether, the people of Jay having been the means of doing good, by being not only just but generous, are comparatively happy.

The amount of the donation to Elder Sawyer is $250. With the donations previously given to other pastors, the sum total is $550.

Of course, the intention is not to underrate the liberality of our neighbors, for it is well known that in this same way they have been and are still doing much to lighten the hearts and strengthen the hands of those who are striving to do them good.

Yours, truly, &c.

Kindness to a Pastor.—A Donation Visit.

The undersigned, regarding it appropriate to make an expression of gratitude for benefits received, would thus publicly acknowledge the demonstration of the friends of Jay and vicinity in their donation visit of the 1st. inst., as also that of the children on the 2nd, amounting to two hundred and fifty dollars, by far the greatest portion of which was cash. The friends at Ausable Forks and Wilmington will please regard themselves as included in the number to whom grateful acknowledgements are tendered; and also the young friends on Torrence Hill who, to show respect in the most lasting manner, presented an album bed quilt, valued at twelve dollars, full of mottos and sentiments pure and evangelical, all of which, we hope, may be transcribed from the drapery that bears them, though written with indelible ink, and inscribed upon the fleshy tablets of our hearts, as with a golden pen and the point of a diamond, engraven as in a rock forever. Thanks to all, young and old, men, women, and children, for the sympathy and kindness exemplified on the occasion.

Lines by a Friend.

An God surveyed his Cherub band,
He saw a vacant place;
There was a lyre which lacked a hand
Its golden strings to trace.

Though tone on tone in harmony,
Rose from that happy band,
Still to complete the symphony,
Was wanting one fair hand.

Then o'er the dwellings of mankind,
The Almighty cast his eye:
Some young and beauteous form to find
To tune that lyre on high.

He saw, and bade an Angel down,—
A messenger of love—
And from the world to call, a little crown

Obituary.

DIED, at Jay, Essex Co. N. Y. Jan. 30th, Mr. Adoniram J. Purmort, in the 37th year of his age. Mr. Purmort for a number of years was of the firm of J. H. Purmort & Co., carrying on extensive business in this community, and had secured the reputation of an active, efficient, and honest man in all his business transactions, and a strictly moral, benevolent, and worthy member in the community. His disposition was mild and peaceable,—his urbanity of manners, with an unassuming and modest deportment, presented him at all times a dutiful and obedient son, an agreeable companion, a faithful and loving brother, an affectionate husband, a tender and indulgent father, a warm and constant friend, endeared to all who knew him and were capable of appreciating his merits. For some three years Mr. P. was a great sufferer, from the nature of the disease which in the event terminated his earthly course. He sought remedies from Physicians, from the watering place at Saratoga, and from the water cure establishments at Brattleboro, Vt., and Glenn Haven, N. Y. but to no lasting good results. Death had marked him as his victim, though in early life, in the midst of prospect of usefulness, and when most of all it seemed desirable his continuance should have been prolonged. But although his prospects were thus blasted his sufferings intense, never was there heard a sigh or murmur to escape his lips. His last end was peaceful, and he was enabled to make expressions of his confident hope in Jesus Christ, which is most peculiarly consoling to the surviving friends. His funeral was attended by a numerous circle of friends and acquaintances, and a sermon suited to the occasion was preached by Rev. J. W. Sawyer, from Romans, 8, 18, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."

Obituary.

DIED, of consumption, at Port Kent, on the 5th of march, inst., Miss Minerva Snyder, aged 23, youngest daughter of Mr. John Snyder. The death of this estimable young lady has created a void that will long be felt not only by her own family, but in a wide circle of warmly attached friends. Kind affection had lavished upon a mind of superior natural endowments high advantages of education, and Miss Snyder was amply prepared for a field of anticipated usefulness. She bore the deep sufferings of a protracted and insideous disease with that patient and submissive resignation, which is sustained alone by a strong and well assured christian hope, and died in triumphant joy and peace;

The knell was tolled—the requiem sung,
* * * * * * *
And tributes from the heart and tongue
Were rendered to the dead.
The dead! Religion answers, "No!"
There is no dead—she cannot die!
A christian loft this vale of woe!—
An Angel lives on high."

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufactures. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

D. 1849, and with the usual power of sale therein contained, and duly recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Essex, in vol. LEANDER BABBIT'S
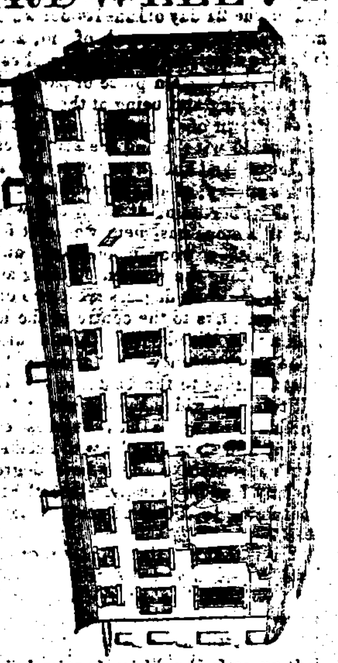
TRUSS OFFICE

The latest and most approved Trusses; Female Supporters; Do. with shoulder braces attached; spinal elevators for curvature of the spine and projection of the shoulder blade; Suspensary shoulder braces. This instrument is so constructed that it not only acts the part of shoulder braces, but carries the heft of the ladies' skirts on their shoulders; and hence remedies the evil consequent to carrying them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen, it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their peculiar mechanism and superiority over other instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are so well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to test them in this northern section of country, that I deem it not important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give reference as to any who wish to make inquiries.



Office at Keeseville in the building on the corner of Main and Front street, opposite the Bank, up stairs.

Ladies will be waited on at my dwelling by Mrs. Babbit, whose experience in adjusting braces and supporters qualifies her to give perfect satisfaction. 482—3m

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realising the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) CONDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

Hereditary Complaints upon the Children

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

THIS invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience by the most skilful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public as an efficacious remedy, it is also known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. In cases of Impotency, Hemorrhages, Disordered Sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluor Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

DEBILITY

TO FEMALES.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies would exist, where they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN.

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man, and it is the young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excess have brought on themselves Premature Impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and Shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequence of unrestrained indulgence of the sensual passions, occasioning the necessity of renouncing the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity. Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

it is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL."

Is put up in 8 oz. Pannel Bottles, and is easily recognised by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle, (to counterfeit which is forgery,) as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

☞ Sold for $2 per Bottle; Six for $8; $16 per dozen

Prepared only by S. E. COHEN, No. 3 Frank in Row, Vine Street, below Eighth, Philadelphia Pa; C. V. Clickener & Co., N. York, Wholesale Agents, TO WHOM ALL ORDERS MUST BE ADDRESSED. For Sale by all respectable Druggists and Merchants throughout the country. 495:1y

To Farmers.

Neat be your farms; 'tis long confessed
The neatest farmer is the best.
Each bog and marsh industrious drain,
Nor let vile balks deform the plain.
Nor bushes on your headland grow,
For briars a sloven's culture show.
Neat be your barns, your houses neat,
Your doors be clean, your court-yard sweet,
No moss the sheltering roof enshroud,
No wooden panes the window cloud;
No filthy kennels foully flow,
Nor weeds with rankling poison grow;
But shades expand and fruits in use bloom,
And flowering shrubs exhale perfume;
With pales your garden circle round;
Defend, enrich and clean the ground;
Prize high the pleasing, useful road,
And fill with vegetable good.

BY WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I belong to the most radical wing of the anti-Slavery party. I am conscious that our views on this great national subject meet with great repugnance from a large class of our fellow-citizens, and in listening to me all I ask is, that you should remember I am an American as well as you; that I have the same share with you in the honor and ultimate fate of our country; that all I have dear in the world is here; that my associations, my pride in the great names of the country, are the same as yours; that my hopes for the future are bound up with the fate of those republican institutions which our fathers gave us; and, believe me, I can have no motive, hidden, secret, or underhand, either against the civil or religious institutions of our common country, against its good name, its present or its future prosperity. The great national issue which calls us together to-night, demands of us all—as sons of those old fathers, who, thro' great peril, at the cost of great sacrifices, matured for us our institutions—that together, with mutual counsel and mutual confidence, we should grapple with the question which threatens to shipwreck the experiment of self-government in these United States. It is no personal ambition, no sectional or selfish feeling, no personal pique, no hatred of individuals no wrath against parties, no hidden hostility to sects that can make any honest man open his lips on the Subject of Slavery; it is mighty enough to smother all such considerations. Do see the justice to believe that, however I may deal with names or institutions that are dear to you, I am only exercising the dear-bought right, the most valuable our fathers left us, the right to think, and to speak. Other men may part with it when and as they please from considerations of delicacy to great men, to great parties, to great sects, to parchments and constitutions—but I barter it for nothing. (Great applause.) Every ultimate good hangs upon the assertion of the right, and before it assertion, for a good purpose, in a cause weighty enough to challenge its exercise, all considerations of personal delicacy, of the value of parties, and institutions, are nothing. Living, I shall assert it as our great New-Englander said; dying, I shall assert it; and whether unions or parties survive or perish, I mean to keep free lips, until they are dust. (Great applause.)—The problem of Slavery is a very singular one, in the aspect of our country in relation to the world. For the last seventy years, among European Governments, which we are in the habit of considering rotten and aristocratic—chattel Slavery has disappeared with two exceptions—Russia (though her Emperor is said to be laboring to abolish it,) and Spain, who is still the victim and the tool of the slave-holders' of her colonies. All others, and even Algiers, have got rid of it: although they retain aristocratic institutions, religion is not freely tolerated, but there is no slavery. This is the great current of the age. Let us now paint ourselves. For seventy years we have had institutions and a government which we boast is, (and which is theoretically) the freest in the world. It has proved itself so in certain great respects. It has advanced democratic ideas; our tendency has been to trust the people more and more. Religious freedom and universal suffrage are our rule. Universal education is still broader than ever. We have broken down the last refuge of conservatism in many states—we actually elect our Judges. We bring everything under popular control. There is only one except on to this picture, and that is slavery. White men cannot be trusted too much; yet the principle of slavery grows not weaker but stronger. Instead of 700,000 slaves there are more than 3,000,000; instead of a qualified pro-slavery sentiment there is a fierce and remorseless one. Instead of occupying a small corner Slavery stretches her hand over one half of our country; instead of hiding her requirements under elegant language, she stalks into the halls of Congress and there plainly asks that the whole policy shall be used for her perpetuation. Instead of creeping into a corner of the Capitol "with bated breath and whispering humbleness," she sits enthroned, the actual ruler of the dynasty of the Republic, and the moulder of its policy and fate. Let us look at the facts. Washington was a slave-holder, to be sure, but one who blushed for the institution of the Old Dominion; and when his slave escaped to New Hampshire, he would not have her reclaimed, if the reclamation would offend the sense of the people of that State. Such was the homage which his practice paid to the principle he asserted. His unsullied hand would not be stretched out among the White Hills to bring his slave back into slavery, unless the men among whom she had escaped thought it right she should be remanded. But, within four years, a man who stood on the steps of the Revere House recommended the men around him to smother their prejudices against sending human beings into slavery; a man who came from one of those same New Hampshire cottages, whose prejudices the Father of his Country, respected ere he dared—(Lost in loud applause.) Some may think I ought to let the dead rest.—But the great mischief of our country is that we cannot let our great men rest in their influence lives after them. If those who enacted the Fugitive Slave Law carried it into their graves with them, we might forget them, or at least their misdeeds.—They are plotting treason now at Washington, and what shall the small minority of earnest anti-Slavery men bring to bear on those who can afford to despise us, for they are certain of their game, and the majority is behind them. But feeble as we are, the weapon is still ours. There is something which a man dreads when he looks forward. The triumph of the present hour is not everything; he must leave his name to his children. Our press is weak, feeble, charitable, sentimental on such occasions. I have seen in an anti Slavery paper a eulogy on a divine who told his hearers to obey the Fugitive Slave law whether right or wrong a leading Baptist. They remembered everything but that, and that they forgot. If the men at Washington think they are to be sacred when they have passed the grave, then there is no motive that can be brought to bear on them. But, while we have a tongue, the man that has been a traitor to liberty, his son and his son's son shall regret to hear his name. (Great applause.) This relentless justice to the dead is the only hold the feeble party of Abolitionists have on the living, let us hold to it. That is the reason I still mention Mr. Webster, and blush at our common country when I look back at his conduct in that struggle. In Pennsylvania he said, "Support the Compromise, or coal will fall half a dollar a ton;" at Cape Cod, "Support it, or you will lose your fisheries;" at Lowell, "Support it or cotton will decline half a cent a yard." This was his bread and butter argument, as if we knew no higher. Was this the tone of the Revolution? We were told he was the proudest fruit of American institutions. This is what your churches and schools have produced! A man in Delaware fed and forwarded seven fugitive slaves. He was sued, and fined, $4,000, with $3,000 costs. When the sheriff had taken all, he said to him, 'Mr. Garrett, I trust this will prevent your acting so again.' And the reply was: 'I have not a dollar left in the world, but if you know a slave from the Carolinas that wants a breakfast or a lift to the North, bring him to me!' (Tremendous applause.) When the flower of our American institutions comes to such a man as that and says: 'Do act so and so, coal will fall half a dollar a ton, cotton half a cent a yard, and fish cannot be caught—' (Lost in peals of laughter.) This is what is called statesmanship, but we, 'raving Abolitionists,' as the press terms us, call it base. Another instance. A few days ago a fugitive from the oppression of the Old World appeared among us. When a man enters the presence of an Eastern potentate he lays a present at his footstool; and when a man comes among a great nation he usually offers it, as a present, the sentiment which he thinks will be most acceptable to it, as, when we go into a family we select a subject as consistent as possible with their feelings. Thus a man seeks out the real vital feeling of a nation, and endeavors to propitiate it accordingly. I blush to say that the man to whom I allude, following the course of great men who have recently visited this country, as his first step, makes known to the American public that he has no objection to Slavery, and would like to be a slave owner. Kossuth paid us the compliment of saying nothing about the matter. "Never mention a halter in the presence of a man whose brother was hanged." What a compliment these foreigners pay us! The first thing is to put the hand to the mouth, and the mouth in the dust and make obeisance to the slave power. They think, at least, that we are a slavery loving people. John Mitchel, a patriot and a Protestant, in 1853 comes to this country and expresses his willingness to be a slave owner. Thomas Paine, the condemned of the American pulpit, came here in our Revolutionary days, and what did he do? Joined an Abolition Society! Note the difference between the public opinion of 1776 and 1853, at least what foreigners think of it. In Revolutionary times there was a Dr. Spring of Newburyport, a Congregational clergyman, whose prayer every Sunday was, "Oh, Lord! overturn—overturn—overturn—till he whose right it is shall reign!" He cared not whether the despotism was domestic or foreign. Well, there is a Dr. Spring now, who ministers, I am told, to a rich, respectable, populous church, in one of the great cities of the Union, and he does not pray to the Lord to overturn anything (laughter) for fear he should, by some mistake, overturn the system of domestic Slavery. You know as well as I that the time was when the possession of an anti slavery sentiment did a man no harm. Jefferson has left on record some of the noblest testimony against the system. Abolitionists can cull some of their best arguments from the lips of Madison, Jefferson, Patrick Henry, southern men, not to speak of the leading men of the North. If Jefferson lived to-day, and The Herald printed what he wrote, he could not be admitted into Congress, nor obtain a post office. Out of 49,000 pulpits, at least 39,000 preach that the Old and New Testament teach Slavery. A professional man who espouses Anti-Slavery robs himself of practice. Our noble representative from Massachusetts, (I do not, of course, mean that icicle, Mr. Everett, but that human being, Charles Sumner,) (great applause and laughter,) even he, when he made his (you will all allow) exceedingly moderate and courteous protest against the system of Slavery, has found, as a legal man, his whole practice swept away from him. This is the ostracism of the nineteenth century on the subject of Slavery.

Thus have we gone down from the Washingtons, Jeffersons and Madisons of the Revolution to Franklin Pierce and Caleb Cushing, (laughter,) and we cannot go lower. (Great laughter and applause.)—What has produced this deterioration?—Briefly, the answer which the radical, Garrisonian Abolitionist makes is this. It is the compromise, the constant spirit of compromise in Church and State, individuals and parties, on all occasions. Because unlike all other questions, Americans have never been willing to walk this in a straight line, to seek and adopt a logical conclusion. You can trust an American anywhere, except where the element of color enters into the question. If good does not consist with man's rights, let it go to the wall; this is the grand ideal of our institutions—provided the man be white. (Great applause.) Our fathers made a great mistake; they should have said 'All white men are free and equal.' There is Mr. Pettit, of Ind., another straw to show how the wind blows; he scorns the idea that all men are equal; he there is no black man his equal. I hope, for the sake of the colored race, there is not. (Laughter and applause.) Were the three millions of black slaves white, I would not be addressing you to-night; your sympathies would outrun my fanaticism.—Were a child with sunny hair and blue eyes sold from New Hampshire into Slavery, how soon would her rocks pour themselves on the Carolinas to bring those blue eyes and sunny hair back again! How soon would the pulpits find out it was not a blue-eyed Onesimus that Saint Paul sent back. But this child has blue eyes and sunny hair—the other black and that is all the difference. When Byron plead before his peers for the Spitalfield weavers and got little heed, he wished the weavers were black, and then they would be cared for. If those I plead for were white there would be soon little need of my pleading. We point to Bunker Hill; our slaves would soon have theirs; but I do not wish for a servile insurrection. Gouverneur Morris, of your State, in the Constitutional Convention, maintained that Justice is always safe, and if the Carolinas would not come into the Confederation without Slavery he would let them stay out. In 1789 our fathers were timid; they used delicate phases; even to day we do not say 'Slavery,' but 'the patriarchal institution,' 'the delicate question,' and the like. In parts of Switzerland men do not speak aloud, lest they should bring down an avalanche; and thus we 'bate our breath.' We have compromised, and compromised; and now, we have the Nebraska bill! A camel, brought from Arabia into Persia, thrust his nose into the hut of a miller, who said, 'take it away, you ugly brute'—but the camel plead piteously that he was cold, and the miller suffered him. So, by degrees he was allowed to introduce ears and fore legs; but these, on a 'solemn condition' of asking no more. Scarcely had the miller turned around when he saw the camel's whole body sprawling over the floor; he remonstrated in a passion, when the camel answered, 'Oh well, if you are at all incommoded, do not stay on my account!' (Laughter.) Thus Slavery got her nose in, then her ears, then her fore legs, on 'solemn condition,' and presently you shall see her misshapen length sprawling over all Nebraska. These compromises tie up pulpit, press, and politicians, for they sanction it by oaths.—When Drs. Spring or Sharpe preaches Slavery to you, you cannot shake yourselves free because there is a clause in the Constitution which binds you to it, and this is an argument which its champions can use with effect. If we are never to say anything against it in its original ground; we have yielded half the argument; we have let ourselves down from the height of God's law to the level of expediency. Truman Smith opposed the admission of Mormon polygamy, forgetting he had sworn to uphold polygamy, or rather the violation of all marriage, in Carolina; and Drs Dewey, Spring, and Sharpe, teach that it is right to give back to the arms of her master the mother or daughter, who flies to a husband or a father! England handled Haynau roughly; but in the South we have a right to whip one and a half millions of woman.—We can be Christian at a distance; Choate thinks he has a right to interfere with Slavery in Cuba, not in Carolina; but George Thompson has the same right to interfere with Slavery in Carolina and Choate in Cuba. When Mr. Webster sought a contrast for the prosperity of New-York, though he might have gone no further than Virginia, he went to Brazil! Bancroft in his first editions, deals with Slavery as he ought, but he went to Saint James as Minister, and weeded the chapter! The Harpers, who should be able to keep a conscience, apologized to the South for an English slave story they published, and canceled it.—The slave looks to England for a melting influence. Great is the responsibility of him who stands as the channel of literature between the two countries. If churches stand in the way of freedom, I do not dislike churches, but I remove the obstacles; and if this country and Union, cannot subsist without Slavery, I curse the country and the Union of which this is the cement. (Great applause.)

Mr. Phillips concluded by arguing that the question should be handled not on any ground of expediency, but simply as a negro would view it—as a question of his rights. He was frequently and loudly applauded. Some of his allusions were received with the faintest possible approach to a hiss, which was at once drowned in applause.

Miscellaneous.

Early Courtship in Ohio.

NEARLY AS IT WAS TOLD TO US BY OUR OLD FRIEND EVEN A GRAY AS EVER.

If you can't get them that you want, you must take them that you can get, and that is how I came to marry Patsey.—Love will go where 'tis sent anyhow, and we can't help it; and the harder a chap loves a gal, the poorer chance he stands to get her—the thing is just here, the more he loves her the more shy and trembling he is, and he can't half tell his feelings to her if he tries—while the careless and unfeeling chap, that's got no more love in him than a hoss, can have a dozen gals after him at once. I have thought the heart was like mud-turkle's eggs; you dent the shell on one side, and a dent on the other side in the same manner will bring all smooth again. So with the heart; one girl makes a dent, it remains bruised till some other presses it, pushing out the old bruise and leaving a new one.

Well, well' accidents will happen; folks will laugh; the world is more fond of fun than logic, and they might as well laugh at me as anybody. So I agreed to tell you about my first courtship.

It wan't Patsey; but my first sweet heart was a proper handsome gal. I worked for her father. Ohio was all in the woods then, and everybody lived in log houses, except down in Cleveland, there was a store or two, and my three hundred acres, that is worth now one hundred and fifty dollars an acre, wasn't worth when I bo't it only three dollars an acre. Pshaw, pshaw! how times is changed! glad to get corn bread and common gravy then; had to go thirty miles—down to Chagrin—to mill, and always use I to go for boss instead of himself, for I only 'heafted' ninety pounds, and made a lighter load over a bag of corn on horseback. Let me see, I weigh eighty now.

Well, I was twenty-five years old, just about, and in love with boss's daughter, but always thought she felt a little above me, for I was not any taller then than I am now—not quite as tall as she was, anyhow; and was working for eight dollars a month, and had to dress in tow linnen at that,—You never see one of them loging frocks made like a shirt, out of flax tow, did you? Well, till I bought this blue coat when I married Patsey, thirty and five years ago, I never wore any but tow, and if it want Sunday to day, I should not had it on, for I despise 'stravigance and new-fangled flummeries, and thingambob noodles, round yer big hooses.

I was in love thirty-five years ago, head over heels in love, and never dared to say a word about it. Her name was Jerusha. I longed to tell her how my heart swelled and burnt for her as it thumped agin its 'chist,' but I could never screw my courage up to the pint—but I thought I would some day—or some other day. I'd been alone with her many a time, and had resolved and re-resolved on popping it right out, but the stillness was as awful on them 'casions as the roar of Niagara, and my heart would feel all over like your little finger does when you hit your elbow agin a thing accidental, a tingling fullness.

Cuss my luck, said I to myself, one Sunday night, as I cum home, from mill, after a three day's ride. Jerusha had a beau—a chap from town, dressed as smart as a dancing master. My, heart jumped into my gullet the minute I seed him. I felt down in the mouth, for I knowed I was a gone feller. He had on broadcloth. Talk of your new-fangled Gossop and Groshan houses now, but, folks in them days didn't have but one room down stairs, and a ladder to go up stairs; puncheon floors was good enough below, and oak shakes, split out by hand kivered the chamber floor. It was so in boss's house, and I slept up chamber. I want you to imagine two wooden hooks fixed up to hang a gun on, right over the hearth, on the chamber beam; I want you to remember my tow shirt, and I want you to imagine my feelings that night after I went to bed, for Jerusha and the dandy chap had the hull room below to themselves, with a rousing bright fire to spark by.

I couldn't stand the temptation to want to hear what they had to say to themselves.—Whisper, whisper, whisper! You may laugh at it, but it's the naked truth that I am going to tell, I have laughed myself at the same since. When I heard something pop like a kiss, by ginger, I couldn't stand my great heart-thumpings no longer. Curiosity and jealousy got the upper end on me; I wanted to see for myself. So I slid out o' bed, sitting flat like a tailor on the floor, determined to hitch up just as I sat, inch at a time, to the opening over the hearth, where the beam and gun hooks was. A cat couldn't been no stiller arter a mouse; but my heart thumped louder at every hitch, just as it will when a man goes to do what aint right.

Well, just as I had gained the right pint to look over at 'em, up tilted the peaky floor—down I went, tow shirt 'to gun hook—and there I hung blindfolded like a squirrel half skinned—right over my rival and sweetheart—I couldn't see 'em at all arter that—and it was more than ten minutes before the old hoss awoke to tear me loose; dangling around the fire. What! what! said he, got a spare-rib, ha? Let me down, said I, I got pretty well cooked anyhow, and I ain't been quite so raw since, in love matters. Lord, I never looked Jerusha in the face after that day, nor a gal in the neighborhood, for I could swear she told 'em all. That accident got my grit up to make a fortin.

I went off a few miles and married the first chance I got, just out of spite—and Patsey is worth all on 'em after all—and marrying is a lottery business. Then don't hang yourself (as I did) because you can't get a particular gal—but recollect your heart is like rubber, it will stretch a good ways and not break.

BLACK HAWK.

A letter from F. Holbrook to the New England Farmer, gives the following particulars concerning this famous horse:

After the meeting of the State Society, upon invitation of David Hill, Esq., I accompanied him to his place in Bridgeport, to see his celebrated horse, old Black Hawk, and his progeny. Persons who have ever visited Mr. Hill never forget his hearty hospitality and pleasant address. Though now considerably in years, Black Hawk feeds well, is very animated and vigorous, and as playful as a colt. Every precaution which good judgment would dictate, is used to promote Black Hawk's health and prolong life. His winter apartments are such as become a horse of his fame and value. He has a room some twenty feet square, high, airy and of healthy temperature, with the natural ground for a floor, sprinkled with clean straw, where he has liberty to roll, frolic, and do as he pleases. He passes at will from his room to a stable and manger where he is fed. He neither wears shoes, halter nor blanket; is not groomed, though kept free from filth by perfectly cleanly apartments; and his food consists of the best quality of hay, with but little grain. By means of this winter treatment, his blood is cooled and purified, constitutional vigor is promoted, and his life will probably be lengthened.

Stock horses of the Morgan breed, if kept too much confined and too high in old age, are liable from their great appetite and powers of digestion and assimilation, to be suddenly attacked by apoplexy.

At a suitable time in the spring, Black Hawk is shod, harnessed and exercised daily in a gig, nicely groomed, and fed more highly with grain.

Black Hawk is of a coal black color, has a heavy mane and tail, is of splendid conformation, and very intelligent. His pedigree has been often stated in print, and you are doubtless aware that he was got by the famous horse 'Sherman Morgan,' out of a sporting mare considerably in the blood of the thorough-bred. The experienced eye, in observing Black Hawk, readily, detects in him the Morgan qualities of compactness, substance, a full development of those organs which give great powers of digestion and assimilation docility and kindness of temper, combined with the oblique and high shoulder, liberty of limb and high mettle of the thorough-bred. His combination of blood is very remarkable; and it may perhaps be doubted if his like has ever been known for perpetuating the qualities of the sire so uniformly in so numerous a progeny. With due notice, Mr. Hill could assemble more than a hundred horses begotten by Black Hawk, all showing that uniformity of conformation and movement, almost incredible to persons not conversant with the facts—all possessing extra trotting speed, with docility, spirit, and that intelligence which readily learns whatever it is desirable to teach them; in short, with that rare combination of qualities fitting them for sporting, fancy or practical service.

THE CRANBERRY.—The cultivation of this berry is attracting considerable attention and by the kindness Mr Jacob Mansfield and Mr. I. N. Macomber of this place, we are enabled to give the following information from a circular of Sullivan Bates, Bellingham Mass.

"1. Select a situation for your Cranberry field on a clay soil, on such as is not liable to bake, or on a dark loam soil, or on all moist soils where there is a mixture of sand, mostly of reclaimed lands; such as can be made moderately dry, are well adapted to grow the Cranborry. In fact, most all soil that is natural to grow the Cranberry, (yet the first mentioned soils would be preferred,) I think there are portions on most of the farms situated in be Middle States, and their vicinity, that are well adapted to grow the Cranberry, and I should propose to all desirous of commencing the business, to put their plants on different parts of their soil, and by so doing the better soils may be ascertained. As far as I have ascertained, there are three varieties of Cranberry, viz:—The Barbery, the Cherry, and the Bell. I have never known of any other variety of the berry that would naturalize to dry soil except the Bell Cranberry: this species of the berry grows much in the form of an egg, it is inclined to grow in the wild state, on the borders of Cranberry bogs, spreading its way to upland soil; this species is much larger than the others. In its wild state, Persons engaging in the cultivation of the article, should commence with the last mentioned species, and by commencing with those that have been cultivated and naturalized to a dry soil, they will much sooner accomplish their object, and with much less trouble and expense, as the plants multiply and increase abundantly. Persons commencing with one or two thousand, will be able to obtain plants of their own raising sufficient to transplant acres, in two or three years.

2. Prepare your soil the same as for sowing grain, by plowing, harrowing and making your soil even—then mark it out in drills, 18 or 20 inches apart, putting the plants in the drills, 5 or 6 inches apart—hoe them slightly at first, till the roots be some clinched, and afterwards no other cultivation is needed. The plants may be expected to run together and cover the whole soil in two or three years. The Cranberry grown by cultivation usually yields from 150 to 400 bushels per acre; its fruit is two or three times as large as the wild fruit, and of a beautiful flavor; it readily keeps sound from the harvest time of it to the time of harvest again. The fruit is generally gathered in September—it is gathered with wire teeth rakes, made for the purpose—one man will generally gather from 30 to 40 bushels per day, with the aid of a boy to pick up the scattering fruit.

Persons wishing for Plants can have their supply of the subscriber—price $7 per thousand; for less quantities than one thousand; the rate of eight dollars per thousand will be charged. The Plants will be carefully packed in meadow moss, and well boxed, which will enable them to go a great distance in a fresh state.

The proper time for Fall transplanting is October and November; for Spring, from the opening of the same till about the 25th of May. Persons wishing for Plants, are requested to send their orders as early as the first of September, for Fall transplanting, and during the winter for Spring.

Col, Benton on Senator Douglas.—Some one asked Col. Benton to day why he had never pitched into the Little Giant.—'Mr. Douglas, Sir, Mr. Douglas, Sir,' said the Colonel; 'Ah, he reminds me of a story. A man having a fractious bull and desiring to kill him, was unable to reach him in his prancing and leaping. An old negro standing by asked his master why he was so anxious to hit the bull? 'Let him alone, Massa, and by and by he jump so high he break his own neck in the fall.'

THE STATE SENATE.—The Senators—thirty-two in number—are all elected at the same time, and hold their seats for a term of two years. By the constitution of 1777, which continued in existence until the adoption of that of 1821, the State was divided into four great districts, and the Senators elected in each were chosen by the freeholders for a term of four years. By the constitution of 1821, the State was divided into eight Senate districts, each district electing four Senators for a term of four years. The freehold qualification for voters was not required, and by an amendment to the constitution of 1826, universal suffrage was adopted. It is doubtful whether there was generally more talent secured when the Senators were chosen by the freeholders exclusively, than has been found among those chosen under the present system of universal suffrage.

From Washington.

If the principle of Squatter sovereignty is put in, or kept in the bill, the South will kill it. The South don't intend that German, Irish, &c., shall 'Squat' on the Public Domain, and keep Cæsar, Sambo, and Cuffee out. They intend all to have a fair and equal chance for settlement.

Douglas himself is now satisfied that he has made a mismove, and cut his own political throat,—but having passed the Rubicon, he cannot back out.—Cass edged him on, indirectly, by outside reports and then denounces the uncalled-for agitation created by the Northern Senator as if for Sourthern influence.

We only laugh to read in one of your contemporaries here, the Nebraska Bill is going through the House, under Richardson's lead, and the Previous Question. Why,—dog-days will pass before a vote is got on it. Nobody is very earnest about a vote, except Douglass, who expected it to go through both Houses, like electricity.

DETROIT.—Until the recent election, this city had been dem. by 800 to 1000 majority. The success of the whigs by 1000 maj. is ascribed to Nebraska.

A Question of Fact.

The legal effect of the Nebraska bill is neither to legislate slavery into the territories or out of them, but to permit the people to do as they please, under the provisions and subject to the limitations of the constitution of the United States.

This is what Mr. Douglas says in his New Hampshire letter, which we alluded to yesterday. The author of the Nebraska bill ought to know 'whereof he affirms' in this case at least. But is what he says true? By the Missouri Compromise of 1820, slavery was forever prohibited in the territory which embraces Nebraska. Mr. Douglas's bill provides for annulling the Missouri Compromise, and expressly says slavery may exist in Nebraska. If this is not legislating slavery into the territory, we confess we are unable to understand the meaning of terms.

But there is not wanting positive proof of the intentions of demagogues in Congress who have connected their fortunes with this new slavery agitation. A few days since in the Senate, with Mr. Douglas's assent, all the provisions in the Nebraska bill relating to the Indians, were stricken out.—Mr. D. said the House Committee on Indian affairs had a bill which would cover this point—Mr. Orr, of South Carolina, is Chairman of the House Committee on Indian affairs, and the bill which he has prepared has just been printed. It is entitled 'A bill defining the terms on which treaties shall hereafter be made with certain tribes of Indians and for other purposes.'—This bill provides that each family of every tribe or nation of Indians may locate a homestead on the following terms:

"Each single person over 21 years old is entitled to 80 acres; each family of two persons 160 acres; each family of three and over five, 320 acres; each family of six and not exceeding ten, 640 acres; and each family over ten, 160 acres for every five members; and to families who own SLAVES, in addition to the foregoing there shall be allowed, if less than ten slaves one half section (320 acres); if ten, and not exceeding fifteen, one section (640 acres); and for every ten above that number, one-half section (320 acres.")

This bill from the Committee on Indian affairs, is only an appendix to Mr. Douglas's bill, drawn up with the consent and approval of Mr. Douglas himself. The provision in the bill of the House Committee, it will of course be seen, offers a direct premium to the inhabitants of the territory to become slave-holders. Now, are not these demagogues guilty of false pretence—of impudent lying—when they tell us that it is no part of their plan to legislate slavery into the territory?

The more this question, so unfortunately and needlessly thrust upon the country, is thought of and discussed, the more it is reprobated and thought worthy of execration. There is not a single word to be said in its favor; not a single good reason for it has been advanced in all the discussions the measure has thus far called out.—There has never been a proposition made so utterly barren of merit, and fruitful of mischief.—[Troy Whig. (Silver Grey.)

THE LITTLE FOLKS.—Some time since we received a call from a couple of little girls and they said they had just committed to memory a pretty little piece of poetry we had published in the Republican the week before. If we shall see those little girls next week we are quite sure they will repeat to us the following, from the 'Childs Paper.'

"Awake, asleep, by night, by day,
When at my study or my play,
Although the Lord I cannot see,
His eye is always fixed on me.

God never will forsake his own,
He will not leave me when alone;
When not another friend is near,
May I remember, 'God is here.'

O, may I try to please him still,
To know, and love, and do his will;
Then will it joy and gladness be,
That God's own eye is fixed on me."

☞The British contingent for the defence of Turkey will amount to 20 000 men, with 40 guns; 250 picked men in each battallion are to be armed with Minie rifles, and brigade commands will be conferred on young colonels. The naval preparations are carried on with the greatest vigilance.

AN AMERICAN OFFICER IN THE TURKISH ARMY.—Our correspondent at Constantinople says; "A large number of Polish officers have been sent to the Georgian frontier to help fight the Muscovites. Mr. Bonfanti, of New York, formerly of the American volunteers in Mexico, has been sent to the same place, with the rank of major. He has also received the name of Nevlis Bey.—Eve. Post

A private letter from Kossuth, dated London, Jan. 24, and addressed to a gentleman in this country, concludes by saying: "You shall soon hear of a titanic 'work on our part; of our heaping Ossa upon Pelion 'with but our nails for tools."

MAP OF KEESEVILLE.—Our office is adorned by one of these beautiful and perfect maps. No man in Keeseville shou'd be without one. The following compliment is from the Plattsburgh Republican of last week;

☞We have seen a large and well executed map, or plan, of Keeseville, lithographed by Endicott & Co., New York—surveyed and published by Messrs. E. & D. M. Arnold, of Keeseville. The plan was made by actual survey in 1852 3, and bears evidence of great skill and patient labor in its production. A friend at our elbow, who is himself a practical surveyor, says the work reflects great credit on the Messrs. Arnold; and it must be highly gratifying to the liberal and enlightened citizens of that flourishing village. The names of the subscribers are on the map.

There will be an eclipse of the sun on the 26th of May next. It will be similar to the great eclipse of 1809.

THE WEATHER.—Apparently spring is upon us, but we shall no doubt have much cold weather, and severe storms.

SLAVERY.—Judging other people's feelings from our own, we think, in view of the meditated treachery of the South, and of the ambition of Slavery, the people will be disposed to look a little into the merits of 'the Institution.' The best thing we have seen is the Lecture of Wendell Phillips delivered in N. Y. recently, which we give on the first page. All our readers may not go the full length of the Lecturer in all his positions, nor do we, but the lecture will be found most assuredly readable. It is very certain that this government has been made the instrument of upholding and perpetuating a gigantic evil, and it is time the right prevailed a while. If Slavery cannot be kept off from free territory without breaking up the Union, then let it be broken.—We are for the Union and the Constitution, with all its Compromises and Laws, but we are for confining Slavery within its present limits and for restricting it by every power of the general government, instead of using that power for its expansion. Slavery has controlled the policy of this government from the beginning, and we are opposed to its domineering, propagand spirit. The free, Republican spirit of the country should hereafter assume the control of its destinies.

The Adamantines and Nebraska

We can well see that the adamantines have an object in view and that object is not the success of the bill, in going in for the Nebraska bill and we wish them success, but we are entirely unwilling to believe that they are at heart in favor of such a violation of faith. At least, some of their best men are opposed to it, and among others Dr. Brandreth, who has been a prominent and bold leader of that section of the democracy.

The following letter, which we take from the proceedings of a public meeting in Peekskill reported in the Hudson River Chronicle, explains itself:

LETTER FROM DR. BRANDRETH.

SING SING, February 28, 1854.

WATSON G. HAYNES, Esq. Verplanck's Point.

DEAR SIR:—I received your letter desiring I would address on Tuesday night, February 28th, a meeting of citizens to assemble at Peckskill, for the purpose of protesting against the passage of the Nebraska Territorial bill containing the repeal of the Missouri Compromise.

I have been one of those who have honestly believed that the agitation of the slavery question was calculated to weaken the stability of our republican Union. I was opposed to the agitation of the Wilmot proviso on these grounds but think I should have deemed it my duty, to have voted for it, in some modified shape, if I had held a seat in Congress, and been obliged to directly upon that question. And is not this the true position of a man true to his northern instincts and experience?

So it is also right to protest against the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and every Hard, if he knew what he was about would do so in this State. I shall be so engaged that it will be impossible for me to be with you on Tuesday night.

I am respectfully yours,

B. BRANDRETH.

AN ERROR.—We are informed that the democratic Assessor and Collector were elected in Ausable, instead of the whigs, as given in our last. Also Jonas Olmstead, Overseer Poor.

COUNTY SURVEY.—The Survey by Winslow C. Watson, esq., is published in the proceedings of the N. Y. State Ag. Soc'y for 1853, and for sale by I. A. Hasbrouck of this place. The survey deserves to be in the hands of every family in the County.

ST. LAWRENCE.—22 towns elect 10 Whig and 12 Loco Foco Supervisors.

ESSEX Co. N. Y. March, 1854.

The world seems all astir on the subject of the Nebraska Bill. Never has the public mind been more disturbed among us, or the excitement been more intense, than at this present time. Political distinctions seem to have been lost in our united abhorrence of the perfidy of such an act.—Protests are the 'order of the day.' On every side we are exhorted to protest against the consumation of an act so nefarious.

Protest! Yes, certainly, if such a thing has become necessary we would indeed protest in the name of heaven and earth; both which have an undying interest in truth and righteousness. But has it come to this? Are we to believe, on sober, second thought that any bill is likely to pass the Congress of the United States, repudiating a compromise which has been accepted, and on which history has immovably fixed her seal? Has the Congress of the United States then become so recreant to truth, so lost to honor, so destitute of the dignity of character, as to trample upon a sacred compact, to the inevitable disturbance of the friendly relations existing between the States, at the instigation of a hair-brained and desperate aspirant? Has not the author of this Bill, disturbed by the torch of truth abandoned again and again, the foundation on which he had rested its claim, to seek under some other covert and shelter for its deformity? Can such a Bill find favor with honorable men?

"Public opinion" had taught us to regard the free States as invincibly opposed to the extension of an institution, having for its basis the pure unadulterated element of despotism. The Bill, which has occasioned this excitement, not only trample with shameful levity, on a deliberate compact, to which all parties are in honor bound, but proposes to subject new territory to the curse of domestic despotism.—Will it look, then, to the free States for its support? Does not the world know that any representation, by whomsoever made, that it is the wish or intention of the states to abandon the Missouri Compromise, is a diliberate falschood? If such representation is made in their name, by any one clothed with official trust, it is a barefaced treason to that trust. It is not a mistake;—on this subject mistake is impossible, but a betrayal of the wishes and interests of those, who, by overestimating the integrity of the man, have invested him with an important, but brief dignity.—The free States will, without doubt, in their time give unmistakable testimony of their aversion to it.

Will it draw its support from the Slave States? If this Bill had covered debatable ground it might be expected to do so. But this is not debatable ground—has not been debatable ground for more than thirty years. Freemen have entered it, as a territory consecrated by the laws of our National Legislature to freedom. Will the Southern members give their support to a measure so outrageous?

We had been accustomed to regard their reiterated claim to chivalry as having some substance, some foundation on which to rest;—not as sheer arroganee,—a burlesque of what is great and manly. Can it be then, that in the face of a bona fide "contract,"—in the face of their brethren of the free States,—in the face of an attentive world,—and above all in the face of a watchful heaven, they will press to their bosom the Robber, and his spoils! Is such the chivalry of the south! Chivalry, north or south; the world over, spurns both traitor, and treason.

When C. Fabricius Lucius, a Roman Consul was at war with Pyrrhus, King of Epirus, he received a letter from the physician of the latter, proposing to take off the king by poison, and thus secure an easy and speedy conquest to the Romans; provided a suitable reward for his services should be given him by them.

Fired with indignation at so great baseness and perfidy, Fabricius, instead of entertaining the diabolical proposition, dispatched a message to Pyrrhus, warning him of his danger, and exposing the wretched miscreant to the just punishment of his treason. So perish the genus! Shall the Roman camp point with hissing, its brawny finger at this American Senate!

Are we to suppose that Southern Representatives extremely sensitive to reproach are willing to compromise their dignity, and permit their names to descend to posterity, associated with a baseness which every honorable man would spurn with loathing? Are we to suppose that members of Congress of mature experience and ability, will consent, from sectional feelings, to blast forever their fair fame in a business so unproductive of good as this? Heaven forbid! No, Southerners! Leave us some honest pride in the high bearing of your boasted chivalry;—something to admire in our political adversaries, lest uniting loathing to opposition, the fires of hatred burn toward our enemies, and kindle from thence exterminating feuds in the bosom of our dishonored and betrayed country! A measure so utterly destructive of a reasonable confidence between the people and the Government, must necessarily produce its legitimate fruits. Depravity must have far outgrown its original dimensions, to present at present such an illustration as this!

Protest! Yes, indeed; if it has come to that at last. We enter our solemn protest against an act so evidently unjust, so wantonly wicked; an act that strips us of the last shred of an honest national pride: An act that proclaims the Senate chamber of the United States vulnerable to a wretched bribe!

We protest against it distinctly, as being impossible to a respectable adherance to existing covenants, over which the seal of history has been long affixed. We protest against it, as in its nature at variance with the character, and economy of our political institutions, in which this nation has grown to a colossal station in half a century.

We protest against it in the name of those imperial statesmen, who, having wrought manfully the texture of our political basis, have ascended into history with an unsullied fame.

We protest against it in the name of truth, and its correlative, faith; by which a reasonable confidence is reposed in solem contracts among men;—and by which nations emerge from feudal barbarism to the enjoyment of civilization, liberty and wealth.

Finally, we protest against it in the name of a respectable national morality. COR.

COL. TARBELL,

SIR:—I observe that your correspondent, W. Lansing of Wilmington, after giving you a full and particular account of the success of a coalition in his town of Abolitionists and Free Soil Democrats, says. "You may conclude I reckon that this town is pretty well 'aroused' to the agitation of the Slavery question as the Whig caucus [illegible] attention to this subject, entire, trusting that neither the sad catastrophy alluded to will be persisted in, nor that the writer of this letter will "flummux" when he sees it in print particularly as there is no such office as Sealer &c., elective.

Essex March 11th 1854

Mr Tarbell Dear sir

We received your paper dated March 1 and found the names of our town officers except one.

We was supprised that you should forget to publish such an important officer as Sealer of Weight & measures I would say if you wish to publish it in your next that mr Luther K m. Clark was Elected by a unanimous vote The young man felt very much slighted when he found the rest of the officers names in print and his left out.

Ps Perhaps it would be well to publish it in your next he feals that if you dont apolige that he will comit suecide.

Town Meeting in Moriah.

MORIAH, March, 13, 1854.

DEAR COLONEL:—I send you the result of our town meeting which terminated in the Election of the whig ticket except the venerable Dudley Everest. After having held the office for several years, and defied opposition, the Hero of Crab Island is at last beaten for Collector by Wm. Mclaughlin, Hard, and Orson N. Tillotson, Abolitionist, was beaten for Overseer by Squire K. Wheelock, Hard enough, by one vote.

Yours with Respect.

Supervisor, Jacob Tappan; Town Clerk Alexander Campbell; Justice of Peace, John N. Clemens; Collector, Wm. Mclaughlin; Assessor Ebeneezer Collins; Commissioner of Highways, Aldin Blackmer; Superintendent of Common Schools Charles Sumner; Overseers Poor, Jeremiah Cook, Squire K. Wheelock; Inspectors of Election Dist. No. 1. Fayette W. Crane, Eretas S. Edgerton; Dist. No. 2, Milton McKenzie, Charles Sumner; Constables, Dudley Everest, Charles W Ensign, Willis E. Foster, Maynard Kidder, Julius E. Pangborn.

THE RESULT IN JAY.—We have received a communication from a friend in Jay, explanatory of the result of the election in that town. We have given the matter a little serious thought, and are inclined to the opinion that no good would come from bringing the matter before the public. Still, we may err in our conclusion; and as our correspondent is a man in whose judgment we place the most implicit confidence, we will publish the article next week if he shall still desire us to do so.

Town Elections.—Supervisors.

Wyoming Co, whigs 12, dem. 4. Jefferson Co., whigs 7, softs 9, hards 6.—Chautauque Co, whigs 19, dem 6. Last year whigs 14, dem. 10. Cattaraugus Co. In the Board of Supervisors there are 17 whigs, 9 democrats, 1 free soil, and 2 tied. Wayne Co.—The Board of Supervisors consists of 14 Whigs to one Abolitionist.—Last year 11 Democrats to 4 Whigs.

A FAVOR.—Will some friend in Lewis, Elizabethtown, Schroon, Minerva, Newcomb, Keene, and St. Armand, be so kind as to send us the entire list of officers elected in those towns respectively, with the politics of each? It would be a favor to us, and our readers.

WILLIAM GALUSHA.—Mr. Galusha is elected Supervisor of St. Armands—a town three or four years ago counting some 300 votes, but this spring polling over fifty. Mr. Galusha has seen some of the ups and downs of life—but has ever been one of the "Old Guard" in the whig army, and while he would make any reasonable sacrifice to preserve the integrity of the whig party, will not be backward, when the proper time comes, in asserting the great measure, dear to every Northern heart, of Free Speech, Free Labor, and Free Men.'

Exciting News.

The Spanish authorities of Cuba recently seized the Vessel Black Warrior, in the harbor of Havana. It is seized upon by the Filibusters as a subject of agitation, and it is said the Administration will aggravate the matter by every means in its power.

Europe.

Cabinets are manouvering; troops are moving, war is not formally declared, the Russians are concentrating their forces around Kelefat; if Austria declares for Russia France will let the Hungarians loose; Russia is rapidly extending her territory and power in the east; one of the most powerful countries between the Caspian Sea and Thibet has recently yielded to Russian sway; Napoleon stations a large army in the frontiers of Savoy, Austria and Prussia.

It ought not to be.—We learn that Mr. D. M. Arnold will lose $75, on his map of this village. After all the care, and pains taken by him to have a perfect map it is to be hoped no one of our citizens will be without one.

Personal.—We are informed that Hon. George W. Goff, has retired from the management of the Port Henry furnaces, and intends to erect Iron works of his own in the spring near his Ore bed at the above place. The Witherbees of the above place are reported to be making money faster than they can count it. They have a steam seperator put in operation under the care of Barney Moe, of Ausable Forks, which is said to work the best of any one of the kind in this section of the state. Barney is a fine fellow and a good mechanic.

A heavy Iron Co. formed in Albany and N. Y. is operating in Moriah. New and extensive machinery is being put up. Mr. C. Watson, is the agent, and their Ore bed is not excelled in extent in that town.

Moriah seems now to be destined to be the richest town in the county.

Judge McVines court commences next Tuesday.

Tappan, of Moriah, whose house was burnt recently offers his real estate cheap. It is a rare chance for a man with a little money.

☞The Republican is much concerned lest whigs should patronize the Old Settler. Better save his breath to cool his porridge with. Whigs will patronize the Old Settler and democrats too.—Old Settler.

The above is only like a man's telling a lie after being caught with a sheep on his back. The Old Settler knows we have no objection to whig's patronising him, if his neutrality could be relied on, but we do object to their furnishing a beetle to beat their own brains out with. If the Old Settler don't wish to "see his nonsense as others see it" he had better stick to his neutrality. All we have to say at this time is, that whoever patronises the Old Settler must have a capacious and tasteless stomach.

NORTH ELBA. TOWN OFFICERS.—Supervisor, Daniel Ames, dem.; Town clerk Daniel D. Osgood, whig; Justice Peace Dillon C. Osgood, whig; Assessors, Asaph Silsby, dem; Commis. Highways, Eli B. Perry, whig, Jacob S. Moody, dem.; Collector Milo Merrill, whig; Overseers Poor, Iddo Osgood, Samuel Dyer, whig; Inspectors election, John Thompson, whig, Pat. Whitney, dem.; Constables, Eagle P. Everett, whig, Jacob S. B. Moody, dem., Julius A. Avery, whig, Jas. Wells, whig. 46 votes cast.

There has been hardly snow enough for business in that town, the ground having barely been covered. Our informent is Mr. Milo Merrill, a good young whig from that town, who came out on horseback, a distance from this place of about 30 miles.—Politics don't divide the people of that town at town meetings. Caucuses and town meetings, however, are warmly contested. Parties in that town this Spring were designated Old Liners, and New Liners, or as we should say, Young America and Old Fogy. There is a Starch Factory in the course of erection in that town by a couple of gentlemen from Saratoga.

NELSON'S SPUNGING FUND.'—We have attributed seventy-five cents to that fund, unlike Nelson in similar circumstances, while his "predecessor" held the office we took care of the paper ourself instead of calling on our brother! Our object in referring to this subject is to protest against the democrats "billeting" their paupers on whigs. Finding that Nelson was wasting their "charity fund" for "Brean's rot-gut" they stopt that and created the 'spunging fund." We are not certain but Nelson will be Comptroller, or Secretary of the Treasury, yet. At any rate, he is having extensive experience in various kinds of 'funds," that would peculiarly qualify him for the school of such men as John C. Wright.

This music is by the first composers, and the words have been widely circulated in literary journals. Music can be ordered by Express at trifling expense, and we commend Messrs. A PRETTY SONG & CHORUS.—We give below the words of one of the pieces of music sent to the Editor by Wm. Hall & Son 239 Broadway N. Y.:—

THE HAZEL DELL.

1. In the Hazel Dell my Nelly's sleeping,
Nelly loved so long!
And my lonely, lonely watch I'm keeping,
Nelly lost and gone;
Here in moonlight often we have wandered
Through the silent shade,
Now where leafy branches drooping down-
Little Nell's laid. [ward.
Chorus.—All alone my watch I'm keeping
In the Hazel Dell, [ing,
For my darling Nelly's near me sleeping
Nelly dear, farewell!

2. In the Hazel Dell my Nelly's sleeping,
Where the flowers wave,
And the silent stars are nightly weeping.
O'er poor Nelly's grave;
Hope's that once my bosom fondly cher-
Smile no more for me, [ished,
Every dream of joy, alas, has perished,
Nelly dear, with thee.

3. Now I'm weary, friendless, & forsaken,
Watching here alone,
Nelly, thou no more will fondly cheer me,
With thy loving tone;
Yet forever shall thy gentle image
In my memory dwell,
And my tears thy grave shall moisten,
Nelly dear, farewell!

The "Hallelujah."

Mr. LOWELL MASON, the eminent composer of psalmody, is preparing a new book of Church Music, to be called The Hallelujah. Mr. Mason has not brought out any book (except his Musical Letters,) of which he was the sole author, since the publication of Carmina Sacra in 1841. Over three hundred and fifty thousand copies of Carmina Sacra have been sold, and it has been more highly valued and more extensively used than any similar publication. The books which in their day came nearest to a similar popularity were the Handel and Haydn's Society's Collection, and the Boston Academy's Collection—both by Mr. Mason. The first legitimate successor of such works must come before the public with peculiar interest; and such is to be the new book now nearly completed by Mr. Mason. He has for several years devoted most of his time to its preparation, during which he has spent eighteen months in Europe, under auspicious circumstances. It is understood that The Hallelujah will not follow in the beaten track of its predecessors, but that it will be new in something more than the name.—New York Tribune.

We have been requested by many friends to publish in book form a series of sketches which appeared in the Register during the past year, entitled 'Hills and Lakes,or a Tramp in the Chateaugay Woods.' It will be seen by the notice of J. C. Derby, in our advertising columns, that the work is in press, and will be published at an early day.—Alb. Register.

We are glad these pleasant sketches are to be given the public in a permanent and attractive form. They were widely read and admired as they appeared in the Register, and elicited high praise from some of the best critics in the country. There is a great deal of 'Up River' and 'Down River,' and 'Over the Bay' writing in our popular Magazines, but we have seen nothing in that line that would commence to compare with 'Hills and Lakes' by Mr, Hammond. —Troy Whig.

Mr. Hammond's "tramps" in our western wilderness have afforded infinite pleasure to many friends in this section of the State and his book will be hailed with pleasure.

From Washington

Correspondence of the N. Y. Tribune.

WASHINGTON, March 12, 1854.

Mr Cass is the most unhappy man in Washington. At first he declared that the account of the Detroit election must be a hoax. Now he says the party is ruined in Michigan by Nebraska, and that the Democratic party in every town in the State is already divided in two quarreling factions. He regrets the Nicholson letter, regrets the necessity of his explanations of it, regrets his position, and curses Douglas with a hearty good will as the author of immeasurable disaster to the Democracy.

Senator Houston says he has opposed this fatal measure from the start, and that, so help him God, he will oppose it to the end. He declares that it was conceived in iniquity, that it was fraught with untold perils to the peace of the country, and that disunion is at the bottom of it.

There was a great quarrel at the Pennsylvania Convention, which does not appear on the surface. Forney was there, with Nebraska resolutions in his pocket, which were rejected by the Comittee on Resolutions. A great rupture already exists in the party, covered by a very thin epidermis, which will not hold over one election, if it does so long. Douglas and the President consider that they have suffered great damage by the failure of their trusty Lieutenant to bring the Keystone State up to the mark.

Several of the Senators who toed the mark in voting for the repeal of the Missouri Compromise are considered as dead as poor Gardiner. The only difference in their cases is that Gardiner took strychnine and they took Nebraska.

The Nebraska iniquity stock is declining. You must not be surprised if Wheeler, Oliver, Maurice, and probably Cutting and Peck, and all the 'Hards' vote against the bill They are fully impressed with its perfidious character.

Obituary.

Died at Ausable Forks, March 7th, of consumption, Sarah R., wife of Alaric M. Bushnell, aged 36 years. She left two children—one about four, and the other eight years of age—to mourn the loss of a kind and exemplary mother. Many relatives and friends also mourn the departure of one who was greatly beloved by all who knew her. She lived a consistent Christian life for more than 15 years, and thus was found prepared to pass through the valley and shadow of death fearing no evil, asserting that "all was well."

She retained her reason to the close of life, and then calmly fell asleep in Jesus, to awake at the resurrection of the just.

At a meeting of the I. O. of R., Eagle Tent, No. 254, held March 9th, the following Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

That whereas, It has pleased an All Wise Providence to remove by death the beloved wife of our esteemed Brother A. M. Bushnell, to the home of the just above, thereby bereaving him of his dearest earthly friend and companion. Therefore,

Resolved, That we tender Brother Bushnell our fraternal regards and sympathies in his afflictions, and earnestly commend him and his motherless children to that friend for consolation whose tender mercies fail not.

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. TRUSS OFFICE

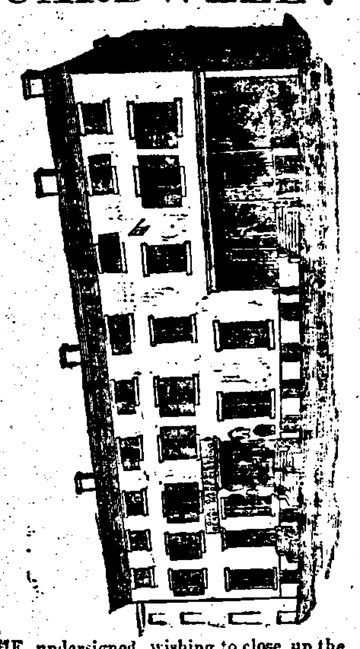
The latest and most approved Trusses; Female Supporters; Do. with shoulder braces attached; spinal elevators for curvature of the spine and projection of the shoulder blade. Suspensary shoulder braces. This instrument is so constructed that it not only acts the part of shoulder braces, but carries the weight of the ladies' skirts on their shoulders; and, hence remedies the evil consequent to carrying them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen, it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their peculiar mechanism and superiority over other instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are so well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to test them in this northern section of country, that I deem it not important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give references to any who wish to make inquiries.



Office at Keeseville in the building on the corner of Main and Front street, opposite the Bank, up stairs.

Ladies will be waited on at my dwelling by Mrs. Babbit, whose experience in adjusting braces and supporters qualifies her to give perfect satisfaction. 482—3m

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style. avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years. and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M. D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and 'with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.— Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public, as an efficacious remedy, it is also known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. In cases of Impotency, Hemorrhages, Disordered sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluor Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects, or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a Tonic Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

DEBILITY

TO FEMALES.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and create renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies would exist, were they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN.

That solitary practice, so fat. to the existence of man, and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVIOUS DEBILITY,

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excess have thus brought on themselves Premature Impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and Shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the sexual passions, occasioning the necessity of renouncing the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

it is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations, Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL,"

is put up in 8 oz. Pannel Bottles, and is easily recognized by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle (to counterfeit which is forgery.) As well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

Sold for $2 per Bottle; Six for $5; $16 per dozen

This certifies that I have for a number of years been acquainted with the composition and mode of manufacture of Morse's Compound Syrup of Yellow Dock Root. I have also been acquainted with its mode of operation in disease, and can say that in all respects it is admirably calculated to remedy that class of Diseases for which it was designed. It is especially valuable in Indigestion and all its attendant symptoms, it excites to healthy action the Liver, removes Torpor, and inactivity of this organ, and stimulates healthy action in all the system. As a Depurator or purifier of the Blood it has no superior.

TWO VIEWS OF LIFE;

Or, the Living and the Dying

[FOR THE OLIVE BRANCH BY PRINCE PRINGLE.]

'Let thoughtless youth its seeming joys pursue.
Soon will they learn to scan with thoughtful eye
The illusive past and dark futurity."
H. K. White.

Two men stood upon the bank of a river. On the head of one of them the hoar frost of years had gathered. The other exulted in the vigor of early manhood.—The older was in the act of disrobing himself, preparatory to entering a small canoe, that was to bear him across a wide expanse of waters, to a shore but dimly seen in the distance. He paused for a moment, and turned towards his companion. 'Farewell!' said he, as he affectionately pressed the hand of the other. "We must part for a season; but it will only be for a short season; for you know that you are soon to follow me to the land whither I am going.'

Tears gathered in the eyes of the younger. 'We shall miss you much, my friend and father,' said he. 'We shall miss much the arm that has so often helped us across the sloughs of the valley, and up the rugged hills over which we have travelled together.'

'He who conducts himself aright,' replied the old man, 'will never want for an arm to support him and help him through all the difficulties of life. Arms far more potent than mine will uphold him in all his ways.'

'But, father, it is a very pleasant land you are leaving,' said the younger.

'A land of clouds and storms,' replied the other.

'A land that yields many a beautiful flower,' continued the younger.

'And many a prickly thorn,' added the older.

'Sweet is the murmur of its rills, and refreshing are its gentle dews and its vernal showers.'

'And harsh and loud is the roar of the cataracts, and wide the desolation of its sweeping floods.'

'You will leave behind you, father, many a faithful and affectionate friend.'

'And many a wily and vindictive foe.'

'Those friends will bewail your absence.'

'And those foes will rejoice at my departure.'

'Many shall pluck fruit from trees of your planting and bless you.'

'Many shall tread upon the thorns I have strewed and curse me.'

'You leave behind you many a proud monument that will perpetuate the memory of your wisdom and virtue.'

'The old man heaved a sigh as he replied: 'They will perpetuate the remembrance of my folly and infirmities.'

'To cheer you in this solemn parting hour, turn, father, and take a last look at those monuments; and listen to the sounds of admiration that comes from the crowd who are surveying them with delight.'

'Alas!' replied the old man, 'they can afford me no pleasure in the retrospect.—They are composed of mouldering materials; and already I see in them signs of decay. As I gaze upon them, I fancy, too, that I hear issuing from the midst of them sounds that are far from cheering to my heart. They seem to be sighs of murdered moments, and the groaning of souls that perished while I was amusing myself with the erection of those frail and perishing monuments.'

'Look, then, at the beautiful mansion you are leaving. Many a happy scene have you witnessed beneath its roof.'

'And many a painful scene of sorrow and suffering.'

'Many a joyful echo has reverberated within its walls.'

'And many a wail of woe'

'Of many a good deed have those walls been witnesses'

'And of many—very many an evil one.'

'Consider, father, the hoarded treasures within them, and the costly raiments that hang around the apartment you have left'

'Those treasures have been too highly prized, and the value of those raiments have been over-estimated. Already the gold is cankered and the raiments moth-eaten. Look at this little boat. Not a particle of those treasures—not a thread of those raiments, can I take with me into it.'

So saying, he began to divest himself of the robe which was wrapped loosely around his frame.

'Stop, father,' said the younger. 'Do not cast aside your robe. Chilly are the waters over which you are about to pass.'

'More chilly is the land I am leaving,' replied the old man. 'Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither'—For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.'

He threw off his robe and stepped into the boat. It darted from the shore. A dark mist arose behind it. The younger man stood for a time gazing on the mist; but his vision could not penetrate it. The form of his old friend was hid forever from his view. He dashed a tear from his eye, and turned away, a more thoughtful man than he had ever before been.

O when the glare of day is sped,
And calm beneath the arming star,
Reflection leans her pensive head,
And calls the passions to her solemn bar,
Reviews the censure rash; the hasty word,
The purposed act too long deferred,
Of time the wasted treasures lent,
And fair occasions lost, and golden hours misspent.

O! in that hour be mine to know
While fast the silent sorrows flow,

Selections from the American Messenger.

Do You Obey Your Mother?

Charles T——was the son of a poor widow in the city of N. B. He and a younger brother were her only earthly comfort and and care. But when about ten years of age, he began to go with wicked companions, and yield to their wishes in disobedience to his mother's commands.—Charles loved her, yet when tempted to do wrong forgot her kindness, and the grief he would occasion. Like all habits, good and evil, disobedience became stronger every time he was guilty of it; and sins which were once thought of with dread, Charles, before he was twelve years old, committed boldly.

One morning a police officer, whose business it is to arrest criminals, called at his humble home and took him away to be tried for stealing. The little fellow cried, and so did his lonely mother. After he was found guilty, it was decided to send him to the 'Reform-school' in a distant city. The next news Charles' mother had from him, he was very sick. An epidemic prevailed in the institution, and he was among those most dangerously ill. A benevolent man gave Mrs. T——money to pay the expenses of a visit to her sick boy. When she arrived at the large building in which he was confined, she entered a room where several lads were lying on their small beds, in pain, with no mother to watch over them. She looked around for the familiar locks of hair above the pale face of her son. But she sought in vain for the one for whom her heart was yearning. Then an attendant came and told her that he was too ill to be there; he was in another room.

The weeping mother hastened to the apartment, and in a moment she saw the emaciated features of her Charles. It was a sad and affecting meeting. After she had talked with him until her tears fell on his feverish forehead, she unfolded a little handkerchief, and said it was his brother's at home.

'Oh, mother,' exclaimed Charles, 'lay it on my breast; I want it near my heart.' And soon he added, 'Does brother mind you, mother?' 'Sometimes,' she replied. 'Oh, tell him to obey you always, always; if I had done so, I should not be here.'—And he buried his tearful face in the bedclothes, and sobbed,

Mrs T——saw that Charles must die, and begged permission to stay all night in the room, and sleep on the floor, or watch by his side. But this was contrary to the rules of the institution, and she left him with a breaking heart. In the morning he was delirious, and soon after died. The same kind gentleman who helped the widow when she went to see Charles, sent for the body; and last autumn, as the leaves were dying, it was laid in the grave, upon which for the first time the snows of winter have fallen.

Think of Charles, and of what God said amid the thunderings and flames of Sinai: 'Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.' P. C. H.

The Card and the Little Girl.

As I was at work one morning in my garden, my little daughter, six years old, was standing near me, leaning against the wall under the shade of the quince-trees. She seemed to be in a meditative mood.

'Father,' said she at length, 'did you see that card in the Sabbath-school room which says, 'If sinners entice thee, consent thou not?' 'Yes,' I replied, 'and do you know what that means?' 'If a wicked person tells you to do something wrong, not to mind them,' was her prompt reply. 'Where is that verse found?' I asked. 'In the Bible.' 'Who gives us such instruction?' 'God,' she replied with solemnity. 'Ought we not then to be very careful to remember it?' 'Yes, sir,'

What an important lesson had been taught this little child from that silent card, as it hung against the wall—a lesson which, without any interpretation, she well understood, and doubtless always remember. May she, by the grace of God, be ever inclined to practise it. How easily, and by what simple means, may precious truth be sown in the heart, of a child, that by and by may bring forth fruit to life eternal.

MISSIONARY INTELLIGENCE.

The Monthly Missionary Meeting, at the Tract House, was held Tuesday afternoon at 3 P. M. The Rev. G. W. Wood, Secretary of the African Board, communicated intelligence, of which the following are some of the items:

Greece.—King (Dec, 23) writes that he is going on with his work as usual, and his Greek service is pretty well attended. All was quiet in Athens at that date.

Turkey—The Jews.—Messrs. Parsons and Morgan have become established, and entered on their work in Smyrna. The Jewish field in that city is a hard one; but there is encouragement in an extensive preparation for Spiritual influences and results.

The American Mission—Mr. Ladd reports that in Smyrna, most of the Church members having removed from the city, the congregation is small. New hearers however, occasionally come in.

In Constantinople, the Female Boarding School has a larger number of pupils than ever before, and the religious interest continues. Its assistants, and those of the Seminary at Bebeck, are greatly lo[illegible] applications are rejected every week; but candidates for the ministry, and pious youth they cannot send away. 'Great events,' says Mr. Hamlin, 'must be near, either for the advancement of the missionary work in Turkey, or for testing it more severely. Should Russia fail in her designs, an immense work will be thrown at once upon the churches; and the time to do it may be very short.'

Mr. Everett (Nov. 24) confirms the intelligence of the beheading of a Turk at Adrianople, for declaring his faith in Christ. 'They beat him terribly, but with his last breath he held to his opinions, and said, 'I die for Christ.'' There are said to be many of the Mahommedan sect to which that man belonged, who are secretly believers in Christ, and wish to have intercourse with the Protestant American.

Asyrian Mission.—Dr. Lobdel, Dec. 2, says, the cause of truth has 'received a great impetus,' in Mosul, during the last year. There was never more reason for encouragement. The nominal Christians are more and more impressed with the excellence of the 'new way.' Old stories to the Prejudice of the missionaries die away without an echo. The service at the dispensary is for Christians; yet the great majority of hearers are Moslems; and although the distinctive doctrines of the gospel are plainly preached, they listen calmly and attentively. No alarm is left from them. The people are much excited by the war with Russia. A short time since, the Christians were in much fear of an outburst of the Mohammedan fanaticism. The chief Moslems carried huge dirks in their bosoms; and it was not until after an order came from Constantinople enjoining the Pasha to see that foreigners and native Christians had full protection that the daggers were laid aside, and the trembling christians regained their courage. A Jewish Rabbi has been brought before the Kadi (chief judge,) on a charge of having four years ago reviled the Prophet! The Kadi wished to release him, but, the Ullema, (Doctors of the law) threatening to kill him he Pilate like, consented to the poor man's death. The Ullema are awaiting necessary order (which probably will not be sent) from Constantinople to for his execution.—Dr Lobdell has frequent visits from a Moollah, (Mahommedan priest,) once a Syrian priest, who is anxious to profess himself a christian, but is deterred by the certainty that it would cost him his head. Last summer, a woman was hung for reviling Mohammed; and at the date of Dr. Lobdell's letter, a Moslem was under sentence of death for the same offence. These cases, with the case of decapilation at Adrianople, Mr. Wood remarked, we may hope have been permitted, in Divine Providence to occur at just this time, to concentrate the attention of Christian nations and governments on the question of liberty to Moslems who embrace Christianity. It is not to be supposed that the Christian nations which support Turkey, will allow such enormities to continue. Severe as may be the struggle with its Mohammedan subjects, the result will probably be an extension to those born Mohammedans, of the religious freedom granted to foreign and native Christians and Jews, and the removal of the few restrictions under which the latter still remain. They will never embrace the Romish or Oriental form of Christianity,—for to that the Mohaminedan mind is altogether opposed; but to Evangelical Protestant Christianity, they have no such dislike.

Syria.—Mr. Benton, who is spending the winter in Aleppo, finds that delightful changes have taken place there, since he labored in the city five years ago. Then, the existence of Protestantism in the city was denied by the Governor; now, the organization of a Protestant community is authorized by the governor of Constantinople. Then, no Christian would rent him a dwelling; now, he dwells in the mansion of one of the most influential families in the city, and has access to all the communities. Moreover, the name of Protestant is synonymous with honesty, veracity and temperance, and the bare word of the treasurer of the station is as 'current with the merchant' as a promissory note. A large number of individuals have also heard the truth, and know what they must do to be saved. A small church has been gathered and many acknowledge the divine power attendant on the faithful preaching of the gospel.

China.—The Missionaries at Canton find abundant evidence that the seed sown in years past has not been lost. Books distributed from Macoa thirteen years ago, have been found in a village above Canton, more than 100 miles from the place of distribution, in the possession of a man who seemed to prize them, and was much pleased to see there a missionary. No letters have been received from the mission at Amoy so late in, date as the recapture of that city by the Imperialists. From Shanghae, we learn that the Baptist missionary, Mr. Roberts, was at that city, endeavoring to find his way to the camp of the insurgent army. He is invited by his former, pupil, the chief, who now aspires to the empire, to visit his headquarters, and accept the post of chaplain general to his forces—certainly an undesirable one in this present unsettled state of affairs.

India Ceylon.—Two members of the Batticotta Seminary were received into the church in August. Five pupils in the Female Boarding School have been admitted [illegible] at Oodoville.

[illegible] said that a Wesleyan, in Samuel Wilkes, two years [illegible] the Wesleyan Missionary 5s—fifty guineas a day—($94,000,) to the cause of Foreign missions! This gentleman commenced his business life with but a small capital and that borrowed, the Lord has prospered him, and he now seeks to "honor the Lord with his substance."

The receipts of the Board are nearly $14,000 less than they were at this time last year; while the expenditure must necessarily be at least $20,000 more than that of last year. There is danger, unless the churches arouse to a greater activity, that a heavy debt will accumulate.

Agricultural.

GOOD ANIMALS.—The way to have them Mr. B. J. Harvey, of Adrian, Michigan, in a letter to the Country Gentleman, giving his experience in sheep husbandry, says:

"The greatest error that I committed, or that any wool grower can commit, is the disposing of some of the best ewes of the flock. And my advice now from experience is, if you are offered ten or even twenty dollars for your best ewe, don't take it.

"If the admonition contained in this brief paragraph were universally heeded by the farmers throughout the country, it would work a greater improvement in the general character of the stock than all the foreign importations can accomplish without it."

We do not under-estimate the value of blood. But what makes blood? Is not the judicious and continued inter-breeding of the best animals that can be selected? And no blood is exempt from rapid deterioration where the rule which has created it is reversed. Take almost any stock, keep the very best of the young, feed them well, and take good care of them, and in a few generations they will produce a tolerably fair breed of animals. Take the finest Durhams, Ayreshires, or Devons, kill all the good calves, and half starve, and half freeze the poorer ones which are kept, and in a very few generations all the excellence of the breed will be lost. The same kind of management will ruin a flock of well selected South down or Merino sheep, or change the purest Suffolk swine completely to the reindeer or land-shark breed.

Let farmers resist the powerful temptation of the big prices with which the butcher backs up his soft persuasion to transfer to his cart the best calf, the best pig, the best lamb, and they will find a penny sacrificed, a pound earned. Thousands of dollars are frequently expended to bring across the ocean, animals not so good as a hundredth part of the amount would purchase before slaughter, from the shambles at home. Let all our farmers keep their best young animals, feed them bountifully, care for them kindly, and good breeds can be found in every pasture and every barn.—N. Y. Post.

Preserving Butter.

Farmers of Aberdeen, Scotland, are said to practice the following method of curing their butter, which gives it a great superiority over that of their neighbors:

"Take two quarts of the best common salt, one ounce of sugar, one ounce of saltpetre; take one ounce of this composition for one pound of butter, work it well into the mass, and close it up for use. The butter cured with this mixture appears of a rich and marrowy consistence and fine color, and never acquires a brittle hardness nor tastes salty. Dr. Anderson says: "I have cured butter with the above composition that has been kept for three years, and it was as sweet as at first." It must be noted, however, that the butter thus cured requires to stand three weeks or a month before it is used.—If it is opened sooner the salts are not sufficiently blended with it, and sometimes the coldness of the nitre will be perceived, which totally disappears afterwards."

To cleanse woolen from grease, scrape a little French chalk on the spot. If of paint, rub in spirits of turpentine with a flannel. If of discoloration from any acid, the color may perhaps be restored by rubbing a solution of carbonate of soda or magnesia on the part. In this case avoid use of soap with the water, as the former will restore the red appearance.

A Rare Chance.

☞ A young widow lady, 22 years of age, lately returned from Europe, has no incumbrances whatever, with a fortune of $40,000, wishes to form a matrimonial connexion with a gentleman; he must be five feet ten inches in height, or over; he must be between the age of 25 and 30; must be of an amiable disposition, industrious habits, and of a respectable family.—Money no object. Address Eva, Herald office, for two days, giving real name and address. All communications strictly confidential.

The foregoing advertisement is found in the Herald of Sunday. We think we know persons who meet the 'widow's' beau ideal exactly, and whose curiosity must be piqued by such a plea for a heart and home and 'no incumbrances,' by which is meant undoubtedly 'miniature editions' of the deceased. Besides she has made the tour of Europe and is undoubtedly ready to settle down to a sensible domestic life. Good looking young men, from 25 to 30 and almost the Erie guage, 5 feet 10, amiable, industrious and of respectable family, here is an opportunity not to be disregarded.—Money no object. We know young men who will meet all these requisites to a charm. The widow is sensible to 'feel[illegible]' That Protestean Operation necessarily excludes [illegible] hope to play the 'gay deceiv-

The Speech of a Veteran.

"The Boston papers filled with the proceedings of the great anti Nebraska meeting at Faneuil Hall. The last one made, was by the venerable Josiah Quincy, Mr. Quincy being loudly called for rose and said:

'What right have you to call upon a man eighty-three years old to address you?—Sir, I belong to other times. [A voice in the crowd said, 'No, the ears of the fathers 'are never deaf to the cries of the children.'] I came here this evening, not only unasked, but with a determination not to speak; and, Sir, what I shall say will be very short, and it will run in a different strain from anything you have heard. I suppose that you expect me to say something about the enormity of this attempt to repeal the Missouri Compromise. Not a word, Sir. [Laughter.] I shall leave that to younger and abler men—to men who are in the current of the times. I have been out of it for thirty years. Perhaps you expect also I should say something severe upon the politicians—the leaders of the slaveholding States. Sir, I have nothing to say against them. Many of them are great men—they are true men—they are faithful men—true to their own interests; faithful to their own power—And, Sir, they understand this to be the last act in that policy which has been in operation since the year 1832, and indeed, from the commencement of the Government. (cheers.) There were two projects from the begining. The first was to secure to the slaveholding States the power of controlling the Government at all times; and have they not done it? (Cries of 'Yes,' 'yes.') Have you had but one President in effect, chosen by the people, that was from the free States? The next plan of the policy was to extend the power of the slave-holding States, and for that purpose they bought Louisiana, and for that purpose they made war upon Mexico. And, Sir, what has been their success? They have opened, or if this law passes, they will have opened all the lands of the South that are capable of holding slaves, to the extention of their power. They have opened to themselves a market, and they understand their advantages. What is the consequence of opening this market? A gentleman recently from the South told me that slaves were in such demand, in consequence of the opening of this country, that he knew of one family of some ten or twelve negroes—men, women and children—some of the latter at the breast—and they sold for $600 a head, down to the very child at the woman's breast. A good active slave is worth at this time $1,800. This is the effect of their system of extension. Now the question is, how did they get this power? I said they were true and faithful to their own interests. I wish I could say the same thing, Sir, of the political men of the free States. [Cheers,] Sir it is not their strength, but our weakness; it is not their union, it is our disunion. And, Sir, they govern the people of the North by the distribution of the funds from the Treasury. They have governed it, and they will continue to govern it, until the people themselves shall understand what the motives of their leaders are, and put them down by force. Gentlemen, I said that this was not a new thing. In the year 1807—8, I was a Representative from this district in the Congress of the United States, and had a frequent and close intimacy, and great opportunities for acquaintance with the southern views and opinions, through the medium of a gentleman who was the best representative on the floor of Congress of southern feelings and southern principles. I mean John Randolph. At that time it was the question concerning the embargo. Well, Sir, who voted for the embargo?—Who supported it in this part of the country? I am sorry to mention it, for I have a great love for the Democracy of the country; no man more so. I hold that I am a Democrat, myself, and always have been. But no man could speak with more contempt than Mr Randolph did of the leaders of the Democracy, who were defending the embargo. I remember that he said to me once, in relation to a northern Member from the neighboring town of Salem, who had made a great speech in favor of the embargo. 'Why, Sir, is that gentleman a merchant?' 'Yes,' said I, 'and a great merchant.' 'He is eh? Why, Sir,' said he, 'he seems to me like a 'hog swimming across a river, and cutting his own throat 'with his fore feet.' [Laughter.] On another occasion, when I told him, 'If you go much further, Mr. Randolph, with the embargo, there will be a Union among the people 'of the North.' 'A Union,' said he 'a Union!' (Remember, Sir, I do not agree in the opinion, and greatly honor the Democrats, but I must tell it as it was.)—'Why, Mr. Quincy, we of the South can calculate upon the leaders of your Democracy, as we calculate upon our negroes.' '[Great laughter.] That was the thing, Sir, that was the feeling, and I do not believe, they care one farthing at the South for this, or other meetings of the kind.—They don't like them, to be sure. But they feel toward them as we should toward a boy with a cracker in the streets. They don't like the annoyance, to be sure, but as to fear, they have none. The thing is cut and dried, Sir, and it is not passed at this Congress until we [illegible] her, do what we can. And glad as I am for the last time I shall speak to my fellow citizens in public, all I ask of the people of the North is to consider their own interests. Be united, peace at the last, and then you can get your due control in the affairs of the nation, and you want no [illegible]

ALL HAIL NEW HAMPSHIRE!

This State is Anti Administration in the lower House by "from 10 to 12 majority." The Senate is Administration by 7 to 5. If this does not insure two Anti-Administration U. S. Senators, it is certain that Administration Senators cannot be elected. Hurrah! Hurrah!! Hurrah!!!

We had the honor of giving the first news from N. H. last week in this village, and we think in the county, by way of a Telegraphic Despatch to the Malone Palladium.

Our drummer has kicked up such a disturbance among the type and outs over this N. H. election, we are compelled to put him in below to beat the cheers.

Again—All Hail N. H.

Self Government.

The pretense that the Nebraska bill is based upon the above principle is a cheat and a fraud. It is so based only as to Slavery, and as to that, so as to render its adoption almost certain.

1. The bill provides not for the election by the people of the territory of a Govr. but for his appointment by the President every four years. Is this carrying out the doctrine of self government?

2. The Govr. is vested with almost unlimited powers in the organization of the government, He will be the creature of the President and the slave power. Is this carrying out the doctrine professed?

3. The Judges are not elected by the people, but appointed by the President.—They too will be creatures of the President and the slave power. Is this self government?

4. The organization of the territory is not confided to actual settlers as heretofore but to naturalized citizens. Many, therefore, may be disfranchized. Cheat No. 4.

5. The form of government and its workings are prescribed by the bill. It foreswears the very principle it professes to establish. It is a cheat from beginning to end and it is all a cheat.

But self government as to Slavery is as wrong as to any other enormous national evil. We might with as much propriety permit the flying Emperor of China to remove his court to and establish it in Nebraska, or the Exiled Bourbons theirs.—At these propositions democrats would rail of course tho' if the Pope of Rome should propose to remove his court there it would be different. Democrats have a natural aversion to Protestant Priests, and Monarchial governments, slavery excepted.—But suppose the people of Nebraska should legalise Polygamy, Robbery, Murder, Dueling, and Licentiousness; on the principle of self Government they could adopt these abominable crimes with as much of right and justice as to permit slavery to fasten its hydra head upon the soil. The truth of it is, we have no business to be neutral on a question embracing such monstrous evils as slavery. Neutrality on such a question—neglect to devote new territory to freedom by positive action—neglect to legislate slavery out of new territory—and to keep it out at every hazard, is as great a direlection of duty as to vote it in. The U. S. has no right to be silent, or neutral in the face of slavery. He who is not against it, is for it.

Mr. Blakeley's Resignation.

It is a pleasant thing to know that there are men still living, who are not utterly tainted and spoiled by the corrupting influence of party politics, and who do not cling to official place with a grip that neither honor or honesty can unclench. There has been one seat in the Senate contested, during the present session, and we rejoice to know that that contest has been brought to a close, in a manner as honorable to the parties, as it has been to the character of the Senate. Mr. Blakeley, refusing to avail himself of a wrong, voluntarily surrendered his seat to a political opponent, when it became manifest that that opponent had a bona fide majority of the suffrages of the people of the district in his favor. So far as Mr. Blakeley was concerned, a majority of the Senators with whom he had a seat, were his political friends, his party associates. They might have easily, in the exercise of their political strength, voted that he should retain his position; and in doing this, they would have been abundantly justified, so far as precedent could justify such an act.

But Locofoco precedents are the worst possible guides, to those who are looking for the right, and the morality of modern Democracy has about it but small saving efficacy. The Whig party cannot do what the Democracy can, and what it never hesitates to do, without injury to character. The Whig party, whether fortunately or otherwise, is regarded, on all hands, as one of principle, as being, in the main, honest The world expects it to act honestly, and when it trips, the world opens its eyes in astonishment, at the strange and unnatural spectacle. Not so with modern Democracy. It can perpetrate almost any political wrong, without exciting astonishment, or seeming to encounter retribution. When it trips, no matter how widely, the world passes along without stopping to denounce it, or to express its surprise. It merely remarks, in the language of the old lady, when her husband informed her that the cow had eaten up the grindstone, 'Well, I expected it, I told you so.'

In regard to this contested seat, the Senate has done right, and Mr. Blakeley has done a right and honorable thing, and the Whig party and the people will thank them for it. Mr. Blakeley is comparatively a young man. His constituents will not forget him, and he can look forward to 'the good time comming' for his reward for thus doing the straight forward and honest thing.—[Register,

[Correspondence of the Republican.]

The Troy Election—the statements in the Gazette of last week about as near the —truth as usual.—Mr. Plum, like Nelson and others of that ilk a particular friend of Catholics just about election time;—

TROY, March 20, 1854.

MR. EDITOR;—Having had my attention called to a long article which appeared in the last number of the "Gazette," the principal topic of which was the result of the late charter election in this city and the causes thereof; and perceiving that either through ignorance or otherwise he has not told "the truth the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," I shall esteem it a favor if you will devote a small space in your paper to the scribblings of one at the "seat of war," and who is cognisant of at least more facts in the case than are set forth in the article referred to.

It is stated that Mr. Plum's great crime was that he sent several barrels of flour to the Catholic Orphan Asylum in this city This is not the fact. No one thought of opposing him on this ground, and although perhaps some may have thought it a little strange that (considering the severity of the past winter, and the high price of provisions,) his generosity to the Orphan Asylum should not have exhibited itself till about two weeks before election, still we were charitable enough to impute it to his benevolence until some of the friends of the Protestant Orphan Asylum, relying upon his liberality to the Catholic Institution of the same kind, ventured to address him on the subject of a small donation in its behalf His reply was, "Gentlemen, I have made provision for THEM in my will." Generous man! we will try and hope that he will not cut them off by a codicil.

Mr. Plum holds a seat in one of our Presbyterian Churches, and until a few weeks before election was content to occupy it. But alas! "where our treasure is there will our hearts be also." He had sent the flour—he must now see that it was made up into the right kind of cake. He, of course, preferred "Plum Cake." For some weeks previous to the election, he was often observed attending church at St. Mary's Chapel, of which the Rev. Mr Havermans is Pastor, and from whose newspaper article the "Gazette" makes such voluminous extracts But Mr Plum's "great crime" (as the Gazette is pleased to call it) was not that he sent flour to catholic orphans. It was not that he attended a catholic church. It was that he did these things for the furtherance of political ends, as is conclusively shown by his declining to give anything to the Protestant Asylum, even though it was in part sustained by the church that he himself attended. It was to rebuke this venality in elections, that many who were his most ardent supporters when he run for Mayor two years ago, deserted him now.

But by far the most comical part of the "Gazette's" article is where he ascribes Mr. Plum's defeat to the 'Know Nothings,' and still asserts that few if any of that order are democrats. How in the name of common sense he can figure out the election of a whig Mayor by 600 majority in a city that for the last few years has almost invariably given a democratic majority, with out admitting that it was done by democrats, I acknowledge is beyond my comprehension. Everybody here knows that democrats defeated him; and everybody here knows why they did it. It was to teach him, and through him all future office seekers, of whatever party, that if they seek the patronage of any particular religious sect, by making reciprocal pledges, it will become their certain defeat.

Revival of Native Americanism.

Under this head the Northern Gazette devotes three or four columns of its last weeks issue to fasten this odious ism upon the whig party. For intelligent men a reply is unnecessary, as the article is a mere dilution of words. The only points are, 1. The Troy Whig is native American. 2, An anti-catholic influence combined to elect a whig Mayor in that city. 3. The destruction of the block of Marble sent by the Pope for the Washington Monument 4 Abuse of the Post Master Genl. 5 The exclusion of foreigners from taking part in the organization of Nebraska was adopted in the Senate by a vote of 37 14 democrats! and only 8 whigs! Therefore the whig party, says the able editor, is a Native American party! Whoever heard such logic from a man? From a school boy it might be expected, but from the Nephew of Lord Nelson, son of Dr. Wolford, graduate of a Canadian College, "translator of languages' (vide Dave Turner,) Notary, and P. M. Keesville, never.

Now let us remind that editor of a few facts: 1. Democratic New Hampshire is the only state in the Union where catholics are proscribed. 2 P. M. G. Campbell was defeated as a candidate for Judge in Pa. by dem. votes as the rest of the dem. ticket was elected by thousands. 3. The whigs of New Orleans last fall put a catholic in nomination for Dist. Atty. and the democrats got out handbills denouncing catholic influence. 4. Gen. Storms, late dem. State Prison Inspector of this state was and is a member of the Order of United or Native Americans, and the Editor of the Northern Gazette voted for him. 5 The Native movements in N Y. and Philadelphia were set on foot by democrats.—6. A bill of importance to catholics was presented to and urged upon the last N. Y. Legislature by a whig Senator and though strongly dem, it was rejected. 7, The exclusion of foreigners from Nebraska is in a Congress 2 to 1 democratic and could be reversed if Pierce should say so. 8. A division of the School monies is deemed important to catholics, but the Gazette is silent on that subject. 9. A "soft" was elected Mayor of Utica by the 'know nothings,' alias, Native Americans. 10. A whig was defeated in a city of Mass. the other day, and a dem elected by the same influences. 11. The N. Y. Day Book, which in 1852 supported Scott, and said of foreign voters that they were a compound of 'pauperism, theft, drunkeness and disgusting ignorance,' now supports Pierce with equal zeal. 12. The Albany Atlas denounced Mitchell and others as 'wordy imbeciles,' and Marcy called them 'adventurers and seditious propagandists.'

These are a few of the facts we might mention. The logic of the Gazette is what amuses us. The Troy Whig is Native American, 11 democrats and only 8 whigs voted in the U. S. Senate, to exclude foreigners from Nebraska, therefore, the whig party is Native American. An ancient philosopher described man as a two legged animal. Another, picked a hen of its feathers, and labelling it the Philosphers man, sent it to him as a present. The deduction was quite as sensible. The main difference between the two is, the latter was a joke, but Nelson is in earnest. If the whig party is Native American for the causes stated by the Gazette, how much more is the democratic party native American for the more numerous and weighter reasons stated by us. If the Troy Whig makes the whig party native American, then the N. Y. Day Book makes the dem. party native American.

The "know nothings" are made up of all parties and not of whigs only, or mainly as the Gazette insinuates As to the destruction of the marble block sent by the Pope for the Washington Monument it is allowed on all hands to have been destroyed by Italian refugees, and not by native Americans, or Protestants. The Editor knew he was insinuating a falsehood when he wrote otherwise.

If the Editor of the Gazette will publish this article on his second page and use our type we will pay for it as an advertisement and endorse it on the execution we hold against him.

N. Y. Legislature.

The Temperance Bill.—The bill as passed the Senate and sent down to the House was to take effect on the first of Dec. next. The committee of the House to whom it was referred have reported in favor of changing the time to May 1, For fear of losing the bill altogether, Mr Lynch one of the leading friends of the measure and one of the Editors of the N. Y. Alliance has moved to agree on Dec. It is asserted as a fact that, there is no outside influence in Albany agst. the bill.

THE LITERARY JOURNAL.—We have been favored with a number of the "Literary Journal," Philadelphia, 'devoted to the wants of woman;' and edited by Ella Wentworth. We are always ready to take our 'editorial brethren' by the hand; but in these days of 'young America' and 'strong minded woman,' our wife keeps a pretty sharp look out after us. Our foreman, however, being a single gentleman, says, the Literary Journal is the prettiest paper in Philadelphia, and we rather cautiously intimate the same opinion.

ARRESTED.—We learn from a New Orleans exchange that Mrs. Lynch was recently arrested and sent before the criminal court of that city where she was put under bonds to keep the peace.

If now, Mr. Lynch was under arrest and bonds, the country would rejoice, as it would not expect to be startled by the horrid crimes of that lawless gentleman, who burns, hangs and shoots black and white alike, according to his humor, regardless of the rights of the law, & without the "benefit of clergy."

"GEOGRAPHICAL NEWS.—The Illustrated London News for Jany. 21, has the following in an article on American annexation:—

"They (the Americans) have [illegible] purchased from the king of Mos[illegible] crisis is an important one;

Communicated Brevities.

'Consistency is a Jewel.'

——Senator Clayton of Del. in his speech before the Senate, March 1, is reported to have declared the Missouri Compromise unconstitutional. But in 1848, in the face of his oath to support the constitution, he strenously urged its extension to the Pacific!

Can such Senators deserve the confidence, or secure the respect of the American people?

Deleware,—taking the statement of its Senator, sine sacramenta, which it seems is just as good,—Deleware, though a small state is prolific of Senators of easy virtue. Both McLane and Vandyke, former Senators from that State, voted for that compromise, after demonstrating that it was unconstitutional!

We cease to wonder that solemn compacts are broken in the hands of men who treat a most important oath so lightly!—We wonder only that Senators should be so lost to a decent respect for honesty, as to publish their perjury in the Senate chamber, in the face of the nation, and in the face of the world.

An argument upon false premises that would be no argument if its premises were true

——The grand argument on which the Nebraska Bill rests is, that the refusal of Congress, in 1850, to extend the Missouri Compromise line on the parallel of 36° 30' to the Pacific, did virtually abrogate that compromise! How is this made out?—No such condition or reservation was ever stipulated or even asked. How then could such refusal, 30 years afterwards, invalidate that compact which was defined with limits and boundaries?

Senator Clayton says, the South and the North were equal partners in the National Domain and that being of different occupations it was convenient for them to divide and thus to push to better advantage the common wealth. After 30 years of thrift they mutually annex another territory.—The south now seeks to extend the dividing line on the same parallel through this new tract. But the north refuses. Therefore the old covenant is broken Such is the argument Mr. Clayton advances in support of the justice of a breach of faith. There is so much of the pettifogger in this, and it has been so much the burden of argument on that side of the chamber, that it deserves some notice.

The newly acquired territory lies chiefly below the compromise line;—i. e. south of it. Not a dollar of the common stock has been paid to extend our boundaries northward; but millions to extend the line southward. Already a vast territory has been added south of that line, and there is an imminent probability that it will soon inclose the whole of Mexico.

And so because the north will not shut herself off from any participation in any newly acquired territory on that side the south rapaciously seize upon the pittance she has held by compact, peaceably these last thirty years!

Is this the gallantry of the south? The sooner she is made to feel that the north can defend her own rights the better. The sooner we are relieved from such unprincipled partners, the sooner will our prosperity be secured. Let us have few words; but unyielding deeds.

A new discovery.

——It has just been discovered in the Senate Chamber that the Missouri Compromise of thirty years standing, recognised as a compromise by all our Presidents and leading Statesmen, north and south, of all political parties, is no compromise at all;—never was a compromise! Wonderful discovery! Courage, countrymen! The darkness which enveloped our fathers, and in which they groped their way, is being dissipated by a new luminary just rising in the WEST! What shall we have next?

Senator Houston.

——Gen. Houston, seems to stand on a noble eminence above his coordinates of the Democratic party in the U. S. Senate. While all good faith is to perish out of that party as a party the veteran hero of Texas stood aloof, as though scorning to tarnish his name in a matter so evidently at variance with a decent morality. The position of the Senator is the more to be admired, inasmuch as he had no ground left him on which to rest his noble soul. The north had "fouled its own nest;" he could not stand for their rights which themselves had repudiated;—sold for Buncomb;—the children of Ham had no rights which he could plead; he therefore turns to the poor Indian. If no faith is to be kept with the white man, or pity wasted on the black, yet some small consideration may be shown for the tawny race. Very well; a small lamp glimmering in the surrounding darkness is by no means an unwelcome sight. That light may yet lead us out of the breakers into which the Ship of State has been run by the blindness or treachery of her Gubernaculum.

In Congress.

Efforts are being made for grants of lands to several States in aid of internal improvements. Among others, N. Y. asks an appropriation of lands, or the proceeds, to aid in constructing a Ship Canal around the Falls of Niagara, and for the completion of the Canal Enlargement. It is opposed by Mr. Dean of this State, a barnburner. Mr. Simmons has made a short speech in favor of a grant to Minnesota Territory in aid of a Rail Road from the Lakes to the Mississippi River.

The Contrast.

In the whole history of the country, the whig party has ever been a law abiding party Not so with the democracy. Constitutions, law, precedents, individual, state or national rights, public faith, or public morality, are nothing when in the way of their wishes. Note the celebrated disfranchizement of 6 New Jersey members of Congress without the formality of trial because they stood in the way of democratic ascendancy. The Hon. Mr. Pugh, just elected U.S. Senate from Ohio, was once elected to the Legislature of that State in open defiance of a plain and undeniable statute. Thos. W. Dorr set a revolution on foot in Rhode Island which had he been a man of courage would have drenched that state in blood. His proceedings were a mockery on the ballot system, and his claims were passed upon adversely by the dem. U S. Supreme court. Now the dem. Legislature of that state has signalized its probable retirement from power by passing a law annulling the judgt. of the court declaring Dorr guilty of treason and directing the clerk to draw black lines across the record! Such judges would be fit instruments for tyrants of any country, England, France, Spain or Mexico. In Turkey they would lose their heads.

The democracy of Maine a few days ago held the legislature of that state in a state of disorganization for weeks, that its party might triumph, but it failed and Maine has a whig Gov. and a whig U. S. Senator in consequence. These things are worth thinking of in connection with the resignation of Senator Blakely of this state, upon which we quote the Register elsewhere.

UPS AND DOWNS OF LIFE.—Dr. Wolford Nelson has been elected Mayor of Montreal. Seventeen years ago he was one of the participators in the "Papineau War," and was dubbed the "hero of St. Dennis." On the failure of that flurry he was captured, if we remember, and placed in irons. Subsequently he was pardoned, and in the course of events, became a tory with the rest of his (sham) patriot leaders, parties in Canada having changed positions, the "Papineau" men having become tories, and the tories of '37 patriots, or opposition, now. In the recent disturbances in Canada, the burning of the Parliament House &c., the tories, or Government men of '37 were the Patriots, or rioters, while the Heroes and Warriors of '37 were the most loyal of subjects, the right arm and sole dependence of Government, forming body guards for the Queen's Governor. In these changes Dr. Nelson is Mayor of Montreal, but he is not considered by any body a man of any ability.

A FORTHCOMING BOOK.—Hon. Winslow C. Watson is engaged in the preparation of the Memoirs and Journal of his father, Elkanah Watson, deceased, for publication. They will make a volume of about 500 pages of the most intense interest, embracing as they do, minute, but familiar descriptions of all the prominent actors and scenes of the American Revolution, in both hemispheres. The deceased was an active participator in all those events through our Revolution and the establishment of the American Republic. He enjoyed an intimate acquaintance and correspondence with the great men of that period, and their letters will form an attractive feature of the book. Some of these we have had the pleasure of reading, and we hope to be permitted to give a "leaf" of the book to our readers occasionally.

WHO DID IT?—Our neighbor will please inform Irishmen and foreigners in general that the Nebraska Bill, as originally reported by the democratic Senator, Mr. Douglass, contained a provision allowing foreigners who have filed their intentions of becoming citizens to vote and hold office. But Mr. Clayton, whig senator from Maryland, moved that the clause be stricken out A whig is entitled to the credit of originating the idea of a measure which a whig editor would fasten upon the democrats.—Northern Gazette.

And the Northern Gazette "will please inform Irishmen and foreigners in general that" a democratic majority of two to one in Congress and a democratic President had not love enough for "Irishmen and foreigners in general" to prevent such a gross insult and outrage as the above.

CARDWELL, has returned from the South and says he is bound to have the earliest and best lot of spring goods ever introduced

Then and Now!

Once, Slavery humbly asked to be protected in its rights only—that State rights might not be invaded. Now, it is imporious, impudent, swaggering, and bobsterous. It was not satisfied that the North went on its knees to it in 1850—not satisfied with its victory in 1852, but it must demand further concessions, farther sacrifices, further expansion, in short, that the North shall now yield all—honor, sacred compacts, mutual faith, public morality, all—to gratify its capacious maw. The South in 1850 demanded the sacrifice of eminent whigs, and they were gratified. The whig party was destroyed to please them. National democrats compromised their positions at home for them and now Nationals of both parties are spurned as if they were vipers. Driven to the wall, these men will assume another kind of nationality—the nationality of right, of justice, of FREEDOM! When their day of tribulation comes, as come it will if they persist in their mad career, the South will cry in vain for help.

Democracy, Infidelity, and Tyranny.

3,000 clergymen of Mass. recently presented to the U. S. Senate, thro' Mr. Everett, a Protest against the Nebraska bill.—Douglass and half a dozen other democrats took occasion to denounce those clergymen in unmeasured terms, and at times in language showing that those Senators had no more respect for religion than for ministers. We should publish the debate but that it would occupy nearly a whole side of our paper. Gov. Seward & Senator Houston defended the Protest and the rights of the protestants manfully.

The truth of it is, democracy is the hot bed of infidelity. In France, Pierce, Douglass & Co. would be red-republicans until they had overthrown the government, when they would be Louis Napoleons. In Russia, they would be the defenders of the Czar. In taking an appeal from these Clergymen to the people and thus arraying the prejudices of the masses against the clergy, they only prove that they would appeal as soon to thieves, pickpockets, and discharged criminals, provided they could make votes by it.

A New Paper.

Wendell Lansing, formerly editor of this paper, has purchased the press and type of the Old Settler, for the purpose of starting an abolition paper. We personally wish Mr. Lansing great success, but at the same time are compelled to say that it strikes us such a paper is unwise in view of the present position of things, and of the course of whigs and whig papers on questions relating to Slavery. We advise whigs to nail their colors to the mast and stand firm to their party and their party papers for the present. Indeed, now is the time to double the circulation of the latter, as by so doing they do a great service to the party and the Anti Slavery sentiment, and a great personal service to whig editors—Will our friends at least think of this and act accordingly?

Temperance Demonstration.

We have received a letter from H W. Sherman of Plattsburgh, saying there is to be a Mass Meeting of the friends of Temperance at that place on Wednesday the 29th inst., at 3 o'clock, P. M. The attendance of the people is earnestly requested The Grand Lodge of the Knights of Jericho meet there on that day.

WILL'S CORNET BAND.—The other evening we went up to the room of this Band where we passed an agreeable hour listening to their practice. They are making rapid progress, and Keesseville will soon have a Band to be proud of.

Nationality.

We have in years past heard much about national whigs and national democrats.—We have never liked the term because it savored too much of Southern Nationality. And the men who prided themselves in appropriating this term and who did most for the south, are now the most opposed and the most hated, and scorned by the south. But that is not a true nationality which suffers slavery to rule or to extend itself one single inch. The south have rights guarantied to them in which they should be protected, but the north—no, not the north—the Republicans of the country should say to Slavery, "thus far and no farther—STAND THOU THERE."

DIED, at North Hudson, on the 8th inst. Emiline B. wife of Aaron Ormsbee, in the 34th year of her age, and only daughter of Mr. Woodard, of Ticonderoga.

Her departure was sudden and unexpected, both to herself and friends. She has left to mourn her loss a husband, two sons and two daughters, also a Father, Mother, and seven Brothers. While she was a faithful companion, and a fond mother, ever laborious to promote the moral and material welfare of her family, she was also cheerful, kind, and obliging to others.—Her traits of character were such as to deserve and secure the respect and esteem of all who knew her. And although the circle of her friends are the subjects of deep sorrow, they bow with resignation to this painful intimation of the Divine will, being animated with the hope that their loss is her gain.—Com.

The following description of the Magnificent Model of the World is taken from one of the leading papers of New York city, and will well repay perusal:—

PROF. HART'S WHOLE WORLD.

THE Entire World at one view! In magnificent and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility, is now open to the public, at the WORLD'S HALL, 377 and 379 Broadway, fitted up at an immense cost expressly for this master-piece of Art.—This is not a mere panoramic display upon canvass, but an actual structure, on Mercator's projection, of over one thousand square feet, composed of real land and water. Immense labor and enormous expense have been lavished upon the design, which is now completed. So real is the work, that all the oceans, seas, rivers, lakes, gulfs and bays, are filled with running water, upon the surface of which floats ships and steamers, visibly moving easeyage to and from every clime. Mountains and valleys, with all the varied geographical phenomena they present, are spread out in the exact shape and form made by nature. Volcanoes visibly belch forth sulphuric flames. The dreadful maelstrom or whirlpool, off the coast of Norway, is also seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The wreck of the ill fated steamer San Francisco is represented in the right locality, and seen sinking in the boundless deep—the Three Bells, Antartic and the Kilby, whose noble commanders so bravely rescued so many of America's sons and daughters, are also in view.—The north west passage, recently discovered by Captain McClure, is accurately shown and expatiated upon. The localities of the war now raging in Europe and Asia are correctly delineated. The golden fields of California and Australia are prominent in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the beholder can sway with enthusiastic raptures over the entire surface of the mighty globe, upon which, as upon a stage, he appears as an actor; and while he is surprised at the vast novelty of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of its mechanical operations, and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the amusing lesson of an hour. The best talent of the country has been employed in the preparation of this mammoth undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass, without regard to expense, have been bestowed to render it worthy of this enlightened age, the whole having been calculated from the best European charts together with all the recent surveys by authority of the United States government. The audience is taken on a pleasant tour from pole to pole, and under the guidance of the experienced lecturer, ensured a safe passage and speedy return to their happy homes. We will only add, that much are but few of the many advantages which can be gained only by a visit to this modern wonder. In connection with the above, a perfect model of the city of San Francisco, as it now exists, with all its buildings, streets, wharves, shipping, &c made from actual measurement taken upon the spot for that purpose, built of solid material. Also, numerous panoramic views of the California regions of gold, the whole rendering it one of the most popular, interesting and instructive places of amusement in New York, or, we may safely say, in the world.

We learn that Professor Hart will shortly publish a book relative to the design of the World, including a history of his extensive travels in the Old and New World, anecdotes, &c. which must be very interesting, and should be read by the million. We are also informed that for the purpose of popularizing American Art, and for the purpose of giving his valuable book an extensive circulation, Prof. Hart proposes to give to all persons purchasing his gift tickets of admission, in any part of the world, a vast amount of valuable and elegant property.

The mere announcement of this fact by Prof. Hart is a sufficient guarantee for its merit and success, he being known throughout the Union as an extensive traveler, public speaker, merchant, and a thorough active responsible business man; and we doubt not that the immense Hall will be daily crowded to behold his modern Wonder.

Mortgage Sale.

WHEREAS, Henry Haile, then of the town of Crownpoint in Essex county, by a certain Indenture of mortgage executed and bearing date the 7th day of February, A. D. 1849, and with the usual power of sale therein contained, and duly recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Essex, in vol. O of mortgages on pages 364 and 365 on the 4th day of June, 1849, at 3 o'clock, P. M., to secure the payment of five hundred dollars and interest, did duly grant, bargain, sell and convey to Jeremiah Powers, then of the town of Pittsford, county of Rutland and State of Vermont, certain premises described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"All that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the town of Crown Point, in the county of Essex and State of New York, being sub-division lot in a larger tract of land granted by letters patent, bearing date on the 7th day of August in the year of our Lord 1764, to Captain Robert Grant, which said sub-division lot hereby intended to be sold and conveyed is described and distinguished on a map and survey of the said tract of land granted as aforesaid to the said Captain Robert Grant, and filed in the office of the clerk of the county of Essex, on the 9th day of December, 1835, as lot number thirteen (13) and is bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Commencing at an iron-wood stake and stones in the easterly bounds of lot No. 17, in the possession of Isaac Russell, and runs thence south-easterly fifty-four chains and sixty-five links to an iron-wood stake and stones in the westerly bounds of lot No. 32, in the possession of Howard Barrows; thence south-westerly twelve chains and forty-one links to an oak stake and stones in the west bounds of lot No. 24, in the possession of Nathan B. Sprague; thence north-westerly fifty-four chains and twenty-five links to an iron-wood stake and stones in the east bounds of lot No. 23 in the possession of Stephen L. Herrick, thence north-easterly fifteen chains and eighty-seven links to the place of beginning—containing seventy-six acres and one-tenth of an acre of land, be the same more or less."

And whereas, on the 17th day of May, 1853 the said mortgage with the moneys unpaid thereon were for a valuable consideration, and by an instrument in writing of that date sold and assigned by the said mortgagee to Charles F. Hammond, John C. Hammond and Allen Penfield of Crownpoint aforesaid.

And whereas, default has been made in the payment of the moneys secured to be paid by said mortgage, and there is now claimed to be due on said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice, (being the date hereof,) the sum of six hundred and seventy-five 97-100 dollars ($675 97,) and no proceedings at law or equity having been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that in pursuance of said power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgaged premises hereinbefore described, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage together with the costs and expenses of foreclosure—will be sold by public auction at the hotel kept by J. A. Benedict, in the town of Crownpoint and county of Essex, on the 16th day of May 1854, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia —"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so active ly engaged in."

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

FRAUD!

ALL who want Axes of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our mannfacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most benificial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public, as an efficious remedy it is also known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. In cases of Impotency, Hoemorrhages, Disordered Sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluror Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

DEBILITY

TO FEMALES.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies would exist, where they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to, are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN.

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVIOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excess have brought on themselves Premature Impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the sensual passions, occasioning the necessity of renouncing the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Corunal a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

it is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations, Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL."

is put up in 8 oz. Pannel Bottles, and is easily recognised by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle, (to counterfeit which is forgery) as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

☞ Sold for $2 per Bottle; Six for $8; $16 per dozen

Scraps from Mitchell's "Citizen."

JOHN MITCHEL, by his independence of thought, and plain and fearless method of giving it utterance, is drawing down upon himself censure and abuse on every hand, some finding fault with one thing, and others with something else, so that scarcely any thing he writes escapes the animadversion of the press, the pulpit, or the lecture room But JOHN takes it all like a true philosopher, saying that it is nothing more than he expected, and keeps right on in his bold, free manner of discussion, expressing his opinion upon all subjects of public interest, without fear, and with evident honesty.

To give him fair play, we cull from different articles of his recent writing, certain portions which may tend to explain his position, & justify his motives.—Jeffersonian.

A SETTLEMENT OF ACCOUNTS.

With public opinion in America the Editor of the "Citizen" now feels himself to be quits.

When he landed on the shores of this Republic, all he sought, all he wanted in America was a shelter from his enemies: and this was quite sure to be accorded him. But this was not all. Not only refuge for the hunted exile, but ready and unreserved sympathy for his cause—hearty, kindly good will for himself—appreciation only too partial of his talents, his character, his services: and very much of all this (as he is happy to believe) sincere and genuine;—the said Editor confesses it was all very pleasant; and that for three weeks he had "a good time."

The thing even seemed quite natural. It is not strange that an American should feel pride in being the citizen of the only country on earth that dares to open its hospitable door to the enemies of any and of all kings and queens. Neither is it matter of wonder that the descendants of colonists who flung off the intolerable British yoke, after a bloody struggle, should feel some sympathy with a land which still bends and groans under the same yoke;—nor that a verdict found by a monarch's picked and packed jury of slaves, pronouncing a rebel and a republican to be a "felon," should from republicans, and from the sons and heirs of rebels, meet a prompt and scornful reversal It was natural; it was right; and to this day we will not part with the belief that it was genuine.

But the aforesaid Editor could not fail to see from the first a strain of unwholesome exaggeration in the notices of him by a part of the public press. Willing as he was, after five years' dismal death-in-life, to abandon himself to the intoxication of these holydays of freedom, he knew well enough that a veiled skeleton sat beside him at the banquet; and ever and anon he saw it's grin. Often he shook his head in private, and said to himself—They are running up an account against thee: it is a commercial nation; one day thou shalt be called upon to pay the utmost farthing.

The editor was not too much elated. He rejoiced with trembling. He was told by some prudent friends how it would all end, so soon as he should begin to show that he had an opinion, and would call his soul his own. Therefore he partook moderately of the feast of flattery, and even—wherever he could do so without ungracious rudeness—avoided and declined ovations. The amount of the account running up against him became oppressive and alarming; and early in the business he began to open the per contra. He presumed to express some resentment at Mr. Marcy, for calling the European nationalists "seditious propagandists" in a disparaging sense:—this enabled his creditors to take a large slice of his fame in execution, and they repaid themselves in part with violent abuse. Then he commenced the "Citizen," with the fullest determination both to have an opinion and to express it upon every question of public concernment; and he laughed at Womanism, and sneered at Cold-waterism—soon he made enemies enough. There was a "view-hollo"—the game was in sight—the hounds soon came on the scent in full cry; and such a ferocious howl never dismayed the heart of an Actæon. At last, he believes that he may fairly strike a balance between himself and American public opinion, with some hope that the balance will be found in his favor.

* * * * *

We understood Republicanism before we came to New York: we knew what we had to expect: and we know that one of the aptest instruments and strongest safeguards of Republicanism was Parrhesia or freedom of speech So we fearlessly launched this Citizen of ours upon the wide ocean of Opinion—

> Where the tides are fresh forever,
> And the boundless currents free.

We do not repent it. There is no need to be afraid of any or all possible conflicts and collisions of sentiment; all the whirling eddies and cross-currents that the infinite fountains of human thought and life are sure to create in such a boundless sea. The strong swimmer delights in them. Only they who have no pole-star to look to for guidance, or no heart to buffet the waves, are in danger of sinking.

It is true, that in this living and life giving ocean of liberty many strange fishes are bred; and even slimy monsters enough, barking like the sea dogs of Scylla, gurgling, grinning like sharks, vomiting inky streams like cuttle-fish, blowing and squirtling like ten thousand grampuses. As we

> "I shuddered, when under my shrinking gaze,
> That wilderness lay developed, where wandering
> The dragon, and dogfish, and sea-salamander.
> And I saw the huge kraken and magnified snake,
> And the thornback, and ravening shark,
> Their way through the dismal water take;
> While the hammer-fish wallowed below in the dark,
> And the river-horse rose from his lair beneath
> And grinned through the grate of his spiky teeth."

Worse than this even, and more formidable to any swimmer, bather, or diver,—some of the creatures are unclean; their utterances are unsavory; and so foul do they sometimes make the currents of opinion, (which ought to be fresh forever) that one might sometimes fear the common waters are turning into a common sewer and fruitful mother of dead dogs. Anathema!

Yet we are neither afraid, nor yet too fastidious. We accept, we glorify, we revel in, freedom. Doubtless a pond of goldfish in a royal park would be a better regulated and better mannered concern than the ocean crypts of the Atlantic. But give us freedom; before all things Freedom, tho' cradled in storms that sweep from pole to pole, and rocked upon tides that sway and heave beneath Sun and Moon.

So now for a deep breath and a long stroke.

OUR "POLICY"—OUR "PLATFORM."

A correspondent for whom we entertain respect, has referred us back to the Prospectus of the "Citizen," wherein we announced our belief that the cause of Ireland was not a lost cause; and urges upon us the necessity of initiating, and steadily carrying forward some definite policy—some organized, intelligent, and intelligible scheme of action, by which the Irish in America as well as at home may fit themselves to profit by any occasion that Providence may present them, for the redemption of their native country.

The subject is one which we have earnestly thought upon; and on the whole, we can see no more definite and direct line of action (at least, for Irishmen who are citizens or inchoate citizens of the United States) than the course which we took the liberty of recommending two months ago, in a Lecture at Boston—namely: first, to study the institutions of this Republic, in order that they may become good, intelligent, and high-spirited American citizens;—second, to obey the Laws of this Republic firmly and loyally, both because it is their duty so to do, and because (after an experience of sham law, and an unjust and fraudulent government) that duty must be a pleasure. It is, indeed one of the most exalting pleasures, and one of the most justifiable sources of pride, to feel one's-self an equal and co-ordinate member of a great and free community. And third, to avail themselves universally of the privilege of bearing arms, which is in itself no mean political education—to enrol themselves in the several State militias, and use diligence and zeal in training and drilling,—that so they may feel themselves,—that each of them may feel himself individually, more of a man, and a freeman; and may have both a heart and an arm, if the occasion arise, either to defend his new country, or to redeem and avenge the old.

Do you see nothing definite enough in this? Is it nothing, that every Irish peasant, ground to powder in his own land, and finally swept from the face of it with the besom of destruction, has here an opportunity of seeing and feeling what it is to be a freeman? Is it nothing that we see with our own eyes, what there is—what reality of welfare and honor there is, for an oppressed nation to seek, to hope, to fight for? is it nothing, that a young Irishman (and how many thousands there are!) who earns here an independent living, who takes off his hat to no superior but his Creator, who shoulders his musket on parade as an American militia-man,—and who has left his parents, his brothers, his schoolfellows yet lingering on the old ground, poor hunted servile tenants-at-will, disarmed, trembling, pauper serfs,—is it nothing that he has such bitter food for tho't? And that his cheek flushes fiery hot when he thinks on it? And that he clutches his rifle or his musket on parade with a more loving gripe, as he reads in his comrade's eye that the selfsame thought is burning his heart too,—and then he prays, Oh! how fervently, that one day may yet dawn upon him before he dies, when, with God and a good cause to speed, he may find himself standing before the British red-coats, and those same comrades by his side, and that same weapon in his hand? Is this nothing? Is it it not all? Policy! We are very sick of policies. Elaborate organizations are dead corpses; it is the spirit that quickeneth; and Opportunity is not the child of organization, but the Daughter of God, and comes down from Heaven.

* * * * *

Again, a man who avows sympathy with the revolutionists and nationalists of Europe, is supposed to be committed to the whole suit of opinions that are usually found in association with that—he must be harnessed to Abolition, to Human Progress, perhaps in strictness to Woman's rights and cold water. At least we feel sure that the good Mr. Greeley thinks it incongruous and unfashionable for any advocate of European nationalities and republics to appear in decent society without a full dress livery of isms, which indeed are neat but they do not wear well—and at they don't fit us.

Upon that single subject of the form of Christianity that has now much vitality or power: at any rate many people take comfort in it, and far be it from us to disturb them. Now these sentiments suit Archbishop Hughes and the Freeman's Journal well enough; but then they come and offer us, by way of matching our outfit, a cardinal's hat, and an ecclesiastical executioner; they thrust Bedini down our throat, saddle us with the Emperor of Austria, and insist that the Papal mitre would look poor without the diadem—it would be contrary to all correct notions of costume.

But when we revolt against this, and break out upon the Pope as an old tyrant and ally of tyrants, then comes one of our Evangelican organs, and says to us)through his nose,) then, sir, you are bound to abuse auricular confession and to say that the Seven Sacraments are hostile to Republican freedom; for this notion look you, matches that other notion—clothe yourself in both together, and then you can go to church like a Christian man. So we say to this nasal Evangelist that he talks of he knows not what—we tell him that Catholics make as good Republicans at least as Protestants; and we point to the old Forest-Cantons of Switzerland, the most thoroughly democratic and the most exclusively Catholic, of all the Swiss democracies. And we ask him if the Irish in America do not make good republicans; and we begin to talk to him of Lamennais—when we suddenly find that he does not understand us, has not listened to us. So we end by exhorting him to go to confession himself; and assure him that if he tells all his sins truly, it may do him good and make him a better republican and man.

In short, we despair of ever getting rigged out in any suit of sentiments fit to appear on a decent platform. We cannot advise our countrymen, either, to commit themselves to any of the aforesaid tailors, to don any of the regulation uniforms, to undertake running on any of the established rails. It is all nonsense, whether as American citizenship, or as Irish 'policy.' For our own part we will have none of it. Not coveting any spoils, & being tied to no ticket, we mean to look at every measure and question by itself, and upon its own merits; and to support every man whom we believe honest and independent, whether he call himself Whig, Democrat, Hunker, Adamantine, or whatsoever else.

To do our duty faithfully as American citizens, to become thoroughly and intensely American, will be also the best way of ripening and fulfilling the destinies of Ireland

Soliloquy of a Loafer.

Let's see, where am I? This is—coal I'm lyin' on. How'd I get here? (Reflects.) Yes, I mind now. Was comin' up street—met a wheel-barrow—was drunk—comin' 'tother way—the wheel-barrow fell over me or I fell over the wheel-barrow—and one of us fell into the cellar—don't mind which now—guess it must a'been me. I'm a nice man hic, I am—tight! shot! drunk! Well, I can't help it—'taint my fault? No, it is my wife's fault? N-o-o. It's whiskey's fault. Who is whiskey?—He has a large family? Got many relations? All poor I reckon. I think I won't owe him any more. I'll cut his acquaintance, I've had that notion quite a spell, and always hated to do it for fear o'hurtin' his feelings—I'll do it now for the liquor's injurin' me, its spoilin' my temper.

Sometimes I get mad, when I'm drunk, and abuse Betz and the brats—it used to be Lizzie and the children—that's some time ago; I can just mind it; when I come home evenings she used to put her arms round my neck and kiss me, and call me her dear William. When I come home now she takes her pipe out of her mouth, and puts her hair out of her eyes, and looks at me, and says smoothin' like—Bill, you drunken brute! shut the door after you we're cold enough, havin' no fire, 'thout lettin' the snow blow in that way. Yes, she's Betz and I'm Bill now; I aint a good bid nuther, I think I'm counterfeit—won't pass—a tavern without goin' in an' gettin' a drink. Don't know what bank I'm on; last Sunday I was on the river bank, drunk.

I stay out pretty late now, sometimes I'm out all night; fact is, I'm out pretty much all over—out of friends, out of pocket, out at the elbows and knees, and always outrageously dirty, so Betz says—but then she's no judge, for she's never clean herself. I wonder why she don't wear good cloths; may be she hasn't got 'em; whose fault's that? 'taint mine, it's whiskey's.

Sometimes I'm in, however, I'm in-toxicated now, and in somebody's coal-cellar There's one good principle I've got—I won't go in debt. I never could do it.—There, one of my coat tails is gone—got tore off, I expect, when I fell down here—I'll have to get a new suit soon. A fellow told me the other day I'd make a good sign for a paper mill; if he wasn't so big I'd a licked him. I've had this shirt on for nine weeks, and I'm afraid it won't come off without tearin.' Local Correspondence of the Republican.

POTSDAM, March 13th, 1854.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—

We poor inhabitants of these hyperborean regions, who for the last four months have shivered and shook before the fitful breathings of the old tyrant Boreas, retiring whenever we could spare the time, before his fierce assaults to our snug and cozy fortifications, making stronger and more defensible every assailable point, until in our strength and comfort we could laugh at his imperious commands and angry threatenings, & only daring to meet him in our most impervious armor in the open field; are exceedingly rejoiced to see the old tyrant's throne begin to melt beneath him,—the chilly fierceness of his breath becoming more moderate,—the discordant and angry complainings of his voice, changing to fitful demonstrations of ill humor, or gentle moanings, like the voice of one who feels the vigor of his youth departed and mourns the strength of his manhood that is fast passing away,—or, "in point of fact," Mr. Editor, as McCawber would have it—we are caused to rejoice at the breaking up of a hard winter and the appearance of a thaw and approaching spring. Your readers are not to infer from the foregoing that we are inclined to be a fault-finding community, who are incapable of appreciating the thousand blessings with which winter comes ladened,—we admit their existence, and believe that we know how to enjoy them; but as a conclusion of the whole matter, we will say that we consider most of the demonstrations of winter in this latitude decidedly cool.

Neither are you to suppose that we have remained entirely dormant during the past winter, or only exposing ourselves to the inclemency of the weather when forced to do so. Although perhaps a majority of us have refused to desert the genial warmth of inviting firesides, even when beckoned away by tempting acres of uncalled pine and spruce timber, in situations not very remote; yet, there are spirits among us whose resistless enterprise no frozen atmosphere or prospective hardships can intimidate,

> "While there remains in forest lea,
> The hope to gain a single tree."

whose restless footsteps have treaded the long forgotten paths of the Indian hunter, and gazed with speculative delight upon the sturdy monarchs that have reigned for centuries over nature's broad domain undiscovered by even the eagle eye of "down east Yankees." But now for the first time is the noble forest besieged by an invincible and unrelenting foe! Encouraged to make the attack by the value of the precious timber for multifarious uses in civilized life, the lumberman coolly establishes himself during the autumn and winter in the midst of a dense array of the much coveted treasure, and commences his warfare of extermination—the woods resound with the sharp echoes of his ponderous axe, and the thunderings of these mighty columns of the great temple of nature, as one after the other is prostrated to the earth.—Away up on the head waters of the Racket, Grass, Saranac and Ausable, huge piles of logs accummulate upon the surface of the ice-bound lakelets as the winter progresses, which the surplus waters of the opening Spring are to convey to the thousand busy saws near Lake Champlain and the St. Lawrence River. Upon our river we have some 1500 saws to supply for the coming season, and our sturdy woodmen have toil'd unremittingly to obtain the adequate amount. Along the line of the Potsdam & Watertown Rail Road, the potent hand of labor has broken the frozen earth and cleared and leveled a pathway for the Iron Horse, by opening a passage through the obtruding hill, and filling up the yawning valley. The biting north wind, though "not exactly agreeable," is not able to drive within doors the well paid operative and anxious contractor.

The company have purchased iron enough to lay the track some 30 miles, and the grading is rapidly progressing and verging towards completion,—hence the word has gone forth that ere the frosts of another autumn have tinged our forests, the Iron Horse will be among them panting with the weight of innumerable tons of produce, speeding on their way to the unsupplied market, and bustling passenger trains through hitherto untrequented districts, affording the unsophisticated "natives" wonderful facilities for enjoying the luxury of "riding on a rail."

While many of our brethren have been the heroes of forest and field, a majority have remained quietly at home, read their newspapers by the fireside, ponder deeply upon the wonderful complications of the "Eastern question," speculated on the probable price of grain, butter, cheese, and bacon, in case John Bull and Monsieur Crampard unite to help the Sultan cut the throats of the Czar's Cossacks—found fault with the State Legislature because they didn't pass the "Maine Law" forthwith—talked long and loud about the iniquity of our "canal amendment," and executive State officers, denounced Frank Pierce as a dotard and truckster, (notwithstanding they voted for him almost to a man) simply because that justice dispensing ruler and redoubtable gentleman ardently desires that his most loyal subjects in the South may be able to hold their "property" in that part of Uncle Samuel's dominions style Kapsas and Nebraska. How unreasonable! What an idea, to deprive citizens of the right to their property, except in certain parts of the country!. And then as to that Douglass, (romantic sectionally termed the Little Giant,) that most worthy champion of "property"—that able defender of "property"—

Cleanliness and Comfort of Horses.

Last week we said there was no country in the world where so many horses were kept, in proportion to the population, as in America. We may add that in no other country is the horses worse used than here; in none does he work harder, fare harder, and receive less attention. This is owing, perhaps, to the fact that in Europe the labor of one horse is equal to that of two men, while here we pay as much per day for a man as for a span of horses. Let any one visit the French or English stables, and he will be satisfied, by contrasting their system with our own practices, that we are lamentably careless, and culpably negligent of the health of our horses. How often have we seen a span of horses brought in from a hard day's work, swathed in sweat turned into a cold stable, fed, and left to dry as best they could, without any other attention than to strip the harness off them and throw it over the stall. How often, too, do we see a span of horses driven Jehu like into the city, and then hitched with their feet in ice-cold water, to a post—from whence, after shivering a few hours, they are driven as unmercifully home again, to receive the cold comfort of lying down to rest (?) covered with clotted perspiration, which, perhaps, is curried off them next morning, prior to another day's work, as severe and as inhuman as the preceding.—Our horses are short lived, and no wonder. The only thing that surprises us is, that they live half so long, and do half the work that they are compelled to perform.

That warmth, to a certain extent, is equivolent to food, we have iterated and reiterated a hundred times. That comfort and cleanliness are essential to health and long life, is a truth equally worthy of being sounded in trumpet tones, in every farmer's ear. Look at that English hunter, so active, handsome, healthy and sleek. After a hard gallop, he is brought home to a warm stable, his feet and legs washed in warm water, his ears rubbed till they are warm and dry, and then the groom rubs the legs and body till the horse is dry all over and his coat shines so that you can see your face in it. So necessary is it considered in England that the horse should be rubbed dry, that a practice has been adopted and now prevails very extensively, of clipping the horses, that is to say, the hair is cut off as close as possible with a pair of shears, and then, with an instrument, somewhat similar in shape to a curry comb, containing some burning fluid, generally naphtha, or spirits of turpentine, the hair is burned off completely, leaving the body as smooth and as destitute of hair as a newly shaven chin. The rapidity with which the practice has extended proves its practical value. We know many old farmers who were, at first, so strongly opposed to the practice that they laughed at the bare idea of the subject; and yet these very men, having been induced to try it, declared that their horses could stand as much again work, as with their coats on, and that they could not let their horses remain unclipt in winter on any consideration. Stage coach and carriage horses, hunters and farmers' hacks, are now very generally clipt, saving an immense amount of labor in grooming. We notice that Mecum has recently proposed to clip his farm horses, and to attach a blanket to each harness, in such a manner that it can be easily thrown over the horse in case he has to stand for a few minutes.

We mention this clipping operation, not that we wish it adopted here, but to show how important it is considered to have horses kept clean, free from sweat, with the pores of the skin in healthy action, &c.—We would advise not to singe off the hair, but to keep the horses in a comfortably warm stable, blanket them, if necessary the hair will be short and smooth. If you have been to the city, do not drive home at the rate of ten miles an hour; there is no necessity for it Though ours is a fast age, and this a pre-eminently fast country, yet six miles an hour is fast enough for any farm horses to travel. If driven home at this rate, the horses will be dry, and if a blanket be thrown over them, they will need little or no grooming. We need hardly say that to insure the cleanliness and comfort of horses, or other animals, it is necessary to have clean food, clean racks, clean mangers, clean litter, clean blankets and harness, &c Show us a man who has a good team well taken care of, a good, substantial harness, kept well mended and oiled, and in perfect order, and we will show you a good and thrifty farmer, who keeps things snug and saves money.

News of the Week.

Nothing new from Europe save that preparations for war are going forward on a gigantic scale and the war fever spreading among the people.

There are rumors of troubles in Canada and Ireland, when Great Britain becomes fairly engaged with Russia.

An exciting personal debate occurred in Congress on Monday, between Mr. Cutting of N. Y., Adamantine, and Mr. Breckenridge of Ky. Administration, growing out of the Nebraska bill, and a duel is expected. Col. Bissell of Ill. and Mr. Hunt of La are Mr. Cuttings advisers.

Telegraph dispatches in our exchanges say that an attempt is to be made to expel a northern Senator from the U. S. Senate —name not given.

A flare up between the President and Col. Clemens of Alabama, is reported in the papers. It seems the President had confessed to certain things in regard to Nebraska which he was not prepared to endorse in public.

Kossuth has issued an address to the Germans of this country on the rejection by the U. S Senate of Sanders as consul in London. Will there be a flare up in the Senate as in the case of the Clergy?

The blow of Saturday, the 17th ult. was the most extensive and destructive we remember to have read. It swept over N. Y. and the whole of New England, unroofing and blowing down buildings, in many instances maiming the limbs and endangering the lives of their inmates.

THE TEMPERANCE BILL, has passed both houses of the Legislature, and is doubtless in the hands of the Govr. A veto is looked for. Gov. Seymour is desperate and his position cannot well be worse than it now is. The law as passed is to take effect in Dec.

NATIVE AMERICANISM.—The Gazette evades, in two long articles, every material point we made on this subject last week as he has ever done before, and runs off into disparaging remarks upon ourself personally, and of our business by way of diverting attention from the question at issue, a trick peculiar to minds of his calibre. It is well enough perhaps to put the following upon record, in view of his remarks:

1. We were asked last fall for our terms for our office and we gave them

2. A similar request has recently been made by an abolition friend, and we again gave them.

3. We have not tried to sell our office, and shall not.

4. We should favor a coalition of whigs with either Abolitionists, or Adamantines, believing it would aid the whigs, whose cause we are bound to serve. The establishment of another press with a view to the organization of a third party is another thing.

5. Mr. Lansing and ourself have hitherto been personal friends, and we presume the relation will continue. We wish him well personally, but we owe a first duty to our party & to ourself. We regret, however, for his sake the article in the Gazette. If that sheet is to become his champion 'the Lord have mercy on his prospects.' If we wished him harm, we could not devise a more serious misfortune than the officious interference of that paper. The article put forth in its last issue was dictated by any feeling but that of friendship—it was a mere trap devised by the Old Settler and Nelson. The sequel we shall watch not with interest, but curiosity.

6. That our course has been "disgusting" to the Pierce and Van Buren democrats, we presume is true. We should be sorry if it had not been. Otherwise we should esteem our labors as vain. On this point we have nothing to say, but point with pride to results. Will the editor of Gazette point to the results of his labors in this vineyard?

more job work than our predecessor. The statement of the Gazette to the contrary is a mere willful malicious lie, worthy of notice only from its frequent repetition.—Suffering seriously in that way himself—discarded by more than half his party—at one time in debt more than the value of his press—levied upon by the Sheriff—a brother lurched and notes to pay—and his party pressed to "pass the hat" for money spent in nightly vigils at Brenn's—he coins a lie in regard to our business, we suppose because "misery loves company." We should think that editor would at last get sick of attempting these personalities for he has thus far found them to recoil upon his own head as we have always returned them with usury, and shall again as soon as we can learn more particulars of rumors in the streets of money lost thro' the mails and visits of secret P. O agents!

NEBRASKA IN CONGRESS.—On the 21st ult., the Nebraska-Kansas bill as passed the Senate was called up in the House by Mr Richardson of Ill., its god-father in the House, and chairman of the Com. on Territories, who moved its reference to the latter Com. Mr. Cutting of N. Y. city, an Adamantine, moved its reference to the Committee of the Whole. Mr. Richardson declared the motion if carried would defeat the bill and no friend of the measure could so vote. Mr. Cutting was only in favor of fair play—of giving every member a chance to discuss its principles, and of placing it where the previous question could not be sprung upon members. The excitement was intense—the House was full, and on taking the vote, the result was, Yeas 110—Nays 95. So the Bill was referred to the Com. of the Whole on the State of the Union.

The correspondent of the New York Herald says:

"The reference of the Nebraska Bill to the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union is considered equivalent to its crucifixion. It takes its place on the calendar behind two or three hundred other bills, which must be disposed of or set aside, one by one, in their order, before the Nebraska bill can be taken up, except by a suspension of the rules under a vote of two-thirds. The Administration is perplexed, but will persevere in another effort or two, if deemed advisable by the friends in both houses. There will be a caucus or two and a Cabinet conference or two, but the bill will sleep on. The New Hampshire election has fixed it."

The correspondent of the New York Times tells the following:—

"Col. Benton says, speaking of the Nebraska bill, 'We shall beat them. The only fear I have now is, that they wont hold it up long enough to knock it down, sir!'"

N. H. ELECTION.—The Boston Atlas, always correct on N. H. elections says, the result in that State is, 157 anti-Administration, and 149 Administration, and that the dem. Gov. is elected by 1400 majority, last year by about 6000.

NEBRASKA IN LOUISIANA.—The House of Representatives of this State recently adopted anti-Nebraska resolutions by a unanimous vote.

NEBRASKA IN MICHIGAN.—Hon. Kinsley S. Bingham, formerly dem. M. C., has taken the stump, as an Independent Anti-Nebraska candidate for Gov.

NEW ORE BEDS.—Whallon & Judd of Elizabethtown have discovered and opened what appears to be a bed of Iron Ore, as valuable as any in the county. It is within half a mile of the village, and not a mile from their forge. They are preparing to put up a first class Steam Separator.

Daniel Tarbell of Moriah also supposes he has found an extensive bed on a lot between Moriah and North Hudson. Competent judges say there is no mistake. The fact of it is, the mineral resources of Essex Co. have but just begun to be developed.

We give below the conclusion of the speech of the Hon. Geo. A. Simmons, to which we alluded last week:

"I cannot avoid saying one thing to my friends from Virginia. They go for the South and southern interests, and they are right; I should pursue the same course probably if I were a southern man. They do not object to drawing upon the Treasury for means wherewith to buy more southern territory from Mexico and Texas, where they find everything congenial with their institutions, and sympathies, and habits. Why not let us of the North do the same thing? The Territory of Minnesota is to be settled chiefly by Yankees. Although I do not mean to make war upon my friends from the South, yet I cannot help remembering, the very first day I took my seat upon this floor, the remarks made by a gentleman from South Carolina, in reference to the Erie difficulties. He said that we of the North must expect such trouble—intimating that we had a great middling interest always disagreeing and disunited, but that they of the South were easily agreed and united. But such evils are overbalanced by vastly greater advantages, and that is true. But let that pass. All I desire is, that the western lands of Minnesota should be occupied by our hardy yeomanry of the North, who can cultivate and improve them. It is not enough only to cultivate the land; they must cultivate and be cultivated themselves. We read that man was made to cultivate the earth, but we know the earth was made to cultivate him. A people can only be made intelligent, virtuous, free, and independent

[For the Republican.]

The Nebraska perfidy has received no harder blow—none that has told with such stunning effect as the respectful yet manly and christian protest against its gigantic wickedness by four or five thousand clergymen of all denominations, including names of the most learned and accomplished scholars of the age—nothing that has yet been done has so effectually excited the fears and wrath of the conspirators as the petitions from these venerable men. And profane abuse heaped on them by such men as Douglass, Pettit and Butler is satisfactory proof that a righteous and effective measure has been adopted

Mr. Douglass by his abuse has exceeded all his previous exhibitions of bad temper and worse principles. "The pious ministers of New England or New York are not likely to obtain much moral edification from one who has just been proposing a deliberate breach of contract; who concocts his schemes by Sabbath breaking, and advocates his fraud by profanity and vulgarity.

If Mr. Douglass imagines this to be the way that the clergy of this country are to be put down, he has committed a blunder hardly less fatal than that which leads him to think the way to the Presidential chair lies through the fragments of broken oaths, violated compacts, and treacherous exploits in behalf of Slavery"—let all read the debates in Congress on this subject and judge for themselves. A writer in the Northern Gazette of last week, signing himself W. has made the wonderful discovery that these eminent divines "have made themselves ridiculous in the estimation of men of understanding!" We should like to see these men of understanding by the side of the signers of those religious Protests. If the arguments of W are a specimen of the mental calibre of "men of understanding" no wonder that the noblest actions of good and great men appear ridiculous. Certain minds never can see anything Pure or Holy in the lives and faith of the pious because to them Religion itself is a 'mere abstraction.' The ministers alone are 'manifest to their senses,' while the great truths they teach are neither comprehended or practiced.

What they teach is not the morals of men of such understanding as W boasts of. His logic is too compact & mind too highly stored with learning to make himself ridiculous by any such manifestations of ignorance!!

Names like the following all of which were signed to the protest from New England, have no weight with W because they are men of such ignorance—so sadly destitute of learning and talents:

The venerable Dr. Chares Lowell, heads the list from Boston. Lyman Beecher, D. D. Manton Eatsburn, Episcopal Bishop, Baron Stow, D D., Joseph Cummings, S. Streeter, Geo, W. Blagdon, D. D, A. H. Cinton, D. D. It is signed by the clerical Professors of Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Williams, Amherst, Middlebury, Waterville, Trinity, Bowdoin Colleges, Brown University. The University of Vermont, and Theological Seminaries at Andover, New Haven, Bangor, Cambridge, Concord, and East Windsor.

Perhaps the reason they appeared so ignorant and wicked to W. is because there is no 'visible Halo around their heads' or because the "channel of thought which in the minds of religious men is open to a current of reverence and regard for the ministers of religion;" in the minds of wicked men is open to a still deeper and swifter current of calumny and vituperation. Another profound discovery of W in Theology is that "Religion should be the motive power to all the morals and all the politics of the people," while the "Religion taught by the Clergy is not our morals or politics!!"

The 'visible halo surrounding the heads' of such ministers must reflect such a light as the flames of Sodom reflected on the fleeing family of Lot.

The discovery of W in the regions of science is no less wonderful. "A Lawyer or Statesman cannot safely turn priest without learning." How much? Where does the great danger lie? Besides 'a Statesman without learning" would be a still greater curiosity than a 'minister with a visible halo surrounding his head' neither ever having been seen or heard of except by men of the profound research and understanding of W.

"Ministers and Statesmen may turn without knowing enough to even suspect their own ignorance; as many have done.' 'What frightful idiocy? A minister turn lawyer or statesman, or a statesman turn minister and so ignorant as not to know it!! No wonder that after writing down a few words more; having no connection with what follows or precedes, or with each other, W. himself should exclaim, "it is an absurdity!!" Capital, first rate, but no better than the next statement that 'the Quaker by going to Washington city this winter about the Nebraska bill to guide the ship of State, became a reproach, & upon a grade with woman's rights—men!!" There's wisdom and understanding for you! Some ignorant people would think that Quakers had a perfect right to go to Washington and respectfully petition against what they honestly believe to be politically wrong—that such conduct was no violation of their Peace Principles. Learning and understanding are what render some men so deep-far sighted, aye, and so conscientious too! How quick to detect and expose 'vanity' self 'conceit,' 'ignorance and hypocrisy in poor simple minded, unlearned ministers like those named above.

The remainder of the article is of the same stamp with that we have noticed; a most sickening and disgusting exhibition of vanity and egotism. All men and all ideas that differ from the standard erected by W are at once condemned. No mans character, opinions or religion, however pure and unsullied are suffered to escape the slanderous falsehoods of this self constituted judge of morality. A decent re... well known character and piety ... ers of these petitions, should ... entitled them to the credit ... and honesty; however much ...

W. or the speeches in Congress before alluded to and not exclaim,

"No, 'tis slander;
Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue
Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath
Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
All corners of the world; Kings, Queens, and States,
'Clergy and flock, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous Slander enters"

Duel between Cutting and Breckinridge—Painful Rumors—Great excitement in Washington.

We stop the press to announce a duel between these gentlemen, on Thursday morning for words spoken in debate. There are three reports of the same date—one that Mr. Cutting is killed, one that Mr. Breckinridge is killed — and the other that neither were hurt. The quarrel was provoked by Breckinridge and its language to the Hards is, "submission, or slaughter."

The Hards are game, and say that there shall be a fight either between Breckinridge and Cutting, or on the part of any other Hard, if the South wants it.

RUMORS OF A THREATENED INVASION OF CANADA BY RUSSIA.—Montreal, March 16—A strange story appeared some days ago in a Quebec paper, to the effect that in consequence of advices from England, the provincial post-office authorities had seized a letter intended for the Russian Government, containing a programme of an intended invasion of Canada by Russian soldiers.

It was looked on here as a hoax, but to-night, it is announced by telegraph from Quebec, that the writer of the letter has been seized, but no proof of treason was found, in consequence of his having had time to destroy his letters, and that 10,000 militia are to be called out. The matter is still considered as a humbug of some kind.

PROGRESS.—At a single bound "young America takes the pulpit. Mr. Woodbridge, of San Francisco, recently prayed for the 'Divine Protection to Walker's expedition into Sonora, and the general extension of our territory in that direction.' We have nothing more to say against 'Abolition principles."

BACKHANDED COMPLIMENTS.—The following, which we copy from the Wisconsin Times, a Loco Foco journal, is only one among the thousand lefthanded compliments which Senator Douglas is now receiving from his political friends:—

"This Senator Douglas, it will be recollected, we supported as a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1852. Our cheek tingles with shame at the remembrance that we ever, in the most remote degree, assisted to add to the political prominence of so servile a doughface."

At the election for mayor of Salem Mass., Andrews, 'Know Nothing,' received 1,251, votes, and Sutton, Whig, 511.

TOWN MEETINGS — SARATOGA — The Board of Supervisors in Saratoga county stand, Whigs 11; Loco Focos 9.

CATTARAUGUS—In the Board of Supervisors, there are 17 Whigs, 9 Democrats, 1 Free Soil, and 2 tied,

Wayne County —Not a Loco Foco Supervisor elected!—The Whigs have made almost a clean sweep—having 14 of the 15 Supervisors. Marion elects an abolitionist.

PLAIN TALK.—In reading the following our readers will remember that the N. Y. Express from which it is taken was the peculiar friend of the compromise measures of 1850:

There is something of the old 'wolf,' 'wolf' cry again in the Charleston Mercury's article now, as yore,—but we Northern men have found a way of baiting that 'wolf' with a Federal bone. Our private opinion just now, is, if the North was even to abolish slavery in South Carolina, and pay her off therefor in Federal bones, nothing would happen—but munching and crouching. We judge so from the way her politicians treat their Democratic allies North. Mr. Calhoun is not only dead, but his glowing, faithful spirit died with him.

A Western justice of the peace ordered a witness to 'come up and be sworn.' He was informed that the person was deaf and dumb. 'I don't care,' said the justice, passionately, 'whether he is or not—here is the Constitution of the United States before me. It guarantees, to every man the right of speech; and so long as I have the ... a seat on this bench, it shall neith... violated, nor, invaded. What the ... tion guarantees to a man, he shall ... eckon.'

The N. Y. Day Book.

This paper, now so much praised by the 'Soft' Organ at this place, on the 23d of August last wrote as follows:

Well—what if President Pierce is a humbug? Is it anything more than might have been expected? Is he the only specimen among us? Would he not be behind the age if he were not a humbug? Isn't this the age of humbugs, as well as the age of progress? Don't good and evil, truth and falsehood, always keep about neck and neck? Its a mighty tight race they are running, and would about as soon bet on the one as the other. If we were a betting man, we would bet on almost anything just as would best accommodate the opposite party. We would bet it was or it wasn't, it is or it isn't, it will or it won't—it wouldn't make a 'diff o, bitterence.' We would win on average half of the time, anyhow.

Did President Pierce ever say he wasn't a humbug? Not a bit of it—and the people took him for better or worse, as the smitten simpleton does the shrew, and no question asked. The dodgers of the two 'great parties' met in baltimore. One set discarded all its well known statesmen and selected a pair of military spurs and epaulettes for the intelligent freemen of the United States to vote for. The people didn't like the stripe, and so cut the candidate—it was thought that a statesman would make quite as good a civil head as a son of Mars. The other set, after a regular Kilkenny cat fight, nominated a man that not one in ten of the 'unterrified' knew anything about. He wasn't a warrior—all were agreed on that—but he might be something else; so all hands, to avoid evils they well knew, rushed upon those they knew not of—and they caught a very common bug.

Mr. Blakeley's Resignation—Mr. Storing Seated!

The contest for the disputed seat for the eighteenth Senate District, was brought to an abrupt termination in the Senate yesterday, by the resignation of the sitting member, Mr, Blakeley, and the admission of Mr. Storing, the claimant.

The course of the sitting member, in thus relinquishing an undoubted legal right to occupy his place until regularly ousted, and without exacting proof of the fact, of which he had become himself convinced, that his competitor was entitled, is highly honorable to him, and deserves the acknowledgment which was accorded to him by Senators of both political parties.

To appreciate fully the really handsome conduct of Mr. Blakeley, under the circumstance, it is only necessary to state that, if what the claimant asked had been conceded—that is, if the case had been thrown back upon the committee with instructions to take testimony in regard to the intent of the electors who voted the defective ballots, a great deal of time must necessarily have intervened before it could have been again before the Senate. The probability is that the testimony could not have been taken, printed and acted on before the close of the present session—and the matter might have been postponed until next year. As it is, Mr. Storing takes his seat and takes part in the deliberations of the Senate, at the most important stage of the present session.

Mr. Storing, it is due to him to say, asked nothing from the clemency or indulgence of his political opponents—but sought only a fair opportunity to present facts which he confidently believed entitled him to represent the 18th district—being content to rest his claim entirely upon the merits. At the same time he is not insensible to the magnanimity which yielding to a sense of justice and right cut short the contest and gave him an undisputed seat.

Curious Developments.

The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune gives the following:

One of the reasons given for this Nebraska fraud, is, that this is a 'nigger era.' It is alleged that the North is in a mood to submit to any measure of the Slavery propagandists. Late experience, it is declared, demonstrates it. Now then is the time to go the whole figure. It is only necessary to cry 'Abolition' to kill off the opposition to whatever scheme may be started. Upon this ground the conspirators say to the alarmists in the South and the hesitating traitors in the North, that the Nebraska measure is a perfectly safe measure. The northern Democracy are blind tools and will back us up. So says Cushing, so says Pierce, so says Douglas.

There are curious developments about the vote for Printer to Congress. Northern anti-Democrats all went in for The Union editor, notwithstanding that paper pushes Nebraska as a party measure.—Now, why? I will tell you. Nicholson told these anti-Nebraskians that he did not wish to crowd them, and did not believe in setting up the issue as a test of Democracy. He said he did not write the Nebraska articles complained of, but that they came from the Administration. Sometimes they were furnished by Cushing, and sometimes by Sidney Webster, and that as the paper was the Administration mill, he had to grind the grist that was sent. But personally, he was not the offending party. This explanation elected him.

The Sequel to The Plot.

WASHINGTON, Monday, March 6,

Developments may soon be expected which will establish beyond doubt the fact, that the assertion of the principle involved in the Nebraska bill is but the peliminary step toward the execution of one of the boldest and most stupendous conspiracies ever heard of. It proposes no less an achievment than the forcible seizure of Mexico, Central America, and Cuba, during the approaching struggle in Europe, and their conversion into slave States.—Here we have the key to the solution of that most inscrutable political enigma of the times, viz: the motives of those who have been most instrumental in springing this portentous question upon the country. It is said that ... CONGRESS ... of the STATE STATIONERY.—Not very long since Mr, A. B. Dickinson, introduced a resolution, which was adopted by the Senate, inquiring from the Controller the condition of the Stationery in the State House, in December last. The origin of the resolution, is the rumor to the effect that there was a great quantity of Stationery, amounting in value to thousands of dollars, actually stolen by certain clerks, under the late retiring officials, and that the most venal in the premises were near relatives of those officials. The late State officers created a sort of sinecure called the 'Stationery Department,' the duty of the incumbent of which was to 'take care of the stationery.' This officer, it seems, having been informed by some knowing one that the stationery room was frequently robbed, took the precaution on Saturday nights, before locking the door, to mark several packages, which almost invariably on Monday mornings, he would miss, and also find the room strewn with letter paper, fancy envelopes, &c., but his wits were never sufficiently sharp to detect the offenders. Thus much of the stationery was made way with. But it appears that just before being ousted the incumbents of the State House thought it advisable to make a 'clean sweep,' and it is said 'each one helped himself 'plentifully;' in particular, one of the State Officers, who had hundreds of dollars worth boxed up and directed to his residence, where it arrived safe.

In connection with this matter, it is also charged that another State Officer, transported to New York many sets of the Natural History of the State, where they were sold to certain booksellers for $20 per set, being worth $70; the proceeds of which he applied to his private use.—N. Y. Tribune

Fire.

On Saturday last, about 11 o'clock A. M. the brick dwelling, owned and occupied by Moss K. PLATT, Esq., of this village, was discovered to be on fire. The alarm having been given, people rushed to the scene, but the destroying element had gained such headway, that it was impossible to extinguish it, with the means at hand. Most of the furniture and many fixtures were saved, so slow was the progress of the flames.—The fire is supposed to have caught from the smoke pipe, in the attic, as it was first discovered in that locality. The walls are left standing, in a tolerable state of preservation, as relics of one of the best built dwellings in Plattsburgh. There was an insurance on the house and furniture of $3,200, in the Etna Insurance Company. —[Clinton Co. Whig.

Accident.—A sad accident occured at West Lawrence, St. Lawrence Co., on Wednesday last. A stage, as we learn, was conveying passengers to a railroad station, when the horses ran away, dashing the stage to atoms, fatally injuring a young lady by fracturing her skull, and very seriously injuring five other passengers, Mrs. O. T. Raymond, formerly of Keeseville, and her little son, were of the number. We saw them as they passed through this village on Wednesday last. Mrs. R. and the boy were badly bruised about the head and face and presented a most pitiable appearance. The driver was thrown from his seat, and was the only uninjured person in the affair.—[Plattsburgh Rep.

Our next week's paper.—We shall have the pleasure to lay before our readers next week, a leaf from the memories of Elkanah Watson, deceased, to which we alluded last week.

Also the remarks of the Com. of the N. Y. State Ag. Soc. on the Survey of this Co by Mr. Watson.

Also, a Com. from our able correspondent "Coe." on the Nebraska bill, together with other interesting local matters, and less of politics.

THANKS.—We are indebted to Hon. Jonathan Burnett, Hon. Geo. Richards, and Hon. S A Douglass for valuable public documents.

It is a fact that some girls don't know kisses are sweet. Kissing a pretty one the other day, she very innocently asked—'What is the use of it—and what good does it do?' 'Ah, Miss,' said we, 'what's the use lickin' lasses.'—Ex.

The following description of the Magnificent Model of the World is taken from one of the leading papers of New York city, and will well repay perusal:

and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility, is now open to the public, at the WORLD'S HALL, 377 and 379 Broadway, fitted up at an immense cost expressly for this master-piece of Art.—This is not a mere panoramic display upon canvass, but an actual structure, on Mercator's projection, of over one thousand square feet, composed of real land and water. Immense labor and enormous expense have been lavished upon the design, which is now completed. So real is the work, that all the oceans, seas, rivers, lakes, gulfs and bays, are filled with running water, upon the surface of which floats ships and steamers, visibly moving enwoyage to and from every clime. Mountains and valleys, with all the varied geographical phenomena they present, are spread out in the exact shape and form made by nature. Volcanoes visibly belch forth sulphuric flames. The dreadful maelstrom or whirlpool, off the coast of Norway, is also seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The wreck of the ill fated steamer San Francisco is represented in the right locality, and seen sinking in the boundless deep—the Three Bells, Antartic and the Kilby, whose noble commanders so bravely rescued so many of America's sons and daughters, are also in view—The north west passage, recently discovered by Captain McClure, is accurately shown and expatiated upon. The localities of the war now raging in Europe and Asia are correctly delineated. The golden fields of California and Australia are prominent in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the beholder can sway with enthusiastic raptures over the entire surface of the mighty globe, upon which, as upon a stage, he appears as an actor; and while he is surprised at the vast novelty of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of its mechanical operations, and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the amusing lesson of an hour. The best talent of the country has been employed in the preparation of this mammoth undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass, without regard to expense, have been bestowed to render it worthy of this enlightened age, the whole having been calculated from the best European charts, together with all the recent surveys by authority of the United States government. The audience is taken on a pleasant tour from pole to pole, and under the guidance of the experienced lecturer, ensured a safe passage and speedy return to their happy homes. We will only add, that such are but few of the many advantages which can be gained only by a visit to this modern wonder. In connection with the above, a perfect model of the city of San Francisco, as it now exists, with all its buildings, streets, wharves, shipping, &c made from actual measurement taken upon the spot for that purpose, built of solid material. Also, numerous panoramic views of the California regions of gold, the whole rendering it one of the most popular, interesting and instructive places of amusement in New York, or, we may safely say, in the world.

We learn that Professor Hart will shortly publish a book relative to the design of the World, including a history of his extensive travels in the Old and New World, anecdotes, &c. which must be very interesting, and should be read by the million. We are also informed that for the purpose of popularizing American Art, and for the purpose of giving his valuable book an extensive circulation, Prof. Hart proposes to give to all persons purchasing his gift tickets of admission, in any part of the world, a vast amount of valuable and elegant property.

The mere announcement of this fact by Prof. Hart is a sufficient guarantee for its merit and success, he being known throughout the Union as an extensive traveler, public speaker, merchant, and a thorough active responsible business man; and we doubt not that the immense Hall will be daily crowded to behold his modern Wonder.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

[…]SEPH LONGSHORE, M. D.

From A Woodward, M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and 'with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self-pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public, as an efficacious remedy it is also known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. In cases as Impotency, Hemorrhages, Disordered Sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluor Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a tonic Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

DEBILITY

TO FEMALES.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies would exist, where they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN.

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excess have brought on themselves Premature Impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the sensual passions, occasioning the necessity of renouncing the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

It is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations, Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE
from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,
AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

VOLUME XIV. NO. 47. KEESEVILLE, N. Y., APRIL 8, 1854. WHOLE NUMBER 518

The Republican.

KEESEVILLE:

Saturday Morning, April 8.

"The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands,
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands,
The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

Birth.

In this village, on the 27th ult., Mrs. R. G. STONE of a daughter.—Platts. Rep.

We congratulate the editor of our Plattsburgh namesake upon this addition to his family, and particularly that the new comer is a daughter,—knowing as we do, how much he has desired such a happy result, his family thus far tho' numerous, having all been boys.

THE BOATS.—We learn that Capt. Foster is to command the Canada, Capt. Flagg the America, Capt. Chamberlain the Saltus Capt. Mayo the Saranac, and Capt. Wight the Boston. All right, only we shall miss Capt. Baxter's jovial face. Capt. Wight is a stranger to us, but at the hands of each of the others above named, we have received, when on their vessels, constant and unvaried kindness, and from none, more than from Capt. Foster. We wish them all abundant honor, and success.

SORRY TO HEAR IT.—Benjamin Miner, Esq. who has kept the Valcour House for two or three years past is preparing to leave, and is selling off his effects for that purpose. It is suggested that he is to have charge of Comstock's new house at Plattsburgh, which by the way is being fitted up in most magnificent style—the painting being done by our townsman, H. H. Grandy, than whom a better fellow, or a better painter is not easily "scared up." Well, we wish them all luck—all round. But who is to keep the Valcour House? If the Boats 'run' Port Kent, we may not require a public house there.

OUR FIRST CAUSE:—On Saturday last we tried our first cause as a Magistrate.—We have not been called on to 'stand treat' but we had to 'stand' all the wiles that cunning lawyers understand so well how to place in the way of the court. It was a case of trespass, upon the 'grass, fruit, herbage, grain, hay, oats, apples, and buckwheat of plf. by the cattle, horses, colts, cows, calves, and hogs, of deft. to plf. damage, $100'—heretofore, to wit, for that whereas,' &c, &c., &c. We sum up the case thus:

1-2 day joining issue, during which time we passed upon four amended pleadings, and two demurrers,	worth	$1,00
One day trying cause,	"	2,50
Damage to business,	"	2,50
		$6,00
Cr. by costs (when paid,)		1,72
Balance,		$4.28

To this may be added the mortal hatred of the defeated party, which cant be estimated in dollars & cents. "Thus endeth the first lesson.

A VETO.—The Govr. has vetoed the Liquor Bill. The Message occupies over three columns in the Albany papers. It is based upon the following grounds:

1. That the bill authorises unusual searches, contrary to the constitution of the U. S. (See art. 4 of the amendments.)

2. That it authorises the destruction of 'property,' without 'due process of law.'

3. That it interferes with the carrying trade of the State.

4. That it imposes unusual fines and penalties, and perverts established principles of the common law.

5. That the provisions are liable to abuse, are dangerous to the liberty of citizens, injurous to the cause of temperance, &c., &c.

A RUB.—In publishing the following letter, we are perhaps affording the best "rub" we can give. We thought we were making a hard hit at the writer in giving the letter published last week to the public. We thought he deserved a "rub" and the publication of his letter was the best thing we could think of. If our friend, the Sealer of Weights & Measures of Essex, wishes a slash at him also, our columns are open. He is also entitled to know the author if he asks it:—

A Story with a Moral.

THE WIDOW'S BEAU.

BY MRS. CAROLINE A. SOULE.

Service had commenced in the neat little sanctuary, which the inhabitants of Fairmount had consecrated to the worship of God. The minister had read the Psalm and the Scripture lesson, and the first lines of the opening hymn. The eyes of his people were fixed intently upon him, for he was not only a good, sound, eloquent preacher, but he was a fine looking one too, and thus enchained usually not only the attention of the true but of the false worshipper. The house was very still—the clear, melodious tones of the speaker were the only sounds that throbbed on the balmy, golden air which the midsummer Sabbath morn had breathed into that holy place. The first syllable of the second line was trembling on his lips, when a rustle at the door, and the entrance of two persons a lady and a gentleman, dissolved the charm. In a second every eye turned from the pulpit to the broad aisle, and watched with more than ordinary interest the progress of the couple. A most searching ordeal were they subject to, and when they were fairly and quietly seated in the front pew, immediately before the pulpit, what a nudging of elbows there was, ay, and how many whispers too. In vain sought the good, the sound, eloquent, the handsome Mr. B. to seal again the attention of his hearers. They had eyes and thoughts for nobody but Widow C. and Widow C.'s young and dashing looking attendant.

How she had cheated them! Hadn't she said a hundred times or more, that her heart was in the grave of her buried one, that she never would marry again? Hadn't she refused always to walk with any of the unappropriated gentlemen of the village? Hadn't she said she didn't feel as though she could ever wear anything but mourning? And in spite of all these protestations hadn't she come out, all at once, dressed all in white, and walked into church in broad daylight, leaning on the arm of a young gentleman?

Yes, indeed she had. She would have pleaded guilty to all these charges, grave ones as they were, and to the last, too, how many witnesses might be supœnaed. She was actually dressed in white. A beautiful robe of India mull, tucked to the waist, with an open corsage, displaying an elaborately wrought chemisette, drapery sleeves trimmed with the richest of Mechlin lace, undersleeves of the same expensive material, a white crape shawl, and white lace hat with orange buds, white kid gloves and light gaiters;—such was the description every lady had on her tongue's end to repeat over as soon as services were closed. And the gentleman—he too was dressed in style. Didn't he wear white pants of the latest pattern, and a white vest, and a coat of 'satin finish,' and white kids too? and didn't he sport a splendid and a massive chain, and didn't he gaze often and tenderly on the fair creature beside him? Ah, yes, he did so, and there was no further room to doubt. Widow C. had cheated them. She had won a beau, laid aside her mourning, put on a bridal attire, and was going to be married in church. But who the beau was, or whence he came, was more difficult to solve.

Service proceeded. The choir sang, the minister prayed and preached—the people wondered when the ceremony would take place. But to their utter astonishment, they were left to wonder.—For when the benediction was pronounced, Widow C. with the rest of the congregation, walked quitely out of the church. When they reached the pavement, he offered his arm very gracefully, and she placed her arm very confidingly on the beautifully soft coat-sleeve, and they passed on.

What a nooning was that in Fairmount! What a world of conjectures, surmises, inquiries and doubts rolled over in the brains of not only gossiping ladies, but sober, matter-of-fact gentlemen. The like of such a thing had never occurred before in the annals of the village. There was something new under the sun—a lady had a beau, and nobody knew it. Widow C.! Didn't your ears, not only on the right, but the left, burn that day? Ah, we wonder they hadn't dropped off—surely they must been crisp and crimson'

The Rev. Mr. B. preached to a crowded house that afternoon; no compliment to him though. The magnet was in the pew before him. Every one was sure that the wedding would take place then; but everybody was sadly disappointed, and if tongues had run at railroad speed before, they travelled then on the electric wires.—The minister might have preached in Greek that day, and his sermon would have been quite as edifying. But one subject engrossed the village mind. The widow's beau—that was the topic.

It actually seemed, too, as though the lady tried to make all the talk she could. After tea, arm in arm, with the strange gentleman, she walked the whole length of the village and away out into the cemetery, and never returned till the moon was high.

'A nice looking dress, I guess she had on,' drawled out old granma W———, as she listened to the widow's wanderings. I'm glad I haint got to wash it, all drabbled up as it must have been—but I don't suppose she thought or cared a word about it, she's so carried away with him. But I'll give her a piece of my mind, the first time that I have a chance, see if I don't. Cheat us all, this way.'

The old lady hobbled over to the widow's as soon as possible, and one of the neighbors said Mrs. C.———and the gentleman went off in a carriage, nobody know where, very early in the morning. 'Yes, and did not return till very late in the evening.' Look out, Widow C.———! your character is on the carpet!

If she knew it, apparently, she did'nt care, for the next day she went a sailing with her beau, and on the next forenoon went with him to the station house, and there not only wept as she parted from him, but actually embraced and kissed him.

'What, in broad day-light?' exclaimed Grandma W———. 'Well, if I ever seed or heard the like on't.'

Little Nell, the old lady's youngest grand child, wondered to herself if it were any worse in broad day-light than any other time. Perhaps you will wonder too. We do, at least.

There was a very large attendance that afternoon at the weekly meeting of the sewing society. Every body went that could possibly leave home. And what chattering there was after the bustle of assembling was over. There was but one topic, but that one was all-sufficient, all-engrossing—the widow's beau—for the gentleman must be her beau, or at least he ought to be.

Every body had something to tell, something to wonder about. But suddenly every magpie tongue was hushed, a universal stroke of numbpalsy seemed to have fallen on the group, as looking up, they perceived the very lady about whom they were conversing so eagerly, standing in the door-way.

'Good afternoon, ladies,' said she, in her usual quiet way. 'I'm glad to see so large and happy a gathering. It's a beautiful day for our meeting;' and then she proceeded to the table, helping herself to a block of patchwork, inquiring for the sewing silk, which having received she sat down in the only vacant chair, and commenced hemming a very red bird with a yellow wing on to a green twig, which latter had been hemmed on to a square piece of white cloth, and the whole completed was designed to form the twentieth part of a bed-spread. She seemed all engrossed with the bird's bill, and spoke to no one. Everybody wondered if she had heard what they were saying when she came in, but her placid countenance soon re-assured the most fearful, and every one longed to commence a personal attack.

Old Grandma W———was the first to do up the matter very delicately, in so round about way,' the lady should not suspect her of curiosity. So she began to praise Mrs. C.,———'s dress. 'Why, it is a real beauty,' said she; 'where did you get it?'

'I bought it,' was the quiet reply.

'Here?'

'No,'

'Where then?'

'In New York, last spring.'

'O, you did, did you? But I thought you wasn't going to wear anything but black again.' Every eye scrutinized the lady's face this time in search of a blush, but it continued as pale as was usual, while she answered:

'I did think and say so once, but I have finally changed my mind.'

'You have, ha! Here the hearers and lookers-on winked expressively at each other.

'But didn't you spoil your beautiful white dress Sunday night, wearing it way up there to the burying ground?'

'I did not.'

'You didn't! du tell! But how could you help it? There was a wonderful heavy dew,'

'I did not wear it.'

Here was a damper to the lady.—She had such a long lecture to read on extravagance, and she was so determined to do it, too, when, unfortunately for her eloquent strain, Mrs. C———'s dress had hung up in her wardrobe all the time, and she had worn an old black silk.

After a time the old lady took a fresh start. She would not be so baffled again. She would find out all about that beau before she went home, 'that she would.' So she began by saying, 'your company went away this morning, didn't they?'

'They did,' was the answer, a wee bit of emphasis resting on the they.

'He didn't stay very long, did he?'

'Not as long as I wished he had,' was the emphatic answer this time. And how the ladies did look at each other. It was as good as a confession.

'When did he come?'

'Saturday evening.'

'Was you looking for him?'

'I had been expecting him a fortnight.'

'Why, du tell, if you had then, and you never told on't either. Had he business in the place?'

'He had.'

'What was it?' This was rather more direct and blunt than the old lady had meant to put it, and she forthwith apologized by saying, 'I didn't mean that—I—I only thought that—I—'

'O, I'd as lief you knew as not,' said the lady, with a charming air of naivete, 'he came to see me.'

O, Widow C———, didn't your good name go down then. Be careful what you say next, or you'll have only a remnant of character to go home with, and remnants always to go cheap.

'He did, did he, and he didn't come for nothing else then? But was you glad to see him?'

'Indeed I was. It was one of the happiest moments of my existence.'

'Well, well,' said the lady, hardly knowing how to frame her question, 'a real good-looking man, anyway.'

'You don't say that! But is he rich?'

'Worth a hundred thousand or so,' said the lady carelessly.

'Why, du tell, if he is. Why, you will live like a lady, wont you? But what's his name?'

The old lady's curiosity was now roused to the highest pitch.

'Henry Macon.'

'Macon. Macon! Why, wasn't that your name before you was married?'

'It was.'

'Then he's a connection, is he?'

'De tell, if he is then? Not a cousin, I hope. I never did think much of marriages between cousins.'

'Henry is not my cousin.'

'He isn't. Not your cousin! But what connection is he, then, du tell, now?'

'He is my youngest brother.'

If ever there was a rapid progress made in sewing and knitting by any circle of ladies, it was by those composing this society, for the next fifteen minutes. Not a word was uttered, not an eye raised.—Had the latter been done, and the rougish and expressive glances, which passed between Mrs. C———and the minister, who unobserved, had stood on the threshold, a silent spectator and curious hearer, perhaps, mind you, we only say perhaps, they might have guessed more correctly the name, character, standing and profession of the Widow's Beau. 'Why, hem! why certainly, madam,' replied the doctor, 'it is owing to the fact they came into the world without the power of speech!'

'La me! remarked the old lady, 'now jest see what it is to have a physic edication; I've axed my gold man more nor a hundred times, that are same thing, and all I could ever git out on him was 'kase they is!'

'Well, I'm glad I axed you, for I never should a died satisfied without knowin' it.'

The author of the following lines is said to be a distant relative to Alexander Smith, the poet. His name is probably John. He is in a fair way to become celebrated as Alexander:

Abigail Brown,
With a bran new gown,
Went down to see her sister;
When Jonathan Lee,
As brisk as a flea,
Jumped right up and kissed her.

'How dreadfully that cigar smells!' exclaimed Cushing to a companion, 'why, it's an awful smelling thing.'

'Oh, no! it's not the cigar that smells,' was the reply.

'What is it, then?' inquired Cushing.

'Why, it's your nose that smells, of course; that's what noses are made for.'

The Serenade.

BY A WANDERING MINSTREL.

PRELUDE.

Ye Sawmills, all be mute!
Ye Gristmills, all run dry!
The laboring air distils its drops,
And thunder, fill the sky!

NARRATIVE.

Romantic Maid.

"Hark! o'er the lake rings
My love's guitar!
Hush! my beating heart!
He'll wake—papa!

"Nearer! oh, now he will
His fond suit renew!
My hair's all in papers—
Oh, what shall I do!

"Hist! to his voice chimes
The gondolier's oar;
Heavens! my pa wakes!
No! 'twas but a snore."

Romantic Lovyer.

"Waken, my dear!
Oh, list to my song,
On the night breeze
It hastens along.

"See! the moon trembles
In light on the lake;
So trembles my fond heart,
Awake! dearest, wake!"

Romantic Maid.

"Come up to the window,
Mine own dearest love;
But, oh! wake not father,
Who sleeps just above"

Lightly the true lovyer
Crept to the window;
Such was his happiness,
He cheerfully grinned, O!

Softly a casement
Ope'd o'er his head,
And a gruff voice, thus,
Most savagely said;—

Indignant papa, and lovyer.

"Seek you for me, sir?
"Ah! no—for your daughter."
"Do you? take this then!"
And he soused him with water.

Sadly the lovyer sneaked Slowly away; to the skin, did he rewell! tinkle

A GOOD ONE.—A YOUNG sprig of a doctor once met at a convivial party, several larks who were bent upon placing in his hat a very heavy brick, or, in plain language, to make him gloriously drunk, which they accomplished at about ten o'clock at night. The poor doctor insisted on going and the party accompanied him to the stable to aid him to mount his horse, which they did with his face to the animal's tail.

'Hallo!' says the doctor, after feeling for the rein, I'm inside out on the horse, or face behind, I don't know which—something wrong anyhow.'

'So you are,' exclaimed one of the wags. 'Get off, doctor, and we will put you on right'

'Get off the d——l!' hiccoughed the doctor. No, you don't. Jest turn the hoss 'round and it'll all come right. You must be all drunk!'

The horse was turned around but he turned with it, so he got off and staid till he was sober.

A Voucher. A man once went to purchase a horse of a Quaker.

'Will he draw well?' asked the buyer.

'Thee will be pleased to see him draw.'

The bargain was concluded, and the farmer tried the horse, but he would not stir a step. He returned, and said:—

'That horse will not draw an inch.'

'I did not tell thee that he would draw, friend; I only remarked that it would please thee to see him draw; and so it would me, but he never gratified me in that respect.'

PRIDE IN PATCHES. A little fellow from four to five years old, having perforated the knee of his trowsers, was intensely delighted with a patch his grandmamma had applied. He would sit and gaze upon it in a state of remarkable admiration, and in one of these moods suddenly exclaimed—

'Grandma must put one on t'other knee, and two behind, like Eddy Smith's.'

If the boy lives, he will beat Gov. Marcy two to one,—[Ex.

[That is a noble boy—he will certainly be President if he lives. "Pride in patches!" Was there ever such another boy? We have often heard it said that a noble heart will shine through plain clothes, and even rags, and it is true. "It is not the external but the internal qualifications, that should recommend a man to" the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens. Think of that boys.]

Fashions.

Shawls:—An Ohio paper says that the fashion of dandies wearing shawls had its origin in that State, and in the following manner.—A swell who had attended a party, got so much intoxicated that he could not tell a shawl from a cloak and therefore on retiring took a shawl, supposing he had his cloak, and marched with it through the streets. The small fry seeing what was done, thought a new fashion had come, and fell in with it at once.

[Poughkeepsie Eagle.

We go in for Woman's Rights—if the men takes to ladies shawls, let the latter have the br—pantaloons.—[Ex.

[The "small fry" having now pretty generally fallen into the fashion of shawls, the "swells" have adopted an article called Scotch plaids, a material coarser than horse blankets. We expect to see the "smal fry" follow suit, when the "swells" will start something else.]

Lady's Hats and Gent's Cravats:—[The person who got off the following on cravats must have been the one who told a friend to observe a lady coming round a corner, and added, "if you watch a few minutes you will see a bonnet following her!" When we see such fashions we think of the fable of the fox which having lost his tail tried to persuade his comrades that it was the "fashion." The brutes more sensible than man declined to imitate what appeared to them an extravagant folly.]

☞ While in Boston a day or two since, we met a———cravat! that has haunted us ever since. There was probably a man or something human behind it, but if so, we did not see him, and could not see him; but the cravat—the necktie—the (whatever the wearer called it) we did see, and it was 'one of them,' or rather, it was 'all' of them!—a vast collective world of necktie voluminous as Ex-Senator Borland's address to the Nicaragua Council, and assuming as the Cushing letter, but decidely more correct in his arrangement. As we remember there was a lean pair of breeches beneath its own Brobdignagian—breach—of property, surmounted by a diminutive and very bob-tailed coat, with gilt buttons; about three of the lowest inches of the vest were also visable; but the head (doubtless a small one,) was, (as the modest gentlemen from the country, thought Power's Eve ought to be) 'veiled' wholly by the vast protuberance of flowered silk. Lost in admiration, we involuntarily stopped as the cravat passed us, stepping aside to give it room, and the passers-by smiled; but whether at the marvelous cravat, or our verdency, we could not tell.

We should like to know the wearer, nevertheless; for a man possessing the amount of moral courage necessary to defy public taste with such a cravat as this, must be a nice man to know, in spite of his little legs, diminutive stature, and limited phrenological developments. He 'runs' to neckties, evidently; but there is no danger of his wicked, though he preseveringly tried. Will some one introduce him.—The attention of modists is requested.—[Clinton Courant.

THE ROYAL FAMILY OF RUSSIA.—The following amiable family picture may be interesting at this time, when Russia is thrusting her ursine nose into the politics of Europe:—

Peter I, the founder, as he may be called, of the present imperial family, was the murderer of the two daughters and the sons of his brother Ivan, and the murderer, it is asserted, according to more than one of the annalists of his reign, by his own hand of Alexis. He was himself murdered by Menzicoff (a name that has again risen up in history), the favorite of his wife Catherine, who, when united to Peter, was already the wife of a living husband, and their children were afterwards declared incapable of reigning because born in sin.—Anne, the eldest daughter of Ivan, put 14,000 Russians to death and banished twice as many. A revolution displaced the young Ivan, to put on the throne Elizabeth, daughter of Peter I., and her reign was remarkable for her drunkenness and debauchery. Peter III. was notoriously the offspring of crime, and was dethroned and strangled by his wife, Catherine II, the same infamous woman who assassinated the dethroned Emperor Ivan, and whose own son Paul—the father of the present Emperor Nicholas—was strangled by his courtiers.—Ex.

[Yet, such men and such families claim to rule by right Divine. We should say, rather by a special commission from the Prince of Darkness. It is a rule in monarchical governments that "the king can do no wrong," and the ministers are responsible for misrule. The above facts, and all history, are a standing commentary on the absurdity of the principle. The people are beginning to find out the debaucheries, corruptions, and profligacy of their rulers, and that their vices and intermarriages are fast reducing them to idiots, and hence the coming war in Europe will be one of fearful account.]

ESSEX Co. March 1854.

Was the "Missouri Compromise" abrogated, superceded, or dishonored by the action of Congress in 1850?—

The present disturbance of the public tranquility by the temporary success of the Nebraska Bill, demands for this question a calm, deliberate, and well considered answer. No loose or equivocal construction, or gloss put on any subsequent act, should bias our judgment in a matter which may peril the interests of the nation.

The friends of the Bill rest the strength of their argument on the assumption, that the Missouri Compromise was superceded and rendered nugatory, by the acts of 1850; and that Congress did then establish a new principle of legislation in regard to territories, which is known by the imposing soubrique of "non intervention."

In order to show an invalidation of a deliberate compact, it should be made to appear, that it was the intention of the parties in interest to dissolve and set it aside;—or, (which is the same thing) that some new contract has superceded, and swallowed it up.

Do the 'acts,' or debates of that session show any such intention? It is said by the propaganda of the 'Institution of Slavery,' that the friends of the compromise of 1850 strenuously resisted every attempt to extend this dividing line between slavery and freedom, on the same parallel to the Pacific Ocean; thereby repudiating the principle on which the compromise rested.

We admit the fact stated; but the legitimacy of the conclusion drawn by construction we deny; and show our reasons for it. First California then stood at the door of Congress asking to be admitted to the Union, as a Free State. But to have extended the Compromise line, as then proposed by the Propaganda, would have excluded about three fifths of her territory, consigning it to the curse of slavery, against the expressed will of its inhabitants. The remaining two fifths could not be received till their delegate had returned to the people, the preliminaries had again been enacted, and a delegate dispatched to try the fortunes of intrigue in an American Congress! this, which in our new coined cant is denominated 'squatter sovereignty,' would have been an outrageous instance of squatter oppression, had not the friends of the compromise withstood it. This shameful oppression, the present saints of Non intervention were uniting, and clamorous to perpetrate!

Second, A consideration which had great influence to delay, at least any new adjustment of that compromise, was that the territorial limits of the U. States had been suddenly and recently expanded by removing southern boundary several degrees of latitude further south. When the compromise line was established, it was intended to express, either an equilibrium between slave and free territory, or, to limit slavery from within the boundaries then assigned it, the free states understood it in this latter sense. But either construction will show that a refusal then to continue that line to the Pacific, was not a repudiation of either its letter or spirit. The country in dispute had not yet been well surveyed,—its features explored,—and no just equilibrium, had it been sought, could be presumed on that line. There was also another contingency resting on our southern boundary then, and still resting upon it, of no small importance: in the unsettled and unhappy condition of Mexico. It was then thought, and still remains probable, that at no very distant day, that Sister Republic will find repose and prosperity, in the bosom of our own confederacy. Are the free states then to be shut off, by the line of 36° 30', from all participation in an acquisition, for which, whenever it occurs, a very large draft will be made on our common treasury? Let any competent authority make this declaration once, and it will not need to be repeated! No anterior compact will be of much value then!

Under all the circumstances, the Free States did refuse to be shut up in these limits, extended to the Pacific, or across it at the pleasure of opposing interests!—And for this act of folly, it is claimed they have lost all they ever did possess!

But how does it appear at all evident, or how does it follow as a consequence, that a refusal on the part of the free states to acknowledge that parallel as the dividing line between freedom and slavery, did violate and destroy the Missouri Compromise within its own limits? It depended for its validity on no such condition. What if the free states had consented, from motives of policy, that all the newly acquired territory, extending to lat. 42' N. should be given up to slavery; would such an argument have made it lawful, for slavery to take possession of the reserved Lousiania territory also? If so, by what construction of law? What evidence would it afford, of any intentional abandonment of the compromise? This, reader, is the foundation,—the corner stone on which the Nebraska Bill rests! Does the assumed adoption of the principle of "Non-Intervention" by Congress, in the government of Territories, stand on any better foundation? Let us examine. Oregon territory in 1848 and Minnesota territory in 1849, were admitted to territorial privileges, with the inhibition of slavery. Did this form a precedent? In 1850 New Mexico, and Utah, were admitted to the same privileges, and no restrictive enactment was interposed by Congress. Did this form a precedent?

What man of common sense can find in these transactions a precedent, amounting to an established principle of non-intervention? Nothing of the kind appears in the transactions of 1850. That these territories were erected into governments, without the reiteration of restrictive ordinances, is readily admitted; but that such omission was at the time intended to establish the principle of non-intervention, has not a shadow of evidence—the whole circumstances of the case show, that no such intention was entertained.

There had been a severe struggle of conflicting oppinions, prolonging the labor of the session, till there seemed to be no alternative; but, withholding altogether any jority of Congress adopted for the occasion And now, because no prohibitory conditions were imposed, it is apotheosised as a "principle of non-intervention." Was this deliberately establishing a precedent, nay principle, which was to guide our Legislation in all future time, and, with the odious element of a post facto law, sweeping back for more than thirty years? Heaven save us from such legislation! There is a boldness in asserting such a precedent, of which the word temerity is not a measure. But even this is not a full view of the flimsiness of this pet protension. For, at the time of the discussion of these Bills, men of the highest character, excelling in talent integrity, worth, that the south has ever produced, and in their office as Senators, and Representatives of the people, declared over and over again that as a practical subject, it was not worth controversy, as slavery could never be established in those territories, for substantial reasons. First, by the treaty of Gaudaloupe Hidalgo, by legalizing all the Mexican laws, and ordinances, not inconsistent with the Constitution of the U. S. Slavery was already inhibited by those laws. Second. It was also secured from the encroachments of slavery by the laws of nature; it was said that the soil and climate were inhospitable to the African race—unpropitious to slavery.—These statements, made in solemn debate by Southern men of undisputed gravity, were received, believed, by northern Statesmen, and they withdrew from pressing farther the reiteration of prohibitory acts. Has any decent man, either in or out of Congress, impudence enough to stand up in the face of this nation and say, that the statements thus made were all gasconade, intended only to delude the opponents of slavery, and thus disarm their vigilance? Such a declaration can never come, but from suspicious lips!

We may, with all respect, tho' not without some difficulty, admit that these gentlemen were mistaken, in respect to the capabilities of the African race to endure the transfer to these territories, and be useful; nor does that essentially affect the case, since it was supposed, that the Mexican prohibition of slavery was in force by the condition of the treaty. The constitutionality of such a prohibition had not then been questioned. Nor can the power of Congress to prohibit slavery in the territories be demanded, but by denying the same to the States; for Congress has precisely the power over the territories, that a state government has over the state. Congress in her government of the territorics, simply supplies the lack of U. States Government. Will any of the advocates of "squatter sovereignty" deny this fact openly? We would like to know whether we are to have 'squatter sovereignty,' and squatter serfdom, in the same dish?

If absolutely necessary to U. S. government that it should impose slavery on the state by law, then it is the duty of Congress to impose it on the territories; if not, then not. What inconsistency then is found in the Mexican law of freedom, with the constitution of the U. States? If none, then that ordinance holds by treaty, and there was no need to reiterate the prohibition in erecting territorial governments.

Under the safety of this shield, the free side of Congress withdrew from insisting; leaving the territories to form their own structure of state government according to their own choice.

This, and no more than this is the formidable precedent or "principle" of non-intervention, established by Congress in 1850, sweeping back to transactions of 30 years standing,—violating alike good faith and good logic!

Let every good citizen, well and calmly consider, whether he would quietly accept such a violation of faith.

WATSON'S ESSEX COUNTY.

The volume of the "Transactions of the New York State Agricultural Society," recently published by the Legislature, acquires increased interest, from containing an admirable history of the County of Essex in this State, by the Hon. Winslow C. Watson, which embraces the civil, political and natural history, physical geography, mineralogy, geology, industrial progress and pursuits, and agriculture of that interesting region of New York. The Committee of the Society speak in high terms of Mr. Watson's labours, and the ability displayed in the accomplishment of the work committed to his care, and and thus report:—"Time has already enveloped many historical facts in misty obscurity in the investigation of which Mr. Watson has happily dispelled the clouds, exhibiting to us treasures of truth and art. In this respect we regard the civil history of Essex as an important link in the records of our country. The division appropriated to the physical history and topography of the county, opens to view wild regions and scenes, temptiug the imagination to pass from facts and realities to poetic dreams and fancies. The mountain precipice and cataract, the murky glen and Indian pass, are truthfully depicted; while the treasures of ravines, rich in gems, and still more valuable in mineral deposits, exhibit sources of wealth and commercial exchange, rich beyond our previous hopes. The discoveries of Mr. Watson claimed from him a perseverance and intrepidity which, in an eminent degree, have marked his character and, we think, entitle him to a distinguished rank among the patrons and friends of the State Society, and especially of his much favoured county. He has exhibited the industrial resources of Essex County with ability, explaining their commercial economy, their rise and fall, and present progress." The work certainly developes, in a graceful style, matters of historical interest, and the rich resources of the county and exhibits a higher order of talent in the writer, which we hope to see further evidence of in future contributions in the field of general literature.—[Home Journal.

DEATH OF AN EDITOR.—The Whitehall Chronicle announces the decease of Joseph D. Blount, who was at the time of his death one of the publishers of that paper, and a gentleman of promise.

[Extract from memoirs &c., of ELKANAH WATSON.]

CAPTURE OF CORNWALLIS.

Soon after my return to Paris, I dined and spent the evening with the immortal Franklin. Arriving at an early hour, I discovered the philosopher in a distant room, reading in the exact posture in which he is represented by an admirable engraving from his portrait: his left arm resting upon the table, and his chin supported by the thumb of his right hand.—The mingling in the most refined and exalted society of both Hemispheres has communicated to his manners a blandness and urbanity, well sustained by his native grace and elegance of deportment. His venerable locks waving over his shoulders, and the dignity of his personal appearance command reverance and respect; and yet his manners are so pleasant and facinating, that one feels at ease and unrestrained in his presence. He inquired if I knew he was a musician, and conducted me across the room to an instrument of his own invention, which he called the Harmonica.—The music was produced by a peculiar combination of hemispherical glasses. At my solicitation, he played upon it, and performed some Scotch pastorals with great effect. The exhibition was truly striking, to thus contemplate an eminent Statesman in his 76 year, and the most distinguished philosopher of the age, performing a simple pastoral on an instrument of his own construction. The interest was not diminished by the fact, that this philosopher, who was guiding the intellects of thousands; that this Statesman, an object of veneration in the metropolis of Europe, and who was influencing the destiny of nations; had been an untutored printers boy in America.

Our conversation during the evening was turned to the all absorbing subject, of the great combination of the French and American armies against Cornwallis. Our last information left the affairs in Virginia, in a precarious and doubtful posture.—De Grasse had entered the Chesapeake,—Washington and Rochambeau had united their forces. De Barras with seven sail of the line, had left Rhode Island to join De Grasse.

The British fleet had left from New York with 10,000 troops to relieve Cornwallis, and it was reported that a reinforcement had sailed from England for New York.—Thus stood the general aspect of our intelligence, at a crisis which seemed to involve the existence of a young Empire. We weighed probabilities, balanced possible vicissitudes; dissected maps. We feared that the British fleet might intercept De Barras, at the capes of Virginia, and thus retrieve its superiority over De Grasse; attack and overwhelm him, and landing their army, defeat and break up the combinations of Washington. The philosophy and self possession even of Franklin seemed almost to abandon him. The vibrations of hope and fear, occupied his mind; and still I could perceive in him, a deep conviction of a successful issue to the operations of Washington. I left him at night in the company of De Bancroft, an American residing in London, but an ardent Whig; and returned to Paris in deep despondency, sighing over the miseries of our bleeding country.

At dawn the next morning, I was aroused by a thundering rap at my door. It brought me a circular from Doct. Franklin; struck off by a machine somewhat similar to the copying machine of the present day; and with what unspeakable thankfulness and thrilling interest I read its contents.—It was as follows:—"Copy of a note from Count De Vergennes to Doct. Franklin, dated Versailles 19th, Nov. 1781,—11 o'clock at night.

"Sir, I cannot better express my gratitude to you, for the news you often communicate to me, than in making you acquainted, that the Duc. Lausan arrived this morning with the agreeable news, that the combined armies of France and America have forced Cornwallis to capitulate. The English garrison came out of Yorktown the 18th of October, with honors of war, and laid down their arms as prisoners. About 6000 troops, 800 sailors—22 stand of colours—and 170 pieces of cannon—75 of which are brass—are the trophies which signalized this victory; besides a ship of 50 guns, which was burnt, also a frigate and great number of transports."

I have the honor &c.,
De Vergennes."

To His Excely. Dr. Franklin.*

The delight and rejoicings of all classes of the people were excessive. Paris was illuminated for three successive nights. On my return to Nantes along the Line I found all the cities in a blaze of illumination, and Nantes in the midst of it on my arrival.

Obituary.

DIED—suddenly—at the Methodist Parsonage in Peru village at 10 P. M. April 4th of Putrid sore throat, and croup, after an illness of a few days,

Mrs. Amanda, M. Consort of Rev John Thomson of the Troy Conference of the Methodist, E. Church, in sure and certain hope of a glorious Immortality. For more than twenty two years she had sustained the character of a christian, an affectionate Wife, and Mother, she was rather retiring, and modest in her manners, a woman of rather few words but an excellent judge of character. In her advice and counsel her husband always safely trusted. Her children always were the subjects of her care and solicitude even when in the agonies of death. For the last 14 years as the companion of an itinerant Minister, she bore the toils and sacrifices consequent to her relation to the church, without murmering. Indeed, many a time when her husband would yield to discouragements a word, or a look from her would invigorate his spirits. Her motto, appeared to be "Hope on Hope ever." She did not realize her situation until a few hours before her death. But when advised of the fact she girded herself for the conflict, lifted her heart to God in prayer, gave various directions; called each of her four daughters by name, sent messages to the two oldest who were absent from home, kissed her two youngest commending them and her deeply bereaved companion to God, said to him 'preach as long as you are able.'—Prayer was offered for her by the Rev. John Graves. She raised her hands and said distinctly three times "Praise the Lord," and without scarcely a struggle or a groan closed her eyes in death at 10, P. M. in the 40th year of her age, amid the tears of her family and many friends who came in after church to witness the closing scene. May the Almighty arm and sustain the bereaved family. COM.

"Liberty and Union."

The Journal of Commerce endeavors to revive the exploded 'Disunion' Hobgoblin, which proved so successful, one dark night, at Castle Garden, a while ago. Thus:—

"The benefits of such a Union as we enjoy, ought not to be put in the slightest jeopardy, by the question how the Rocky Mountain region shall ultimately be settled. * * * *

The picture of the consequences of disunion cannot be too often exhibited, and ought ever to be exhibited when irritating questions arise between the Northern and Southern States. It should be urged upon the attention of both sections of the country."

But it is work thrown away. That game has been played out. That dilapidated old spectre has been exhibited once too often already, and the public has had very little faith in it since, on pulling aside the sheet, they found there was only Messrs Tombs and Stephens inside of it. Even Tombs and Stephens have not had the face to bring it forward again in their recent speeches.

Who seeks to put the Union 'in jeopardy?' Not the North. This time no one can say "Northern aggression." The North demands nothing. All that it asks is to have everything left as it is. It is the South that demands changes, and threatens aggression. The idea of the South's dissolving the Union on account of a self-imposed grievance which it has endured without a word of complaint for the last thirty-four years, is a little too ridiculous.

The time of such idle fears has gone by. Every day the conviction gains ground in the Union, that the way to deal with sedition is not to give it strength by concessions, but to meet it as Washington met it in Pennsylvania, as Gen. Jackson met it in South Carolina, and as Gen. Taylor would have met it in Georgia, Every day it becomes more palpable that sectional demands can never be appeased by yielding National Rights, and that the true and only way to "save the Union" is to go back to the Principles, Ordinances and compacts of those who founded it. It is an idea of modern growth that it is held together by the reluctant consent of conflicting interests In their day it was believed that so long as Justice was saved and Liberty preserved, Union would take care of itself, and could not be broken up—Albany Journal.

☞ ST. PATRICK'S DAY.—Some accounts represent that St. Patrick was born at midnight on the 8th day of March, and others say it was a little after midnight, and that the 9th is, therefore, the day that should be celebrated. Few persons, we believe, understand why the Irish celebrate the 17th, and we will not undertake to say that the reasons assigned in the lines of the ballad quoted below is the true reason, although the whole story has the appearance of being truly Irish:—[Alb. Journal.

On the eighth day of March it was, some people say,
That St. Patrick, at midnight, he first saw the day;
While others declare 'twas the ninth he was born,
And 'twas all a mistake between midnight and morn;
For mistakes will occur in a hurry and shock.
And some blamed the baby, and some blamed the clock—
Till with all their cross-questions, sure no one could know
If the child was to fast, or the clock was to slow.
At last both the factions so positive grew
That each kept a birth-day, so Pat then had two,
Till Father Malachy, who showed them their sins,
Said, 'No one could have two birth-days but a twins.'
Says he, "Boys, don't be fighting for eight or for nine;
Don't be always dividing—but sometimes combine;
Combine eight with nine, and seventeen is the mark,
So let that be his birth-day."—"Amen," says the Clerk.
"If he wasn't a twins, sure our history will show
That at least, he's worth any two saints that we know?
Then they all got blind drunk, which completed their bliss,
And we keep up the practice from that day to this.

The following description of the Magnificent Model of the World is taken from one of the leading papers of New York city, and will well repay perusal:—

PROF. HART'S WHOLE WORLD.

THE Entire World at one view, in magnificent and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility, is now open to the public, at the WORLD'S HALL, 377 and 379 Broadway, fitted up at an immense cost expressly for this master-piece of Art.—This is not a mere panoramic display upon canvass, but an actual structure, on Mercator's projection, of over one thousand square feet, composed of real land and water. Immense labor and enormous expense have been lavished upon the design, which is now completed. So real is the work, that all the oceans, seas, rivers, lakes, gulfs and bays, are filled with running water, upon the surface of which floats ships and steamers, visibly moving envoyage to and from every clime. Mountains and valleys, with all the varied geographical phenomena they present, are spread out in the exact shape and form made by nature. Volcanoes visibly belch forth sulphuric flames. The dreadful maelstrom or whirlpool, off the coast of Norway, is also seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The wreck of the ill fated steamer San Francisco is represented in the right locality, and seen sinking in the boundless deep—the Three Bells, Antartic and the Kilby, whose noble commanders so bravely rescued so many of America's sons and daughters, are also in view—The north west passage, recently discovered by Captain McClure, is accurately shown and expatiated upon. The localities of the war now raging in Europe and Asia are correctly delineated. The golden fields of California and Australia are prominent in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the beholder can sway with enthusiastic raptures over the entire surface of the mighty globe, upon which, as upon a stage, he appears as an actor; and while he is surprised at the vast novelty of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of its mechanical operations, and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the amusing lesson of an hour. The best talent of the country has been employed in the preparation of this mammoth undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass, without regard to expense, have been bestowed to render it worthy of this enlightened age, the whole having been calculated from the best European charts, together with all the recent surveys by authority of the United States government. The audience is taken on a pleasant tour from pole to pole, and under the guidance of the experienced lecturer, ensured a safe passage and speedy return to their happy homes. We will only add, that such are but few of the many advantages which can be gained only by a visit to this modern wonder. In connection with the above, a perfect model of the city of San Francisco, as it now exists, with all its buildings, streets, wharves, shipping, &c made from actual measurement taken upon the spot for that purpose, built of solid material. Also, numerous panoramic views of the California regions of gold, the whole rendering it one of the most popular, interesting and instructive places of amusement in New York, or, we may safely say, in the world.

We learn that Professor Hart will shortly publish a book relative to the design of the World, including a history of his extensive travels in the Old and New World, anecdotes, &c. which must be very interesting, and should be read by the million. We are also informed that for the purpose of popularizing American Art, and for the purpose of giving his valuable book an extensive circulation, Prof. Hart proposes to give to all persons purchasing his gift tickets of admission, in any part of the world, a vast amount of valuable and elegant property.

The mere announcement of this fact by Prof. Hart is a sufficient guarantee for its merit and success, he being known throughout the Union as an extensive traveler, public speaker, merchant, and a thorough active responsible business man; and we doubt not that the immense Hall will be duly crowded to behold his modern Wonder.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style. avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exhlusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or pirvate nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate. or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D

From A Woodward, M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and 'with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their harge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self-pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled. if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ. on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs an Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public, as an efficious remedy it is a so known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness where the patent has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart. Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not supperior to any Compound ever used.

TO FEMALES.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhapiness among Ladies would exist, where they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to, are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN.

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. It possesses rane virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

it is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations. Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a DREADFUL INHERITANCE from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health, and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

MAINE, NEW HAMPSHIRE, CONNECTICUT, RHODE ISLAND!

☞A stiff upper lip is as essential to success as three meals per diem is to living.—[Old saying.

Certainly. If out at the pockets, and out at the elbows, 'a stiff upper lip' will carry one over the wants of both. If ig norant as a horse block, still 'a stiff upper lip' will enable one to pass through an interview with the best of scholars. Whatever one's proper sphere in life, 'a stiff upper lip' will introduce one to the first circles of the 'best society.' 'Time is money' says the old proverb but 'brass' in the human face, or in other words, 'a stiff upper lip' is equivalent to both knowledge and money. 'As a man thinketh so is he,' If a man puts a high estimation upon himself, or keeps 'a stiff upper lip'—others will be very apt to imbibe the same notions There is no folly which man can invent that will not have its followers. No nation is more respected than that which is supposed to be ready and able to take care of itself. So with man. A path will be cleared for the man who is able to fight his way through, while the cowardly and indolent will be trodden under foot, That there is a great deal in keeping 'a stiff upper lip' there is no doubt. Our readers should make a note of it.

"How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae weary, fu' o' care?"
I view thee not, fair flower of Spring,
As butterfly on sportive wing,
That fain would to thy bosom cling,
Thy sweets to share;
To me thou dost no pleasure bring—
I'm full of care.

And what to me the roundelay
Of yon sweet bird, so wild and gay,
Supported by the blooming spray,
In yielding air;
It cannot charm my thoughts away—
So full of care.

And why, my lamb, with playful wile,
Wouldst thou this pensive hour beguile,
And win my features to a smile
They seldom wear?
Ah me! my heart's too sad the while—
So full of care.

Mary, forgive this brimful eye,
I would not weep, if thou wert nigh,—
But when I gaze on yon blue sky,
I wish me there.
And tears burst forth, I scarce know why,
To think how sweet 'twill be to die
And cease from care.

KEESEVILLE ACADEMY.—We call attention to the advertisement of this Institution in another place, and particularly to its new features,—a Preceptress, and female department.

A BROADSIDE INTO NEBRASKA.—The New York Mirror understands that the 3050 New England Clergymen who petitioned against the 'Nerbraska bill,' will all preach sermons on the subject on the approaching 'Fast Day.'

PERSONAL.—Henry Clay Smith, for a long time, clerk for, and for the last year or two, in partnership with, B. B. Boynton one of the leading merchants of this place, is with Messrs Durand & Lawrence, heavy Jobbing Merchants. of Milwaukie, Wis.—Mr. Smith left this place a few weeks since. He was very quick and active, and one of the neatest clerks with a pen ever raised in Keeseville, and that is saying a good deal. Messrs. Durand & Lawrence also, were formerly from this section, the former from Clintonville, and the latter from Jay, or that vicinity. They left poor, and are now milionaires—the reward of well directed industry.

GARFIELD,—is repairing his store and putting it in order for the spring trade. Mr. Dowling is doing the plastering and Edward Downs the stone work. It will be done in style.

Frank Shandrew, of this village, Shoe dealer, &c., has gone south for goods.—Frank means to be the first in the market and the first to 'shoe' the people.

John D. Lindsay of Elizabethtown, is an agent for several Insurance Companies.—We beg leave to commend him to those wishing to insure their property, as an honest, faithful, and deserving man.

☞The communications which follow will attract attention. A. B. C. is anything but an Abolitionist, he is not so much as a Soft or a Woolly. 'Americanus, is an able writer as his production shows.—[Ed, Rep.

"W." and Nebraska, v. s. the Clergy.

In the last Northern Gazette W again makes his appearance in defence of his former tirade against the Clergy of New England, and New York. After a weak and futile attempt to destroy the force of the previous article signed A. B. C. he makes the unfounded assertion that the writer is a 'political abolitionist' and a 'perfidy.' With this hobgoblin of his own creation staring him in the face he resorts to such weapons as he can best handle for its annihilation. Logic sharper set than a Turkish cimiter is the favorite choice and thus he attacks the foe:

'Hence horrible shadow!
Take any shape but that and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble.'

"A. B. C. is a political abolitionist—Each abolitionist is equal to three perfidies. The man is a perfidy. His idea is a perfidy, and the two combined make the expression of perfidy."

"Five thousand Abolition Clergymen (like those that signed the Anti-Nebraska petition would make 15000 perfidies and all their train perfidious which would make an innumerable multitude that no man could number all on the left hand of truth to receive the sentence 'depart ye cursed.' W may think that a deadly thrust. He may be satisfied to use such language when speaking of the men entitled by their virtues and office to our reverence and regard. But no matter, lets' try the other edge of W's. logic.

The *silly*gism of W might be stated thus: 'W is a gasometer, each gasometer is equal to three geese. Thus, the man is a goose, —his ideas are gas,—and the two combined make the expression of gosling.

Now, if there were 5000 W's there would be 5000 geese; and all their train would be gabblers, &c.' W. lays great stress on the fact that the word 'mere' was inserted before abstraction. We will now undertake to say that an abstraction is an abstraction and nothing more. 'Religion' or anything that in a sense is an abstraction' is a mere abstraction and nothing else.

We defy W. or any one else to prove that the quotations from his first article are not fairly and honestly made. He has flatly charged a large number of the most eminent divines on the continent with 'Ignorance,' 'Vanity,' 'Egotism,' 'Perfidy,' 'Self conceit, &c., &c. Now read and see: 'how sorrowful to the conscientious man (W. of course,) to have his minister put his hand to a party petition in his self conceit and ignorance which is manifestly false to a man of fair mind and common understanding!!

"When these men in their vanity put on their sacred character by taking the name of their master whom they do not serve, &c." 'Often making themselves ridiculous in the estimation of men of understanding;' meaning of course the understanding of W. and if it has any force, meaning no one else.

If such language does not indicate a degree of egotism perfectly sickening,

"Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good
But graciously to know I am no better."

To prove that W. is not guilty of the charge, he says that the pronoun 'I' does not occur, neither is the person of the writer brought to view!!"

It probably would not be necessary for a good naturalist to see a whole animal to tell either its name or nature. Let but the organs of hearing remain exposed to view and the voice be heard and none would mistake the Lion for the quadruped that spoke to Balam. So with W. the ear marks are too 'visible to our senses to require the 'person of the writer to be brought to view.' 'This also proves that W. is not a perfidy' or a lion. No doubt the venerable men who signed the petition thought they were doing right. The only excuse perhaps they ought to render to W. for 'making themselves ridiculous,' is their 'self-conceit and ignorance'. They were probably not informed as to what the 'estimation of men of understanding' would be of their course. If they had been their whole conduct would have been 'manifest by all and every part in accordance with the whole circumstance of these United States, and also with good morals and common sense.' W. had better send a copy of his views of the duties of Clergymen to each of the Rev. gentlemen who are so 'manifestly ignorant.'—The venerable Lyman Beecher, D. D. Bishop Eastburn or the Professors of Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, or Trinity Colleges, might then be able to inform themselves as to the opinions of 'men of understanding.' The work might also be used as a text book in logic, Rhetoric, Psychology and Metaphisics. Perhaps they would be able then to decide whether a 'perfidy' is an abstraction; or whether an abstraction is not 'in a sense' a 'perfidy' which intricate problem does not appear to be fully manifest to the senses,' even of W. himself. With copies of W's. advice at hand we hope and expect these Professors 'will let go the waves and grapple with the anchor.'

Our Condition.

It is unwise to regard the profound tranquility which now marks the political relations of the republic as affording security against the agitations which are convulsing the world. A mighty volcano seems raging and raging beneath the surface of society and when its burning lava will burst forth no human wisdom or sagacity can vine. Will its influence extend to us, is a grave and solemn question. We occupy a position of natural antagonism to the despotism that is pressing its iron heel upon the people of Europe and is crushing to the earth all that is free and liberal in her institutions. Our diplomacy is watched with a keen and jealous eye. Our commerce whitens every sea and will be exposed to the interference and aggressions of the belligirent nations.

All and each of these, in the course of events may become sources of collision and conflict.

Recent incidents have developed, still more tangible and decisive elements of approaching danger in our foreign relations. The declarations of Lord Clarendon in the house of Peers are pregnant with meaning and admonition, when he announced that the alliance between England and France, extended throughout the globe and that its policy was intended to embrace both Hemispheres. Can the import of such language be misunderstood or its intention not be comprehended?

The purpose of these powers to spread over Cuba their protecting shield has been before enunciated and who can doubt that the object of the British minister in pronouncing this declaration was to proclaim to our government the continuance, the fixedness, and determination of that policy.

Can it be supposed that the systematic repeated and atrocious indignities of the Cuban authorities upon our citizens and our commerce, would have been perpetrated had they relied for their defense and vindication alone, upon the impotent and effete power of Spain. Advised of the true spirit of the secret treaty between France and England, is it not the obvious policy of Spain to precipitate a crisis in her American affairs by which she may hope to fortify and confirm her trembling ascendency in Cuba.

If such is the character of the English and French alliance, these views can hardly be erroneous and it will not be strange, when the intelligence of the deep excitement in Congress and the exasperation which pervade this country created by the outrage upon the Black Warrior, reaches the courts of London and Paris, if a portion of the allied forces should be diverted from the Danube and that we soon hear, in conformity with the policy indicated by Lord Clarendon of a division of the French army occupying the Moro Castle and of British Cruisers enveloping the Queen of the Antilles. The nation may thus be placed suddenly in a new and trying attitude.—And what is our condition to meet such an exigency?

Our glorious navy is scattered over every ocean. Scarcely, could a single sail be hoisted or an engine moved in our national Marine, upon our own coast.

Our gallant army is spread, with the exception of a few insignificant garrisons, in positions of utter inefficiency and dislocation from the Missippi to the Pacific.—True, the great heart of the nation beats with its wonted soundness and vigor. Let the Tocsin sound and a hundred thousand intrepid spirits would in a day leap into the field to assert American rights and to maintain national honor. But where clothed in official authority, shall we find the wisdom and energy to adequately guide these patriotic impulses? Not, in an Executive, whose every act has exhibited incompetency, and a destitution alike of political firmness, and moral courage. Not in an Executive who presents the ignoble spectical of a man possessing the influence of exalted station, without commanding either public or private respect & who wields the authority of a great people, after having forfeited both their confidence and esteem. What reliance can we place in an hour of national agitation and peril upon the capacity and firmness of a high functionary, whose weak and vacillating mind tomorrow will repudiate a d deny the principles and the policy which to day he endorses and cherishes?

Patriotism, in turning with disgust from such an exhibition of official imbecility and incompetence finds no relief or hope in the character of the cabinet. Ability and high principles have sometimes proved a protection against executive weakness and degradation, but a cabinet without harmony or union, formed of discordant and jarring elements, can afford little strength or respectability to any administration. That of Gen. Pierce has been alone conspicuous for these traits. Has been distinguished only by its impudent interference, with local interests; by its arrogant proscriptions, and by the grovelling intrigues of its members to circumvent each other in their common aspirations for the succession. There exists, however, wisdom and patriotism in Congress and there the trust of the country must repose. To that tribunal we can only look for the action which shall assert the foreign rights of our citizens, and sustain the honor and glory of the nation.

Our enemies have forewarned us, and it must be our own fault if we are not forearmed.

AMERICANUS.

Dress—Health—Music.

The subject commends itself to mothers If they would cultivate a good voice and good lungs in their daughters, let them avoid the beginning of evil, and not compress the chest and waist while the frame is fragile and unformed, and of course easily bent out of shape. The clothes of children should rest upon the shoulders and be so loose at the waist as to hang down and keep their place by their own weight.

It is better that children should not be deformed by their training,—but older persons are not beyond hope.—[illegible] removed, the lungs will [illegible] more, and the frame, [illegible]astic, will return, in a degree [illegible] its original proportions. Let any one who would test this try the experiment, based upon experience. Let her have every dress enlarged one inch, the underdress to correspond. If she do not find the form to fill this space in a short time, then it must have lost its elasticity. This room being added, a second and a third inch will become necessary. The form accustomed, now, to more freedom, will demand it.

We have to contend with two evils—a false standard of taste, and minds not at all open to conviction. None will acknowledge this fault in themselves or their friends; and those who would shrink with horror from a Chinese foot or an Indian flat-head, will admire an hour-glass waist and emulate the wasp.

The real standard of beauty is very different from that we are accustomed to study and it costs a struggle to overcome the influence of education and habit. But if we are convinced that both health and beauty require a change, we must be stubborn indeed if we are unwilling to leave, or to restore to the form, the proportions, which the Creator in his wisdom first gave it.

THE FARM.

Dairy Interest of New-York.

BUTTER MAKING.

In determining the different constituents of milk, chemists employ a number of tests, many of which can be of little practical importance to dairymen in general, though the result of such analysis may not be devoid of use or interest. The nature of the changes which take place during the souring or the churning of milk may be more readily understood, by first having some knowledge of the sugar of milk, and the acid of milk. If the curd be separated from the whey, and the latter boiled and skimmed, and cleansed and clarified—as farmers clarify maple sugar with the white of eggs—and reduced to one fourth its bulk by continued boiling, it will, if put in shallow earthen vessels, in a few days begin to deposit small white crystals in the bottom and sides of the vessel. This is known as the sugar of milk. It is less sweet than our common sugar, not so soluble in water, and is gritty between the teeth. The addition of a little curd to a solution of this sugar, sours it and fermentation commences, forming lactic acid, and after complete fermentation, alcohol is produced.

This sugar is always in the milk which the cheesey matter at a given temperature sours, producing fermentation. The same effect will be produced if a piece of rennet be immersed in the solution of milk sugar. The reader may now readily understand the souring of milk to be produced by the turning of the sugar to acid, through the action of the casein, or cheesey matter in the milk. This readily occurs if milk is exposed to the air, and is hastened by increasing the temperature, and occurs immediately as it reaches the boiling point.

One of the composite parts of milk is known as butter, though it is more in accordance with the common usage to speak of it as cream from which butter may be made. A close analysis of milk shows butter to be the fat, or oil of milk intermingled with considerable portions of casin and water, and having also a small quantity of the sugar of milk. These proportions vary with the different modes in which butter is prepared, whether from the milk or only, from the cream. The nature of the pasture or feed may also materially affect the proportions of the cheesey or the fatty matter of which butter is composed, as also to this source can readily be traced the coloring substance, and some aromatic and other flavors which are often noticed in butter. So also much of the flavor of butter may be traced to the milk having been kept in an improper place, and it has ever been known to partake of the flavor of roots and vegetables placed in the same room where the milk is left to cool and cream.

We are all too well acquainted with the difference in the quality of butter made in different localities as well as of that made in the same neighborhood even where a similar method of making is pursued.—These differences are owing to the season at which butter is made—to the food of the cows, and in many instances to the cows themselves, since there are cows that with the best of food, rarely furnish a first rate article of butter. The great difference, however in the quality of butter, will be found, we apprehend, in the manner, in which it is made. The method of its preparation, from the milking of the cow, to the packing of butter for market, should early claim the attention of dairymen. One of the requisites for obtaining good cream easily is to scald the milk as soon as it is brought in from milking. Those who have followed this practice, have found it productive of great saving, not only in the increased amount of cream that rises, but in the facility with which the cream is changed to butter while churning.

The mode of scalding is to set the pan as soon as strained upon the stove and let it heat until a bubble or two rises to the surface by the heat—then set it away.

A writer in the N. E. Farmer, says: 'The cream should be skimmed off while the milk is sweet, and care should be taken to drain off the milk from the cream when it is skimmed, for if it is allowed to sour and go to curd, it will remain in the butter, in little white streaks, and render it very unsaleable. Cream should be churned while it is sweet and cool; then the butter will come hard, and the butter-milk can be extracted with much less trouble than when it comes soft. After the butter comes the butter-milk should be turned off and cold water put in the churn and churned a little to take the butter-milk from the butter. The butter-milk should be got out with as little working as possible. If butter is worked too much, it breaks the grain and makes it greasy, and it also destroys the flavor. The butter-milk may be squeezed and spatted out instead of working with a machine that cuts and breaks the grain and injures the quality. After washing the butter in the water, it should be washed in good strong brine, that takes the water all out of the butter. If water is left in, it will turn white, where the drops stand.'

The Life of a Farmer.

The life of the farmer is so often made the subject of complimentary remark, so often praised for its peacefulness and independence, that the farmer's wife very rationally is supposed to be the happiest woman in the world. From her relations to the 'lords of the soil' she should be the lady of the soil, a peaceful, healthy, and independent woman. That the reverse of this is the general fact will be universally conceded by the wives of the farmers.

A young farmer arrives at an age when he thinks it time for him to get married and 'settle down.' He has had a respectable education, and wants a woman who is his equal. He looks about him and makes his choice. She is a girl bred beside him in the country; has been well educated, reared by careful parents, and is in the truest sense, a lady. She loves books, possesses skill and taste in music, and is in all points fitted to reign the queen of a happy home. She becomes the wife of the farmer, is ambitious to do as much as her neighbors, and her husband is soon avaricious enough to allow the woman of his love to become his most devoted drudge.

From thenceforth her life is one of the most unremitting toil. It is nothing but mend and patch, cook and bake, wash and iron, churn and make cheese, pick up chips and draw water, bear children and nurse them. The family enlarges, the husband grows wealthy, becomes important in the community, rides to town every day, takes his ease when he chooses; but the cares of his faded and broken down wife know no relaxation. She may outlive her husband, but rarely does, and not unfrequently a second wife comes in to share in the money that should have been enjoyed by her predecessor, through a quiet old age of rest.

This is no fancy sketch. It is drawn from life, and in every country town or neighborhood its truthfullness will be recognised. Now we desire the good-for-nothings of fashionable life as much as any one and have no affections for drones in any hive. We are aware that circumstances sometimes demand extreme labor of the farmer's wife, but in New England those circumstances do not prevail; and while we would leave no woman to eat the bread of idleness, we would see the class of which we are speaking released from that circle of everlasting drudgery which deprives them of the privilege of relaxation for a day, and the time which they would gladly devote to the maternal education of their children.

From this life the girls of our day are learning to shrink; not because they are lazy, but because they know that they are to be sacrificed. Not because the calling of the farmer is not respectable, but because they do not wish to become his mistress, maid of-all work, nurse and boot-jack.—Now the foundation of all this wrong is that avaricious spirit, handed down from father to son, which makes the dollar the standard of respectability, and land the foundation of happiness. We hope to see the day when the farmer's wife shall share in the peacefulness and independence of the farmer's lot, and we call upon the ladies to engage in the reform themselves, and to teach the lords of the soil that there is some thing to live for besides potatoes, and that life can be enjoyed more truly by a proper preservation of the health, beauty, accomplishments and good spirits of their companions.

SANDERS.—The 'Old Fogies' are to much for 'Young America' in the U. S. Senate, as the fate of Geo. N. Sanders bears witness. The vote of the New-Hampshire Senators to reject proves that the President was in the plot, and that he only set George up for the fun of seeing him bowled down. Considering how thorough and efficient a supporter of Mr. Pierce the new Consul has always been, and how much he did toward clearing the Baltimore course for the Brigadier by his merciless warfare on the Fogies, we must say that this is not the handsome thing.

INTERESTING RELICS.—It is said that the revolutionary standards belonging to the estate of General Washington, and which until recently have been in the custody of the corporation of Alexandria, have been resigned by that body to Washington's surviving executor, Mr. G. W P. Custis, and will, most probably, soon adorn the halls of the Patent office.

English and French Soldiers.—It is said that the British and French soldiers, except in 1794, have not fought under the same banner since the wars of the Crusades. The rivalry that will exist in the allied army to exceed each other in deeds of daring will make them terrible to their Russian foes.

Our Exodus from Jerricho. A chat about plants. The big Buck. Shakesperian notes and querries. Editorial notes. &c., &c.

The Messrs. Harpers being about to retire from the publishing business, and to devote their attention to their Magazine, sold their plates, &c. at auction, and in the evening gave their friends a supper at the Astor House, during which the following pleasing incident occurred, as reported in the N. Y. Express:

MR. FIELDS, (of the celebrated firm of Ticknor, Reed, & Fields, of Boston,) rose and said he had very hastily prepared a few lines during the evening in Mr. Bangs counting-room, and begged to know if the company would hear them? A unanimous aye was responded, and Mr. Field's proceeded to read a humerous effusion, glittering with puns, and full of the most humorous and happy allusions. The following as correctly as we could follow Mr. Fields' delivery, is the

"Why will you call for one whose soil
No fruitful harvest yields,
And waste your precious time to-night
On unproductive Fields?

Brave plenty spreads her ample board
At generous Putnam's name,
And though we sold his "plates" to-day
He feeds us just the same.

3.

Our Barnes are full, our Butlers choice,
Behold our Phinny tribe,
And if our Little Browne should Flagg
My lads we'll still imbibe.

Let Bangs crow o'er his English Bohn,
And Sampson Low may strut,
We've got a Sampson full of Hare,
Who will not have it cut.

5.

Let kings and czars fight bloody wars,
We'll act a manlier part,
We will show them Swords if need there be
With true and trusty Hart!

Success to trade! let honest men—
I mean booksellers—thrive
As long as Uncle Tom is known
Or Olds shall call for five;

7.

As long as Grigg, our glorious John,
Shall plant his acres more,
As long as (and that is long enough)—
As Appleton's new store!

And when our leaves are droping off,
And we in sheets are laid,
And Harpers play their final tunes,
And all our notes are paid;

9.

When Anners balance's his books
Good fellow, all have known,
And Pratt, whose Church is finished now,
Is going—going—gone!

10.

Let this be said in sober truth,
And graven deep and fair,
They lived like brothers here below,
And now they're happy there!" *

* Pointing upwards.

The recital of these verses was frequently interrupted by the most overwhelming cheers, laughter, and applause, and after Mr. Fields had resumed his seat, the cheers were sustained for several minutes.

—We are also indebted to Messrs. Stringer and Townsend, Publishers &c. No 222, Broadway, N. Y. for an elegantly bound volume entitled, 'Margaret, or Prejudices at Home and its victims.' We have not examined it, but it is highly spoken of by the London (Eng.) Press. The Publishers are liberal at all events, and as they have been long established they are worthy of being commended.

(We expect soon to be in the receipt of a library, and a Piano. Who are to be the donors? Dont all speak at once.)

SINGULAR.—Riding over Taylor and Hallock hill the other day we noticed what appeared to us and our companion to be somewhat singular, viz. That the trees all lean to the north-east, having the appearance of trees in a violent storm. Some large elms in particular presented a curious sight; the limbs and twigs growing out of the southerly side all fairly doubled and permanently bent as mentioned above. Entire orchards also presented the same appearance. We noticed this for a mile or two on both sides of the road from Taylor hill to the Harkness neighborhood. And not only the tops, but the whole tree, body and all bent in the same direction ——Signs.—Our village boasts several beautiful business signs, but all must give way to the new one of Grandy & Kelley, Painters &c. It is allowed that Mr. Kelley has an extraordinary taste in drawing and painting. He is yet a young man, and bids fair to become eminent in his profession, 'Honor your calling and your calling will honor you' is as truthful a saying as it is old, however humble that calling may be.

ANOTHER ONE BED.—Chs. H. Brainard of the Mansion House Elizabethtown thinks he has discovered a rich and extensive vein of iron ore not over two miles from that village. He is preparing to open it and test its value and extent.

THE LEGISLATURE ON A FURLOUGH.—The members of the Legislature have been to N. Y. on their Annual visit to the Public Institutions in that city. They had a 'blow out' of course. The practice is nevertheless a good one, as it enables the members to study the wants of those under their care.

☞ 'The Warren County Whig,' is the title of a neat, good looking paper just started at Glen's Falls, by James A. Kelly. The number before us indicates that the Whig will be an able auxiliary to the Whig Cause—such an one as has been long needed in Warren county. We give it a hearty welcome, and wish it abundant success. —[Whitehall Chronicle.

And we too.

PIONEER NAVIGATION.—The little Steamer Jenny Lind, Capt. W. F. McGhee, is as usual the first to disturb the turbid waters of our opening Lake. She is now running daily for Passengers and Freight between this port and Benson Landing, and will push father on as soon as the ice will permit.—[Whitehall Chronicle.

BLACKHAWKS. S. T. Burwell of Crown point N. Y. owns a splendid horse of this breed, weighing 1200 lbs. and took the first premium at the last Essex Co. Ag. Fair.

R. M. Huestis and Wm. Huestis, of the same place also own another of the same breed, is five years old, weighs 1100 lbs. and is said to be a beauty.

☞ A model return upon a writ was recently made by a deputy sheriff in Morgan county, Indiana. It was—'Sarved the within, but was fit with brickbats by the woman so that I could'nt sarve it.'

EMIGRATION TO NEBRASKA.—The emigration to Nebraska territory is very large The St. Louis Republican says a great number of persons have arrived in that city on their way to that territory to settle — The steamboats were taken up as fast as they arrived, to convey the emigrants to their destination.

'John Brown, Ferryman,' writes to the Editor regularly favored with his correspondence as follows:

'P. S.—I understood you to say the other day, in The Evening Post, that the President was in favor of leaving the subject of Slavery in Nebraska to the settlers. Will you please to inform me whether the New Hampshire election is one of the 'settlers' he refers to?'

☞ The telegraph announces the election of Nathaniel Taylor, Whig, by a majority of six hundred, from the first district of Tennessee, in place of Campbell, Loco Foco. At the election of governor last August, Johnson, Loco Foco, received a majority of three hundred in this district. How popular the administration is becoming, to be sure, with the people, North and South.

IN ERROR.—Some have supposed that the cut in our last was a lion. That is a mistake. It was a Nebraska 'Settler.'

NAVIGATION.— The lake is clear for miles, but no boat from Burlington yet.—

SMALL POX.—Rumors have gone forth that Keeseville is overrun with this hateful disease. We heard in Peru last Saturday that there had been 30 new cases during the week, and in Plattsburgh it was reported that there had been 80 new ones. We beg leave to correct these errors.—Small pox has been in this village, but there has been but 20 cases in all, and at the time of writing this there are not three. It is true there was no little excitement in the village one day, but it was in consequence of threats to violate certain of the stringent rules and regulations adopted by the authorities. On hearing these threats the citizens organized themselves into a vigilant committee to aid the officers in enforcing these rules. Out of this excitement all the wonderful rumors have gone abroad, and yet to this very excitement probably we are indebted for the successful subjection of the disease. After this, all vied with each other in obedience to wise, but stringent regulations. Hence we are enabled to assure our friends abroad, that the Small Pox in Keeseville is entirely subdued and that there is no further danger from it whatever. We wish our friends to be assured that such is the fact.

Rhode Island Election.

This is a season of Nor' Easters at Washington! Not yet escaped from the pitiless pelting of the storm from New Hampshire and Connecticut—Nebraska is called upon to face the music of another gale from Narragansett Bay.

Rhode Island elected last year a Loco Foco Governor, Senate and House. This year she swings round Whig, with the suddenness of a weather-cock. For this her rulers may thank Senator Douglas's Bill. 'Last and least,' though she is, she will not be least heeded —[Albany Journal

WASHINGTON, April 4.

The President and Co. have made up their minds Nebraska is a flash in the pan —a no go.—a blunder, as bad as a crime The 'Hards,' they see, made him put his foot in, and now he can't get it out and the rascally Hards won't even help him.

Hence, there is to be a change of position in order to change the excitement.—We are to breakfast on Cuba, dine on Cuba, sup on Cuba, and instead of Nebraska, everything is to be Cuba. There is to be the greatest make-believe possible of a fight with her.

THE WAY THEY WORK FOR NEBRASKA.—The following point was made at the meeting of Germans in New York;—

Mr. FOERSCH: Again I rise but only to make a remark tending to show what kind of means the friends of the Nebraska bill employ. On the day before the meeting on Thursday of last week, there called on me at my house a certain Nesseller, formerly a gens d'armes in Germany. He requested me to appear in the meeting and speak in favor of the Nebraska bill. That of course was impossible. Then he reflected that possibly I might be like himself, and that the jingling of the dollar might soften my heart, and consequently spread $25 upon the table. I said simply to him Now I will do it—so much the less! [Cheers] When he became aware that nothing was to be done with me, he said: 'Foersch, have you not yet learned a thing or two? The Nebraska bill is a humbug, and humbug is everything in the United States. Make money; that's all!' So then I said to my wife:—'Charlotte, show that humbug out of the door.—[Great laughter

Battle cry of the Pierce

Meeting of Irishmen in Buffalo.

There was a full and most unanimous meeting of Irishmen at Dudley Hall, Buffalo, Monday evening, to make the following appeal to their fellow-countrymen in Ireland, against enlisting in the ranks of England's army, at the present crisis:—

AN APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE OF IRELAND FROM IRISHMEN IN AMERICA.

Fellow-countrymen—Ever watchful of the honor of our unhappy mother-land, we your kindred on this side of the Atlantic, claim a hearing when we deem that honor endangered.

The despots of Europe have begun to war amongst themselves—England is deeply interested in this war, and she plunges headlong into it. An emergency thus created, England, as is her custom, looks to Ireland for the bone and sinew wherewith to fight her battles. The recruiting fife and drum are heard everywhere over that land, and Irish valor is now loudly lauded in resuscitating reminiscences of Vittoria, Salamnca, Talavera and Waterloo.

But fellow-countrymen, is there not also a record on our side of Famine, Oppression, Neglect and Insult, by which those deeds of Irish valor have been repaid?

Shall we now forget the grave of murdered Emmet? Shall we taunt the shades of Tone and Fitzgerald? Shall we brand our recent denunciations of Saxon tyranny with a black falsehood? No countrymen —a thousand times no!!! Let England's Queen, who disdains to tread our native soil for a solitary month, know now that her foothold on that soil is retained by armed power, and not by Irish loyalty.

Let proud England's summons be heard in meditative contempt. Let it find no echo in the hearts of Irishmen.

No—never be it said that, after more than six centuries of barbarous misrule, Ireland can be bribed into forgetfulness when it becomes the interest of her oppressor to seek her needed arm.

Irishmen, if ye be poor, even to starvation—DIE where you have lived, in honest poverty, and have the commiserating tear of a sympathising world upon your fate; rather than perish in the ranks of your enemies, and wither beneath the deserved scorn of outraged manhood.

You have around you the mouldering relics of your plundered nationality—we have their memories deep in our hearts. Look to them—point to them—and let your wily tempters know, what we now tell them in your behalf, that what the slaughtering hordes of Britain could not in seven hundred years accomplish, the Saxon shilling must fail to day to obtain.

Be consistent, fellow-countrymen, be firm and resolved, come what may, never to give occasion to Irishmen abroad to blush for their brothers at home.

TRUST IN GOD AND YIELD NOT.

There is little left of Ireland but her name. Will you preserve its purity, or taint it with mercenary slavery?

Will you sell your sinews to support the Dragon of St. George to day, or retain your native gallantry for the to-morrow of your native land?

We await your answer in the success or total failure of the blood-stained flag of England, to gather you beneath its, hateful folds. And whilst we wait our prayer shall ascend to the Throne of God, that your truth or perfidy may bring its own reward.

Signed by
THE IRISH OF WESTERN NEW YORK.

On motion, the meeting adjourned.

Transportation — Northern Lake Boat Line.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN,

DEAR SIR:—In my weekly perusal of your paper, among the various changes noted by you in the business community and the new enterprises that the approach of spring has set on foot, I have failed to see any mention whatever of a new Line that has been formed at Essex for the purpose of carrying on the transportation business. Thinking that perhaps you have not been informed concerning it and as it is a line having in its formation and the manner with which it has been got up features that recommend it to the business community as more preferable than any other line engaged in the transportation business on Lake Champlain I have taken the liberty to inform you of it. The line is composed of 10 first class Lake and Canal Boats. Each boat is commanded by the owner of her, and the captains of the boats are the proprietors of the line, which line is known by the name of the 'Northern Lake Boat Line' For agents this association have procured the services of W. H. Beaman and Simeon N. Wright of Essex, gentlemen well known to the shipping community as men of ability and experience in the transportation business and men of steady integrity.—These gentlemen controll the business of the line, Beaman being located at the Northern end, and Wright in New York city. The Captains of the boats who as is above stated are the proprietors of the line, are all men of responsibility and experience in the business having all of them as I might almost say, been cradled upon the water and men of character and of standing. It is therefore unnecessary to say that with men of this description for proprietors owning and running their own boats and being the ones interested in the success and prosperity of the line, and with agents of the description and character of those employed by this association that all business entrusted to them will be performed with fidelity, dispatch, and promptness, and in a manner that will give satisfaction to the shippers. Those having freight to ship to or from New York or any where between Quebec and New York City would find it to their advantage to try the Northern Lake Boat Line.

An "Agitator" Abroad.

The country was in profound peace, and busy with every kind of questions except sectional questions, when the Nebraska Bill set out on its travels.

Congress, forgetting Northern and Southern disputes, was in earnest and friendly consultation on the best route for a Pacific Railroad. The surveys were made, and there was every prospect that before next fall the ground would be broken for a common Highway to California, which would make it impossible ever after to rend North and South asunder. Suddenly the Nebraska Bill rose to forbid the banns. In the fierce debate that follows, the Pacific Railway is thrown aside and forgotten, in order to make room for Slavery agitation.

The Legislature at Providence were sitting in quiet conclave on the best means of promoting Democratic harmony with the Administration.—But the Bill broke in upon their deliberations like Cromwell into the Long Parliament, and sent their Government and its friends' overboard, to make way for Slavery agitation.

The Legislature at Albany were assembled to complete the Canals and prohibit Intemperance, but with a resolve to maintain peace and silence on the Slavery question But the Bill stalked in, and when it left the Legislative Chambers it carried the curse of New York on its head, 'And back it goes to Washington, to report 'Slavery agitation.'

The General Court of Massachusetts had forgotten its seamen in Charleston jails, and was soberly talking over suffrage, apportionment and representation at home. Enter the Nebraska bill—and 'the next breeze that sweeps from the north' brings to Washington 'the clash of resounding arms.'

It passed northward, and called the Merchants of New York from their ledgers and the Lawyers from their papers, and the Carpenters from their benches and the Blacksmiths from their anvils, to go to the Tabernacle and agitate the Slavery question.

It went eastward, and sent the New England Clergymen to their pulpits, and the Farmers from their fields, to protest against Slavery extension. It went into Maine, the stronghold of Democracy, and brought down Wm. Pitt Fessenden from Augusta, a Whig Senator, to vote on the Slavery question.

It traveled westward. Claiming to be the offspring of Henry Clay, it roused his friends at Louisville, to repudiate such an insult to his memory, and called out its inventor's friends in his own home at Chicago to ring the death-knell of his political aspirations.

It passed southward, and dug up John Van Buren from the ruins of the Buffalo Platform and placed him in the field again; —dragged Jeremiah Clemens from his plantation to oppose the Cabinet of which he was so nearly a member—stirred up Sam Houston to ask if at least one of our National promises to the Indians could not be kept—and brought out John M. Botts, and John J. Crittenden, to defend the South against its insidious enemy from Illinois.

It returns here again, and the politicians of Rochester leave their Canal disputes, and the clergymen of Auburn their theological controversies, and the lawyers of Rome their contests in court, to unite to present a common front to the common enemy. It stopped last night at Boston, but not to sleep, for Faneuil Hall rung with the voices of 'Compromise' men, demanding the fulfilment of 'Compromise' pledges.

So it hurries back and forth throughout the land, sowing the wind and reaping the whirlwind. Everywhere it finds peace, and everywhere it rouses a storm. Before it, the north lay lulled to sleep, Behind it, rises the noise of alarms and the kindling of bale fires that would rouse the Seven Sleepers from their slumbers.—[Albany Journal,

CATCH THE SCAMP.—A widow, residing in Henniker, N. H. whose husband and child were killed by the accident on the railroad at Norwalk, and who recovered a verdict of $6,000 against the Company, which sum was paid to a Rev. George L. Adams, to whom she had given a power of Attorney, has been in this town the past week in search of the said Adams.

We are confident that this Reverend character called at our office some ten days ago, to inquire the way to New Sweden, an out of the way place west of Ticonderoga. The person answers the description given in the handbills to an iota. He is tall, has black hair and whiskers, (the whiskers supposed to be false,) is about 40 years of age and when last seen was dressed in black.—We trust that every assistance will be promply rendered to the widow, to enable her to catch the scamp and recover the money.—Castleton (Vt.) Journal.

ALBANY ADVERTISEMENTS.—We call attention to the advertisements to be seen in another column. They embrace nearly every kind of goods, required in the country, and are from the first merchants in that city. These merchants are taking the correct course to increase their trade, and country dealers will perceive at once that it may be an object to give them a call. They will of course hold out strong inducements to purchasers. Here is a practical demonstration of the advantages of advertising.

It is confidently believed that the tickets will all be sold, and the property will be distributed by the first of June.

The property will be placed in the hands of a Committee, appointed by the ticket holders to be distributed in a perfectly fair and satisfactory manner to all concerned.

The price of tickets is $1 each, entitling the holder to four admissions to the Exhibition and one of the 300,000 gifts.

All orders for tickets must be addressed, post paid, with the money enclosed, to Prof. J. Woodman Hart, Nos. 377 and 379 Broadway, WORLD'S HALL, New York, and the tickets will be promptly forwarded to any part of the world.

Any information relative to the property may be obtained at the office of the WORLD'S HALL, New York, or of F. J. Visscher & Co., No. 80 Nassau-St., New York.

The following description of the Magnificent Model of the World is taken from one of the leading papers of New York city, and will well repay perusal:—

PROF. HART'S WHOLE WORLD.

THE Entire World at one view, in magnificent bas relief, by Professor J. Woodman Hart.—This extraordinary, ingenious and comprehensive work of art—the first and only [illegible] ever conceived—stands forth and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility, is now open to the public, at the WORLD'S HALL, 377 and 379 Broadway, fitted up at an immense cost expressly for this master-piece of Art.—This is not a mere panoramic display upon canvass, but an actual structure, on Mercator's projection, of over one thousand square feet, composed of real land and water. Immense labor and enormous expense have been lavished upon the design, which is now completed. So real is the work, that all the oceans, seas, rivers, lakes, gulfs and bays, are filled with running water, upon the surface of which floats ships and steamers, visibly moving envoyage to and from every clime. Mountains and valleys, with all the varied geographical phenomena they present, are spread out in the exact shape and form made by nature. Volcanoes visibly belch forth sulphuric flames. The dreadful maelstrom or whirlpool, off the coast of Norway, is also seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The wreck of the ill fated steamer San Francisco is represented in the right locality, and seen sinking in the boundless deep—the Three Bells, Antartic and the Kilby, whose noble commanders so bravely rescued so many of America's sons and daughters, are also in view.—The north west passage, recently discovered by Captain McClure, is accurately shown and expatiated upon. The localities of the war now raging in Europe and Asia are correctly delineated. The goldon fields of California and Australia are prominent in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the beholder can sway with enthusiastic raptures over the entire surface of the mighty globe, upon which, as upon a stage, he appears as an actor; and while he is surprised at the vast novelty of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of its mechanical operations, and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the amusing lesson of an hour. The best talent of the country has been employed in the preparation of this mammoth undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass, without regard to expense, have been bestowed to render it worthy of this enlightened age, the whole having been calculated from the best European charts, together with all the recent surveys by authority of the United States government. The audience is taken on a pleasant tour from pole to pole, and under the guidance of the experienced lecturer, ensured a safe passage and speedy return to their happy homes. We will only add, that such are but few of the many advantages which can be gained only by a visit to this modern wonder. In connection with the above, a perfect model of the city of San Francisco, as it now exists, with all its buildings, streets, wharves, shipping, &c made from actual mensurement taken upon the spot for that purpose, built of solid material. Also, numerous panoramic views of the California regions of gold, the whole rendering it one of the most popular, interesting and instructive places of amusement in New York, or, we may safely say, in the world.

We learn that Professor Hart will shortly publish a book relative to the design of the World, including a history of his extensive travels in the Old and New World, anecdotes, &c. which must be very interesting, and should be read by the million. We are also informed that for the purpose of popularizing American Art, and for the purpose of giving his valuable book an extensive circulation, Prof. Hart proposes to give to all persons purchasing his gift tickets of admission in any part of the world, a vast amount of valuable and elegant property.

The mere announcement of this fact by Prof. Hart is a sufficient guarantee for its merit and success, he being known throughout the Union as an extensive traveler, public speaker, merchant, and a thorough active responsible business man; and we doubt not that the immense Hall will be daily crowded to behold his modern Wonder.

SHERIFFS SAL

BY virtue of several executions issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to me directed and delivered against the property of Wm. A. G. Arthus, and Clark P. Ives, I have seized and taken all the right, title, and interest which the said Wm. A. G. Arthur & Clark P. Ives had on the 21 day of June 1853 or which they may since have acquired, of, in, and to the following described parcels of real estate:

1 'All that certain piece or parcel of land, situate, lying and being at the Lower Falls, in said town of Ticonderoga, described as follows, to wit: being the south west part of lot of land known as lot No. 5 in Kellogg's survey, of 40 village lots at the lower falls; beginning at the south west corner of a stone basement where it forms an angle with a wooden building, and runs thence along the wooden building and thro' the lot south 13 degrees west two chains & sixty-six links to the centre of the highway leading to Weedsville, thence along the same north seventy-eight and a half degrees west 69 links to the east line of a lane laid out two rods wide, thence along the same north eleven and a half degrees east two chains and sixty nine links to a stake, thence south seventy five and a half degrees east seventy four links to the place of beginning containing 19-100 of an acre, same more or less."

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the st... "Collins & Co. An Invaluable Book for 25 Cents.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate: or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

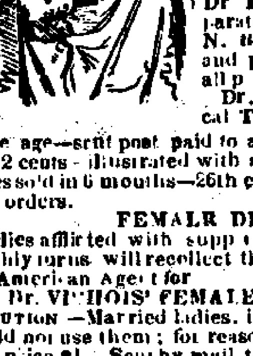
JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D

From A Woodward, M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and 'with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."



One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence while it is presented to the public, as an efficacious remedy it is also known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. In cases as Impotency, Hemorrhages, Disordered sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluor Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

TO FEMALES.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies would exist, were they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

It is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

Having made use of the Compound Syrup of Yellow Dock Root, prepared by C. Morse and Co., either ourselves or in our families and finding it to be a very salutary and effectual preparation, we do most cheerfully recommend ... H. Bourne, Esq., Cashier National Bank, Providence, R. I.; A. W. Spencer, Esq., Cashier Lime Rock Bank, do do Rev. William Phillips, Rev. J. B. Richmond, C. S. Jones, editor Providence Gen. Advt., Wm. Field, M. W. G. M. Cyrus Fisher, M. E. H. P. James Hutchinson, G. S. Dec., V. J. Bates, Doct. Benj. Colby, and one hundred others of the most respectable families of Providence.

This certifies that I have for a number of years been acquainted with the composition and mode of manufacture of Morse's Compound Syrup of Yellow Dock Root. I have also been acquainted with its modus operandi in disease, and can say that in all respects it is admirably calculated to remedy that class of Diseases for which it was designed. It is especially valuable in Indigestion and all its attendant symptoms, it excites to healthy action the Liver, removes Torpor, and inactivity of this organ, and stimulates healthy action in all the system. As a Depurator or purifier of the Blood it has no superior.

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases,

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

War at Last.

The doubts which have so long existed regard to affairs in the east are at last pelled by the declaration of war and the mmencement of hostilities. It is idle to culate upon the consequences. That y will be terrible enough is undoubtedly . The successive arrivals from Europe be looked for with increasing interest. rd fighting has taken place between the ks and Russians on the Danube in which latter were repulsed with great slaugh-

FOR CALIFORNIA, HO!"—We have just a letter from J. S. Campbell, Esq., a criber in California enclosing a lump e shining ore weighing something less five dollars. We quote the following the letter: Enclosed you will find a 'specimen' which you will please ac- as a present, I do not know how much indebted to you for the Republican, want it continued as long as I remain lifornia and I will pay you with inter-

In part compensation for the space up by our new advertisements we aking preparations to present each of aders with a Map of the Seat of war ropo. Our friends will find this a ceptable present.

ANI YET ANOTHER.—We are informed immense bed of iron ore has been ered at Thatcher Ville on the Sara- ver in Franklin Co. about 50 or 60 rom Keeseville. It is within a few the river where there is water pow- icient for any amount of machine- trial of the ore has been made and l that the malleability of the iron is not excelled in this section of te—that when cold it can be bent or red to a point without a flaw. There to be a vein of blue ore also, like the celebrated Arnold ore near ville. We do not vouch for the truth of these rumors but to any one ac- quainted with the resources of Northern New Yo rk they are not at all improbable.

AND STILL THEY COME.—An Iron Ore bed has been found in St. Armand. The ore has been tried and proved to be of the very first quality, and competent judges say it is inexhaustible. It was found upon the land of a Mr. Clarke, and is called the 'Clarke bed.' Forge fires will soon be lighted in St. Armand.

BLACKHAWKS.

—Messrs. Grey & Kingsland of Crown-point own a four year old horse of this breed called, "Flying Cloud, Jr."

—H. B. & D. W. Howard of Westport have another, a three year old, called 'Howard's Blackhawk.'

—Messrs. Root & Pattison of Westport have another called, Black Selim, of which they are justly proud, as he is second to none in the County.

—Capt. J. A. Benedict has one, called, Napoleon, which he intends sending West.

The Legislature adjourned on Monday last.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

—We call attention to the new advertisement of Mr. F. K. Nichols of Burlington. Mr. Nichols is earning the legitimate fruits of advertising in a greatly increased trade from this side of the lake. His customers find at his Store an extensive assortment of goods and prices that give satisfaction. Of course he will prosper. All such merchants do.

—Our friends in want of fruit, shade trees, flowers, or shrubbery of any description will find their wants supplied by calling on Mr. Bartley at the Union Nurseries. He has got out a new Catalogue this spring embracing (not merely a list of his fruits, but a great amount of useful information in regard to fruit culture &c.

A BOAT! A BOAT!—On Tuesday, the Saranac, Capt. Mayo, made her appearance. She runs from Burlington to Plattsburgh and back, once a day, touching at Port Kent. On Wednesday large numbers of our merchants left for New York for Spring Goods. Among others, Mr. Wm. Kingsland, for goods for his department of the store of Kingsland, Baber & Co., Charles Morris, merchant tailor, for goods and fashions; E. A. Prescott for jewelry, &c.

SAD ACCIDENT.—We are informed on what we suppose to be good authority that Mr. Gibbs, the founder, at the Port Henry furnaces was killed suddenenly at that place on Tuesday by being crushed in the machinery—we understand by the immense water wheel that drives the machinery of that establishment.

The TALLEST hen story on record—How to make hens lay in spite of themselves.

MR. EDITOR:—I have seen many rare and curious things since I left your county but the "cap sheaf" of every thing that I have seen or heard of was an operation which I was under the necessity of witnessing a few days ago to make hens lay. Knowing the difficulty of obtaining eggs early in the season in that part of the country I will with your permission give the process as near as I could judge from what I saw. The hens were put into the cellar at night where from the amount of soil above them (the kitchen) I know it was impossible for any light to penetrate.—They were kept till nearly noon the next day when they were brought up one at a time and placed in a large butter crock, where some eggs had previously been placed, and covered up tight. The hen knowing her destiny viz: that she must stay there till she had deposited the treasure made short work of it, when she was thrown out and an another placed in her stead, and so on through the whole flock, none daring to refuse. There were, however, other things which might have contributed to the success of the operators. The crock stood at the foot of the bed, the old roster stood on the foot board crowing, a hen at his side was cackling, and a small pig was beneath them squealing for his dinner which with the jabbering of the old man, woman, and children was enough to make a hen lay if she didn't want to (Well, we should think so too, or make a cow give down her milk, or cure a man of the fever and ague, eh?—Ed.

BYRON MARKHAM.

Mame, Wis., March 25 1854.

From Washington.

Special Dispatch to The N. Y. Tribune.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, April 18, 1854.

The nomination of Mr. Angell, as Consul to Honolulu, was rejected by the Senate to-day. The 'Hards' are rejoicing over his defeat. This is a severe blow to Mr. Marcy.

Mr. Richardson is prepared with his new Nebraska bill. He will spring the trap by the previous question.

Painful Rumor from Vera Cruz.

NEW ORLEANS, April 15, 1854.

A rumor has reached this city from Vera Cruz that fifty Americans had been arrested at San Blas, for landing without passports, and ordered to be shot.

Several Mexican officers will be sent to Turkey to study the art of war.

BREADSTUFFS AT THE WEST.—The accounts from the West represent the granaries and warehouses there as filled to repletion with immense quantities of grain and flour, and the opening of spring will witness an active rivalry in forcing these vast supplies on the East.—Ex.

Glad to hear it $9,50 for a barrel of flour takes too many copies of the Republican. There is nothing left with which to buy a "go to meeting dress" for the babies. Hurry up the cakes.

FROM HAVANA.—The U. S. steamer Princeton, from Havana, arrived at New York, on Thursday. Com. Newton refused to either salute the Spanish flag or to pay his respects to the Captain General until the dispute with regard to the Black Warrior is adjusted. The position assumed by the Commodore is said to have produced the greatest sensation and anxiety at Havana.

It is now said that Col. Forney will be impeached before the House. The 'Hards' are his bitterest enemies also some of the Virginians.—The blow is aimed at the President.

[Correspondence of the Tribune.]

The Gadsden Treaty, &c.

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 14, 1854.

Congress is, practically, almost at an end. Everything is dead. There will be no Pacific Railroad, no Homestead bill, and no other measure of importance, scarcely, passed at this session. Nebraska has paralyzed the whole mass, not excepting the Amistad bill.

The attempt to remove the duty on railroad iron was headed for a time at least, but Douglas may yet carry it through the Senate.

A great change has come over the Locofoco leaders lately. Instead of that supercilious air which they wore a few weeks ago, they now begin to bear themselves more like gentlemen and less like overseers.

It is rumored here that your Gov. SEYMOUR is to go abroad. Several desirable missions are yet in prospective.

Senator GWIN is about leaving for California. He has little hope of reelection. His vote for the Nebraska bill finished him. All his untiring devotion to the interests of his State was outweighed by that fatal vote. He is not alone in his position.

Advices from Mexico, received by way of New Orleans, are quite contradictory. It is alleged by the Mexican journals on the one hand that Santa Anna is rapidly putting out the rebellion of Alvarez and will soon have the leader in his power; on the other side, the private correspondence of the New Orleans papers agrees in the statement that Alvarez has thus far had the advantage, that his position is well nigh impregnable, and that Santa Anna will not only be defeated completely; as he has already been partially, but that he and his despotism will now be utterly overthrown.

"Irishman Read."

"The N. Y. Day Book stands where it always has."—[N. Y. Day Book of a recent date.

Here is an article from the Northern Gazette of Nov. 3, 1853. It is worthy of attention as it quotes from the N. Y. Day Book, a paper it now extols:

"Read Irishmen, and tell us what you think of the faction which boasts such a press among its ardent supporters, and whether you will vote for its nominees on the false and ridiculous issue that their opponents on the regular democratic ticket, are Barnburners! Here is the article from the 'Day Book:'—

'Legal voters, and no bogus American citizens!' This is the cry now-a-days.—We have had quite enough of foreign ideas, foreign subjects, and foreign organizations. Americans, with that carelessness which is the characteristic of conscious strength, have permitted things to arrive at such a pitch that the political destinies of the whole country are literally in the hands of demagogues and the foreign voters,—For instance, through the collusion of lawyers and the connivance of petty magistrates, voters enough may be manufactured, at a few days' notice, to turn the scale of an election in New York City. The result in the city generally decides that in the State; and the voice of New York is almost certain to give victory to that party in whose favor it is uttered, throughout the Union. Thus, the sacred right of suffrage may be made a mockery and a joke, by the manufacture of a few thousand 'good enough voters till after the election,' in New York city.

And what is the character of the material from which most of these voters are made? Pauperism, theft, drunkenness, disgusting ignorance, and general loaferism. We undertake to say, that the majority of new made Irish voters, who brawl and fight, and take possession of the polls, and drive decent and peaceable citizens away from voting, are not half so intelligent, so honest, or so respectable as the original Indians who inhabited this island, and who were cheated out of their lands and possessions by our worthy, sleepy and honest Dutch progenitors. To enfranchise the right of suffrage to such creatures, is to render that right to all intents and purposes valueless.

We believe solemnly, that a deep and wide-spread public sentiment—incited by no demagoguism, but spontaneously issuing from the heart of the people—has commenced in New York and that it will go on with irresistible force, until it sweeps away every existing political distinction, and erects a palladium of liberty upon the principles of Native American.

It cannot be denied that the policy of Great Britain and Germany, for years past, has been to make a sort of Botany Bay of the United States—sending to our shores, at the expense of the government, shipload upon shipload of paupers and criminals; thus endeavoring to purge their own countries of those pernicious elements which are leading them to sure political destruction. We are the asylum of the oppressed of all nations'—true; and we are proud of the title. But that kind of humanity or rational philanthropy would it be that should ask us to become the penitentiary and alms-house of the Old World?

And yet—let truth be spoken—such we have been rapidly becoming for years past. The respectable and intelligent class of foreigners who come here to seek a home, do not ask nor exercise political privileges. Satisfied with an asylum, and the absolute security and immunity from oppression, guranteed by our institutions, they seek for nothing further; and they look with disgust and astonishment upon the insolence and the presumption of the 'free and equal' foreign pauper rabble, who are here admitted to every privilege of citizenship, while in their own country they would not dream of speaking unless they were spoken to, and never had in their lives a more definite idea of the duties and responsibilities of a free citizen, than the slaves on a Southern plantation.

Those are the wretches who swell our grand 'democratic' demonstration—who strut about in military finery, like the natives of the Tongo Islands with the soldiers' red coats put on by way of pantaloons—'processionize' up and down Broadway on our national holidays, with the banners and insignia of their own country [illegible] who, when they think they [illegible] sufficient numbers, attack, beat [illegible] American citizens, in peaceful [illegible] of their duties."

Died.

In this village of Consumption, April 20, 1854, Ann Jane Cleaves, aged 19 years, daughter of Solomon W. Cleaves Esq.

At Port Henry, March 26th, after a period of two weeks of very distressing illness,—from inflamation of the bowels—Thomas Warson, aged 30 years.

At Moriah, April 11th, of quick consumption, Jeremiah Cook, aged 59 years.

At Lena, Ill., of consumption, James Fowler, late of Moriah, N. Y. aged 63.

Notice.

THE undersigned Commissioners of Highways of the Towns of Ausable and Chesterfield will receive sealed proposals till the first day of May next for the building of a Stone Arch Bridge across the Ausable river at Keeseville.

They will receive proposals for either of the following bridges, to wit; one arch to be built of cut stone—two arches to be built of cut stone—or two arches to be built of native stone faced.

If the bridge is built with one arch the span will be ninety one feet and an abutment is to extend about 20 feet into the channel of the river.

If built with two arches the span of each arch is fifty one feet six inches, with a pier in the center of the channel made of cut stone and containing about 223 cubic yards of stone.

The abutments, pier and arch to be laid in Hydraulic cement, the walls above the arch to be laid in common lime mortar and faced—the method of filling between the walls may be seen by the plans.

The builder to furnish all the material for the center and bridge and to complete the bridge with side walks, and iron railing by the 15th day of Nov. next.

The proposals should name competent sureties that the job will be completed and that the bridge will stand one year after completion.

Time of payment to be agreed upon.

The plan and specifications may be seen at the office of M. Finch, in Keeseville.

The Commissioners will also receive propositions for an Iron Bridge according to plan and specifications in their hands.

The following description of the Magnificent Model of the World is taken from one of the leading papers of New York city, and will well repay perusal:—

PROF. HART'S WHOLE WORLD.

THE Entire World at one view, in magnificent bas relief, by Professor J. Woodman Hart.—This extraordinary, ingenious and comprehensive work of art—the first and only one of the kind ever conceived—stands forth as a monument of the unwearying patience and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility, is now open to the public, at the World's Hall, 377 and 379 Broadway, fitted up at an immense cost expressly for this master-piece of Art.—This is not a mere panoramic display upon canvass, but an actual structure, on Mercator's projection, of over one thousand square feet, composed of real land and water. Immense labor and enormous expense have been lavished upon the design, which is now completed. So real is the work, that all the oceans, seas, rivers, lakes, gulfs and bays, are filled with running water, upon the surface of which floats ships and steamers, visibly moving en voyage to and from every clime. Mountains and valleys, with all the varied geographical phenomena they present, are spread out in the exact shape and form made by nature. Volcanoes visibly belch forth sulphuric flames. The dreadful maelstrom or whirlpool, off the coast of Norway, is also seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The wreck of the ill fated steamer San Francisco is represented in the right locality, and seen sinking in the boundless deep—the Three Bells, Antartic and the Kilby, whose noble commanders so bravely rescued so many of America's sons and daughters, are also in view—The north west passage, recently discovered by Captain McClure, is accurately shown and expatiated upon. The localities of the war now raging in Europe and Asia are correctly delineated. The golden fields of California and Australia are prominent in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the beholder can sway with enthusiastic raptures over the entire surface of the mighty globe, upon which, as upon a stage, he appears as an actor; and while he is surprised at the vast novelty of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of its mechanical operations, and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the amusing lesson of an hour. The best talent of the country has been employed in the preparation of this mammoth undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass, without regard to expense, have been bestowed to render it worthy of this enlightened age. the whole having been calculated from the best European charts, together with all the recent surveys by authority of the United States government. The audience is taken on a pleasant tour from pole to pole, and under the guidance of the experienced lecturer, ensured a safe passage and speedy return to their happy homes. We will only add, that such are but few of the many advantages which can be gained only by a visit to this modern wonder. In connection with the above, a perfect model of the city of San Francisco, as it now exists, with all its buildings, streets, wharves, shipping, &c made from actual measurement taken upon the spot for that purpose, built of solid material. Also, numerous panoramic views of the California regions of gold, the whole rendering it one of the most popular, interesting and instructive places of amusement in New York, or, we may safely say, in the world.

We learn that Professor Hart will shortly publish a book relative to the design of the World, including a history of his extensive travels in the Old and New World, anecdotes, &c. which must be very interesting, and should be read by the million. We are also informed that for the purpose of popularizing American Art, and for the purpose of giving his valuable book an extensive circulation, Prof. Hart proposes to give to all persons purchasing his gift tickets of admission, in any part of the world, a vast amount of valuable and elegant property.

The mere announcement of this fact by Prof. Hart is a sufficient guarantee, for its merit and success, he being known throughout the Union as an extensive traveler, public speaker, merchant, and a thorough active responsible business man; and we doubt not that the immense Hall will be duly crowded to behold his modern Wonder.

Blackhawk in Sulky.

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

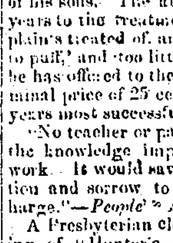
JOSEPH LONGSHORE M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little brevity to puff, and too little presumption to impose, he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks, on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."



One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist, and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household; even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month true spire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, &c.

DREADFUL INHERITANCE

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandize; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

WHEREAS, Henry Haile, then of the town of Crownpoint in Essex county, by a certain Indenture of mortgage executed and bearing date the 7th day of February, A. D. 1849, and with the usual power of sale therein contained, and duly recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Essex, in vol. O of mortgages on pages 364 and 365 on the 4th day of June, 1849, at 3 o'clock, P. M., to secure the payment of five hundred dollars and interest, did duly grant, bargain, sell and convey to Jeremiah Powers, then of the town of Pittsford, county of Rutland and State of Vermont, certain premises described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

Commencing at an iron-wood stake and stones in the easterly bounds of lot No. 17, in the possession of Isaac Russell, and runs thence south-easterly fifty-four chains and sixty-five links to an iron-wood stake and stones in the westerly bounds of lot No. 32 in the possession of Howard Barrows; thence south-westerly twelve chains and forty-one links to an oak stake and stones in the west bounds of lot No. 24, in the possession of Nathan B. Sprague; thence north-westerly fifty-four chains and twenty-five links to an iron-wood stake and stones in the east bounds of lot No. 23 in the possession of Stephen L. And, whereas, on the 17th day of May, 1853 the said mortgage with the moneys unpaid thereon were for a valuable consideration, and by an instrument in writing of that date sold and assigned by the said mortgagee to Charles F. Hammond, John C. Hammond and Allen Penfield of Crownpoint aforesaid.

And whereas, default has been made in the payment of the moneys secured to be paid by said mortgage, and there is now claimed to be due on said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice, (being the date hereof,) the sum of six hundred and seventy-five 97-100 dollars ($675 97,) and no proceedings at law or equity having been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that in pursuance of said power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgaged premises hereinbefore described, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage together with the costs and expenses of foreclosure—will be sold by public auction at the hotel kept by J. A. Benedict, in the town of Crownpoint and county of Essex, on the 16th day of May 1854, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

AFFLICTED READ!

PHILADELPHIA MEDICAL HOUSE, established 25 years ago, by DR. KINKELIN, corner of Third and Union sts., between Spruce and Pine, Philadelphia, Pa.

INVALIDS

Are apprised that Dr. Kinkelin continues his practice to a particular course of medicine, which engages undivided attention. He removes the calomel and all the abuse of mercury; those evils are annually increased out of use. Recent additions are promptly exhumated.

TWENTY YEARS OF EXPERIENCE.

In the treatment of a class of diseases hitherto neglected and imperfectly understood, has enabled Dr. KINKELIN, (Auth'r of a work on Self-preservation) to prove that one fifths of the causes of nervous debility, local and constitutional weakness, pains and physical suffering, are traceable to certain habits, forming the most secret yet deadly and fatal springs of domestic misery and premature mortality.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

There is an evil habit sometimes indulged in by boys, in solitude, often growing up with them to manhood, and which, if not reformed in due time, not only betrays serious obstacles to matrimonial happiness, but gives rise to a series of protracted maladies, and devastating affections.—Few of those will give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequence, until they find the nervous system shaded in the darkest and saddest colours in their feelings, and vague fears in the mind.

The unfortunate individual becomes feeble, is unable to labor with accustomed vigor, or to apply his mind to study, is most pitiable, and wearisome is dull, forgetful, and excites in his sport will less energy than usual.

He can complete him or her in the practice has done his work, and we can safely say his means is safe in and masculine felicity him that unfortunate is caused by his early errors.

These are considerations which should awaken the attention of those similarly situated.

MARRIAGE

Requires the fulfilment of several conditions, in order that it may be ready the can enjoy that many blessings. Could the veil which covers the right of domestic happiness be raised, and its true source in every instance discovered—in how many cases of unhappiness and their attendant disappointments. Apply then while it is yet time, in order to have your health and related organization restored, revivified and strengthened.

REMEMBER.

He who places himself under Dr. Kinkelin's treatment may rely upon his honor as a gentleman, and may rely upon the assurance, that the secrets of Dr. K's. practice will never be disclosed.

Young man—let no false mod sty deter you from making your case known to one who, from education and respectability, can certainly befriend you.

Too many think they will conceal the secret in their own hearts, and cure themselves. A sad how often is this a fatal delusion, and how many a promising young man, who might have been an ornament to society, has faded from the earth.

Stricture of the urethra are rapidly removed by the application of a new and vegetable agent, used only by Dr. K. We know and confidential debility promptly cured, and full vigor restored.

COUNTRY INVALIDS.

Can have (by stating their case explicitly, together with all their symptoms, particulars inclosing a remittance) Dr. K's. medicine, appropriated according.

To wanted to any part of the United States, and packed secure from DAMAGE or CURIOSITY.

The Republican.

KEESEVILLE:

Saturday Morning, May 6.

"Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands, the Union of States none can sever, Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands, The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

STORM,

—Noticed by us last week was far severe than we then anticipated. It ed for about 24 hours and then rained ch longer. On Sunday the Ausable tened to destroy everything on its . It rose, according to competent s 10 feet above its ordinary highth. from the apprehension of danger, it a beautiful sight to look at. In com- with a friend we passed down as far e Chasm, and the roaring and tumbl ng he water was truly magnificent.— he Chasm where the water crowds ugh a space of from 10 to 20 ft. wide it prossed up 20 feet above its common el, and with maddened fury would send inch logs against its wall'd banks with noise of distant thunder and anon throw m half their length out of the water.— serious damage was done, except to the ver forge of the Messrs. Kingslands, which estimated at $1000, but we trust will ove to be overstated. The floom to the abinet shop of Nelson Kingsland and her works below that, gave way, but the mage is not much. Two Mills at the pper bridge were in danger, and their de- truction would have carried away other establishments below, but they escaped.— While trying to save the floom spoken of bove, J. J. Stacks, who works for Mr. N. Kingsland, fell in, and it is only a wonder ow he ever got out, running as the water as at a powerful rate. Richard Hoag, while watching a new building on the bank of the river in the night, also fell in, but was saved. We have heard of no other casualties.

"NOTICE

"Notice is here buy giving to the pub- lick that any man who goes to sware against a man selling liquor in this village may have his coffin made and soon will goo there in KEESEVILLE, N Y"

The above is a verbatim copy of a no- tice recently posted in several public pla- ces in this village. We do not publish it for the mere purpose of denunciation. We desire rather to ask for it a little re- flection on the part of the law and order, and of the moral and religious portion of the community. We have no idea that the above threat is meant to be literally construed, but it means personal assaults, destruction of property, 'whitewashing' of houses, &c. Nor do we think it is made by liquor dealers themselves, or by their procurement, but by a set of hangers on who wish to show their zeal for the cause. Now, to us this indicates a bad state of public opinion.

For some time past prosecutions have been carried on by the Overseers of the Poor for violations of the excise law. More recently licenses have been refused. During all this time no definite expression of public opinion has taken place in favor of either by the leading citizens of the place. Prosecutions and the refusal to license will prove utterly futile and will end only in anger and further 'whitewashing' if the authorities are left in the lurch. It is one thing to stand out of harm's way and cry mob boy,' and another to 'stand up to the rack fodder or no fodder.' One course encourages 'whitewashing' and notices, like the above, and the other will form an irresistible public opinion that none will dare violate. Either public opinion should back the authorities, or prosecutions should cease and licenses be granted. A mere strife between the friends of Liquor traffic, and two public officers will accomplish only evil.

HOTEL AT PORT KENT.—Mr. A. Rice, has obtained the control of the Valcour House, and after negotiating for a time to rent it, has concluded to keep it himself. He will fit it up & keep it in first rate style, and to the satisfaction of the public. We think the people in this vicinity will be pleased to hear this announcement.

—The (Malone) Jeffersonian, Adamantine, says, 'the Pierce administration is utterly broken down,' 'and the thing now to be done is, to repudiate the administration as unfit for democratic fellowship, and disclaim its policy as unworthy of democratic support.' We should quote from the article at length if we had space. The Albany Argus says the same.

—E. A. PRESCOTT has returned from N. Y. with a lot of beautifu' jewelry.

—Francis Saltus is dead. The N. Y. papers contain a sketch of his life which we shall publish next week, it came to hand too late for our present issue.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS,

——See the arrangements for Northern travel to Troy, Albany and N. Y. by Rail Road from Burlington. Passengers can go from Burlington to Troy—have 6 hours in the latter place and return to Burlington same day. They can leave Keeseville at 8 P. M. and be in N. Y. next morning at 9.30 A. M. or leave this place at 8 A. M. and arrive in N. Y. at 9,30 same evening. No change of cars from Burlington to Troy. Arrangements for the northern travel were never as complete as this spring.

——A large number of his acquaintances in this County will read the advertisement of R. M. Guilford with pleasure, and that he will receive a large share of their custom, there is little doubt. Mr. G. retains his place in the establishment of the Messrs. Peeks, and confides his store to the care of G. W. Allen, also well known in Essex County, who is every way qualified for the position. Mr. Guilford has worked his way to an honorable position in Burlington, as a young man of rare business capacity, and we trust that wealth will now follow him as rapidly as he has acquired his distinction as a clerk.

——Benj Miner is ready to issue tickets for the "1,000,000, Gifts" advertised to day. Miner is acquainted with the parties in interest and knows they will conduct it fairly and distribute the gifts honestly. There is a chance to make an extensive speculation or to lose 50 cts.

——Horace Burroughs of Port Kent offers his real estate at that place for sale. Those wishing to sell goods on a small scale would do well to call on Mr. Burroughs.

——H. F. Granger has opened a Livery Stable at the Ausable House. He promises the best establishment that has ever been opened in this village. It is adorned with new horses and carriages throughout. One span of horses cost $450, and he has a baroucho for them especially costing $250. Mr. Granger will give it his personal attention, and the people of this village need no assurance that he will be lavish of pains and money to satisfy his patrons. We commend him cordially to our readers.

——The dog "Watch" advertised and his owner Master E. T Ensign are both known to us and for our affection for both we add another fifty cts. to the reward for the recovery of the dog.

A Contrast.

'LOOK ON THIS PICTURE.'

——Lt. Govr. Fish, Whig, received for one year services $1,299, and for 3 years $5,110.

Lt. Gov. Patterson, Whig, received for one year $1,905,50 and for two years $3,811.

AND THEN ON THIS.

——Lt. Govr. Church, barnburner in eighteen months received for services $5,299, or $189, more in 18 months than Lt. Gov. Fish in 3 years. He has been enabled to do this by charging frequent 'travels' to and from Albany, 'constructive mileage, expenses, &c., &c.'

☞ The Foreign News by this, as by every arrival now, is interesting. Its principal points are the Capture of five Russian Merchantmen by Sir Charles Napier's Fleet in the Baltic—the entry of the Allied Fleets into the Black Sea—the Blockade of Odessa—the Marriage of the Emperor of Austria—the passage of the Danube by the Russians on the Servian Frontier—dissension among the Greek insurrectionists—Victories over the Russian troops in the Caucasus by the Circassians—and the opening of Japanese Ports to Russian ships.

Clerical Interference.—In looking over some portion of our Revolutionary History, we see that Massachusetts Provincial Congress in 1774, composed of such men as Warren, and Adams, and Hancock, sent an address to all the clergymenin the Province, calling upon them, as the friends of civil and religious liberty, to do all in their power to sustain the cause of freedom, and so secure to the people their rights. And the clergy, from a sense of duty to their fellow men, and to their God, did exert their influence in favor of freedom, and against oppression.

What a pity it is that there were not at that time some such pious, devoted patriots, as Douglas and Pettit, and the editors of the Post, to stand forth, and tell the clergy that they were acting out of character, and ought at once to attend to their own professional business.—[Boston Atlas.

Mr. SOULE manages to keep up a sensation, which of all things is his chiefest delight. In this he is French to the backbone. Our European advices state that Mr. Turgot, the French Embassador, whom he shot at the log the other day, has been recalled by the parvenu Emperor, and that our Minister is in full feather at the Court of Madrid. It is even reported that he is on the most familiar terms with the Queen. The honor of this intimacy cannot be fully appreciated except by those who are aware of the fact that she is one of the most licentious and shameless women in Europe.—[Tribune.

BUFFALO, May 1.

Forty five Canal boats loaded and cleared from this port to-day. Weather here clear and fine—quite a contrast to what we have had for three or four days.

☞ An impression exists among the shipbuilders of London, almost amounting to moral certainty, that there is a Russian spy in every one of the English dockyards.

☞ In Senate on Wednesday, the bill making appropriations for Canal Enlargements being under consideration, Mr. Hopkins moved to increase the sum appropriated to the Champlain Canal to $25,000, which was agreed to. The original appropriation was $15,000.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY has recently been Made by Dr Curtis, of this city, in the treatment of Consumption, Asthma, and all diseases of the lungs. We refer to Dr. Curtis's Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup." With this new method Dr. C. has restored many afflicted ones to perfect health, as an evidence of which he has innumerable certificates. Speaking of the treatment a physician remarks:—It is evident that inhaling an agreeable, healing Vapor, the medicinal properties must come in direct contact with the whole of the aerial cavity of the lungs, and thus escape the many and varied changes produced upon them when introduced into the stomach and subjected to the process of digestion. The Hygeana is for sale at all the druggists throughout the country. (From the New York Dutchman of January 14th.

Medicated Inhalation—A New Method,

A MOST WONDERFUL discovery has recently been made, by Dr. CURTIS, for the cure of Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and all Lung Complaints, by Medicated Inhalation. DR. CURTIS'S Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup, has accomplished the most wonderful cures of Asthma and Consumption in the City of New York and vicinity for a few months past, ever known to man. It is producing an impression on Diseases of the Lungs never before witnessed by them dear profession. (see certificates in the Banes of Agents.)

ASTHMA CURED.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 27th, 1853.

For about eight years I have been severely afflicted with the Asthma; for the last two years I have suffered beyond all my powers of description; most at a time I have not been able to sleep in a bed, getting what rest I could sitting in my chair. My difficulty of breathing, and my sufferings, were so great at times, that for hour & together my friends expected each hour would be my last. During the past six years I have had the aid and attendance of some of the most celebrated physicians, but have received no permanent benefit, and but little relief. At length had the good fortune to procure Dr. Curtis's Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup. At the time I first obtained it, I was suffering under one of my most violent attacks, and was in great distress, almost suffocating for want of breath. In less than ten minutes from the time I applied the Inhaler to my stomach, and took a teaspoonful of the Cherry Syrup, I was relieved in a great measure from the difficulty of breathing, and had a comfortable night. I have since continued it with the greatest possible benefit, and am now comparatively well. God only knows the amount of suffering this medicine has relieved me from. My advice to the suffering is—try it.

MARGARET EASTON.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27th, 1853.

I came to New York in the ship Peterel from my native place St. John, New Brunswick; when I reached this city, my health was very poor; I had a very bad cough, raised a good deal of matter, which was frequently mixed with blood; had pain in my left side, and was very weak and emaciated. My friends and physician pronounced my case Consumption, and beyond the reach of medicine. I accidentally heard of Dr. Curtis's Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup, and obtained a package which I verily believe was the means of saving my life. Soon after wearing the Inhaler, I found it relieve the pressure on my lungs, and a free use of the remedies gave it appearance upon the surface under the Inhaler. I found the Cherry Syrup in addition and continued to use, the cough gradually growing better. Such a healthy effect was, and I now consider myself cured. I shall wear the Inhaler as the use of it is rather pleasant, and believing it strengthening and purifying to the lungs, feel unwilling yet to lay it aside. JOHN WARD.

Sold by BOYD & PAUL, No. 149 Chambers Street, N. Y. H. HIND, cor. of John street and Broadway N. Y. Price $3 a package.

N. B.—Any person inclosing $3 to Boyd & Paul or Curtis & Perkins, New York, will receive a package containing a bottle of Hygean Vapor, one of Cherry Syrup and an Inhaler, in a neat box, by express free to any part of the United States, or four packages for $10.

The following description of the Magnificent Model of the World is taken from one of the leading papers of New York city, and will well repay perusal:—

PROF. HART'S WHOLE WORLD.

THE Entire World at one view, in magnificent bas relief, by Professor J. Woodman Hart.—This extraordinary, ingenious and comprehensive work of art—the first and only one of the kind ever conceived—stands forth as a monument of the unwearying patience and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility, is now open to the public, at the WORLD'S HALL, 377 and 379 Broadway, fitted up at an immense cost expressly for this master-piece of Art.—This is not a mere panoramic display upon canvass, but an actual structure, on Mercator's projection, of over one thousand square feet, composed of real land and water. Immense labor and enormous expense have been lavished upon the design, which is now completed. So real is the work, that all the oceans, seas, rivers, lakes, gulfs and bays are filled with running water, upon the surface of which floats ships and steamers, visibly moving en voyage to and from every clime. Mountains and valleys, with all the varied geographical phenomena they present, are spread out in the exact shape and form made by nature. Volcanoes visibly belch forth sulphuric flames. The dreadful maelstrom, or whirlpool, off the coast of Norway, is also seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The wreck of the ill fated steamer San Francisco is represented in the right locality, and seen sinking in the boundless deep—the Three Bells, Antartic and the Kilby, whose noble commanders so bravely rescued so many of America's sons and daughters, are also in view.—The north west passage, recently discovered by Captain McClure, is accurately shown and expatiated upon. The localities of the war now raging in Europe and Asia are correctly delineated. The golden fields of California and Australia are prominent in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the beholder can sway with enthusiastic raptures over the entire surface of the mighty globe, upon which, as upon a stage, he appears as an actor; and while he is surprised at the vast novelty of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of its mechanical operations, and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the amusing lesson of an hour. The best talent of the country has been employed in the preparation of this mammoth undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass, without regard to expense, have been bestowed to render it worthy of this enlightened age, the whole having been calculated from the best European charts, together with all the recent surveys by authority of the United States government. The audience is taken on a pleasant tour from pole to pole, and under the guidance of the experienced lecturer, ensured a safe passage and speedy return to their happy homes. We will only add, that such are but few of the many advantages which can be gained only by a visit to this modern wonder. In connection with the above, a perfect model of the city of San Francisco, as it now exists, with all its buildings, streets, wharves, shipping, &c made from actual measurement taken upon the spot for that purpose, built of solid material. Also, numerous panoramic views of the California regions of gold, the whole rendering is one of the most popular, interesting and instructive places of amusement in New York, or, we may safely say, in the world.

We learn that Professor Hart will shortly publish a book relative to the design of the World, including a history of his extensive travels in the Old and New World, anecdotes, &c. which must be very interesting, and should be read by the million. We are also informed that for the purpose of popularizing American Art, and for the purpose of giving his valuable book an extensive circulation, Prof. Hart proposes to give to all persons purchasing his gift tickets of admission, in any part of the world, a vast amount of valuable and elegant property.

The mere announcement of this fact by Prof. Hart is a sufficient guarantee for its merit and success; he being known, throughout the Union as an extensive traveler, public speaker, merchant, and a thorough active responsible business man; and we doubt not that the immense Hall will be duly crowded to behold the Modern Wonder.

Blackhawk in Sulky.

WE have the largest and best cut of this kind ever got up, engraved expressly for the Spirit of the Times, and will be sent to any part of the United States for 25 cents. Address (post paid) DR. WM. YOUNG, 152 Sansom St. Philadelphia.

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

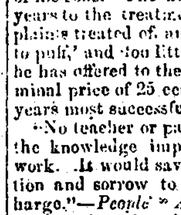
JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and 'with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."



One copy, (securely envelloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

THE MARRIAGE STATE,

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR,

In that pitiable condition so not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

D. 1849, and with the usual power of sale therein contained, and duly recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Essex, in vol. O of mortgages on pages 364 and 365 on the 4th day of June, 1849, at 3 o'clock, P. M., to secure the payment of five hundred dollars and interest, did duly grant, bargain, sell and convey to Jeremiah Powers, then of the town of Pittsford, county of Rutland and State of Vermont, certain premises described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

PHILADELPHIA MEDICAL HOUSE—Established 20 years ago by Dr. KINKELIN, corner of Third and Union sts. between Spruce and Pine, Philadelphia, Pa.

INVALIDS

Are apprised that Dr. Kinkelin continues his practice to a particular branch of medicine, which engages his undivided attention. He cautions the unfortunate against the abuse of mercury; thousands are annually mercurialized out of life. Secret affections are promptly extinguished.

TWENTY YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

In the treatment of a class of diseases hitherto neglected and imperfectly understood, has enabled Dr. KINKELIN, (Author of a work on Self Preservation,) to prove that nine tenths of the causes of nervous debility, local and constitutional weakness, mental and physical suffering, are traceable to certain habits, forming the most secret yet deadly and fatal springs of domestic misery and premature mortality.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

There is an evil habit sometimes indulged in by boys, in solitude, often growing up with them to manhood, and which, if not reformed in due time, not only begets serious obstacles to matrimonial happiness, but gives rise to a series of protracted invalidism, and devastating affections.—Few of those who give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequences, until they find the nervous system shattered, feel strange and unaccountable feelings, and vague fears in the mind.

The unfortunate thus affected becomes feeble, is unable to labor with accustomed vigor, or to apply his mind to study: his step is tardy and weak, he is dull, irresolute, and engages in his sport with less energy than usual.

If he emancipate himself before the practice has done its worst, and enter matrimony his marriage is unfruitful and his excuse tells him that this is caused by his early follies. These are considerable a which should awaken the attention of those similarly situated.

MARRIAGE

Requires the fulfilment of several conditions, in order that it may be really the cause of mutual happiness. Could the veil which covers the origin of domestic wretchedness be raised, and its true source in every instance disclosed—in how many would it be traced to physical disqualification and their attendant disappointments. Apply then while it is yet time, in order to have your unstrung and relaxed organization retraced, revivified and strengthened.

REMEMBER.

He who places himself under Dr. Kinkelin's treatment may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and rely upon the assurance, that the secrets of Dr. K's. patient will never be disclosed

Young man—let no false modesty deter you from making your case known to one who, from education and respectability, can cordially befriend you.

Too many think they will conceal the secret in their own hearts, and cure themselves. Alas! how often is this a fatal delusion, and how many a promising young man, who might have been an ornament to society, has faded from the earth.

Strictures of the urethra are rapidly removed by the application of a new chemical agent, used only by Dr. K. We know and constitutional debility promptly cured, and full vigor restored.

COUNTRY INVALIDS.

Can have (by stating their case explicitly, together with all their symptoms, per letter enclosing a remittance) Dr. K's. medicine, a proprietary according y.

Forwarded to any part of the United States, and packed secure from DAMAGE or CURIOSITY.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE VILLAGE.—Attracted by the delightful weather of the first of the week, we walked out with some friends who are projecting two new streets on the South East of our village. It is proposed to lay out a street from the Port Douglas Plank Road just east of H.H. Grandey's across to the street on which and a little east of where Amasa Macomber resides, and then another to intersect the above at right angles, commencing at the bridge just beyond where M. J. Jenkins lives on Spring St. This last proposed street can be made a most desirable one for mechanics, particularly so far as a never failing supply of water and protection from winds are concerned.

We like to see the village thrive.

PERSONAL.

——Richard H. Peabody Esq. of our village for three months past confined to his house by illness is convalescent, and was enabled to walk out and enjoy the fine air of the early part of this week.

——We heard with regret the other day that Geo. B. Pease Esq. of Port Henry was very ill with a fever. We trust to hear soon that he is recovered.

——Through our friend E. H, Garfield of this place, and one of our best merchants we have rec'd. from D. C. Shepard of N. Y. a valuable present of a bonnet for our lady. Mr. Shepard removed from Port Henry to N. Y. city two years ago. He is one of the firm of Bridge and Shepard, 16 Dey st. dealers in Straw Goods, Hats, Caps, Bonnets, Flowers, Umbrellas, &c., &c. and we are informed by Mr Garfield that they are doing a rush of buisness this spring—double that of last. All right We like to see folks from the country do well in the city. We never doubted Mr. Shepard's success for he possesses all the peculiar qualifications of a merchant—judgement, taste, energy, and as a financier no superior. That he has 'taken the tide at its ebb to be wafted on to fortune,' is certain. The best wish we can offer on the occasion is, that he may live long to enjoy his prosperity.

NEW GOODS.—Now is the time to visit Keeseville. New goods dont last long.—Among those who have returned from market since our last we may name:

——Mr. W. W. Kingsland, whose immense assortment is always selected with rare judgement and skill. His beautiful goods always attract a crowd.

——Mr. Shandrew has an unusually large assortment of boots and shoes.

——Mr. Garfield has been warranted in improving his store, and greatly enlarging his usual stock of goods.

——Mr. Boynton is busy arranging new goods of all descriptions in his beautiful store, and is preparing to please all who may call on him and their name is 'Legion.'

——Chas. Morris Merchant Tailor, with a never failing desire to please his patrons, has brought on dress goods of rare quality and attractive styles.

——M. J Jenkins has returned with new and fashionable jewelry.

Others are now in market, and still others are on their way. We shall of course chronicle their return.

☞ The enormous advertisement on the inside of our paper will go out the last week in this month. Such a benefit is peculiarly agreeable to the printer, and we should be perfectly delighted if our readers could say the same.

——We promised our readers a map of the seat of war in Europe, and we are happy to be able to say that we shall be able to redeem our promise in a few days—we hope next week.

——The Poem of Mrs. Wells read at the supper of the "Sons" and presentation of a Bible to them by the ladies we think we will defer till after the within advertisement expires, when we can give it a place much more to our satisfaction, and we presume to all. It is not a production to spoil by the keeping. It will be as acceptable to all then as now.

PUTNAMS MONTHLY, for May is rec'd. Contents; Nebraska, The Encantadas (concluded,) an hour with Lamennais; Fire side Travels; Cesar DeEspana; Henry Clay as an orator; The Czar and the Sultan; Stage coach stories; What have we to do with the Eastern question? DEATH OF FRANCIS SALTUS.—The following notice of the death of Mr. Saltus, the founder of the Peru Iron Works at Clintonville, is taken from the N. Y. Journal of Commerce:—

Another of our oldest and most respectable citizens has departed. Mr. Saltus died on Thursday evening. So extensive have been his business and social relations during the long period of his active life, and so highly was he esteemed for integrity and uprightness of character, as well as for successful enterprise in his pursuits, that his decease will excite a very general regret in community, especially among the merchants, of the city, of whom he was one of the worthiest. The following brief notice of his career has been communicated to us by a correspondent:

The death of the late Colonel Francis Saltus, gives occasion for a brief eulogy, from one eminently able to acknowledge his sterling worth and virtues

Our city has lost its oldest merchant, Col. Saltus being the founder of the oldest mercantile house here; and during a very long period of years he has justly maintained at all times its position and honor. Commencing mercantile pursuits at the early age of thirteen years; we find him at one-and-twenty in copartnership with one of the wealthiest merchants* of the day; and at five-and-twenty, one of the first merchants here, owning and sailing several vessels, the number of which afterwards were largely increased. His trade with the Spanish main, and the immensity of his operations in the Baltic, are only known to the cotemporaries of his day. An underwriter for himself and others, the first Marine Insurance Co. formed in this city received a subscription of twenty-five thousand dollars from him. His trade with Russia, before and after the war of 1812, was alike princely in its arrangements, as it was profitable in its results. His brother Nicholas, then residing in Russia, enjoyed the friendship of the Emperor Alexander. When Moscow was burnt by the Russians, Mr. Saltus lost one thousand boxes of sugar, and an immense quantity of tobacco and his three vessels, the 'Nancy,' 'Hudson,' and 'Bolivar,' were taken by the French on their way home and after successful voyages, for which he never received any indemnification.

The high price, together with the protective feeling in favor of home manufactures, caused Mr. Saltus to engage largely in the production of iron in his native state; and in this, as well as all other business matters, he proved himself equal to the matter he undertook. He made a wilderness a paradise—an unknown spot, celebrated for its mineral wealth—developing an entire county, leveling mountains, raising forests, struggling through bad periods and changes of the Tariff, seeing his works twice destroyed by fire and once by freshet, laboring under difficulties that most men would have sunk under

He seemed to wish to be placed in difficulties, that he might have opportunity to extricate himself. His reward has been given him, and his immense exertions were crowned with success He leaves to his children a spotless character, an honorable name, and an ample fortune; and, above all, the great satisfaction of knowing that in Jesus Christ he had a friend who did not desert him when his strength failed, and when his eye grew dim; and that he has gone where his good deeds, virtues, and charities will insure him a crown of glory forever.

*The late Edmund Seaman.

TEMPERANCE MEETING.—At a meeting of the citizens of Keeseville called to be held at the Wesleyan Chapel, on Monday evening, the 8th inst., for the purpose of expressing sympathy with and proffering support to the Poor-masters of this town in their prosecutions against the violators of the excise law, Major Powers, Esq., was chosen Chairman, and Mr. H. S. Tousley, Secretary.

Rev. John Mattocks then proposed the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, That, as citizens of Keeseville interested in the advancement of the cause of temperance, and the promotion of good morals, we rejoice that our prosecuting officers have so nobly enforced the law against illicit traffic in ardent spirits.

Resolved, That we sympathize with them, and pledge ourselves to sustain them by our influence, and, if need be, by our persons.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the different papers of this village.

These resolutions were ably sustained by Rev. Mr. Mattocks, Messrs. B. H. Estes, John McElroy and other gentlemen of the meeting.

MAJOR POWERS, Chairman.
H. S. TOUSLEY, Secretary.

Public Meeting at Port Kent.

At a public meeting comprehending most of the inhabitants of the village of Port Kent held at the School House on the 12th of April 1854 convened to take into consideration the Liquor Traffic in said village, John Tenant Esq. was called to the chair and Norman F. Estes appointed Secretary.

On motion, Resolved, that the Citizens of Port Kent are opposed to and deprecate the Traffic in ardent spirits as a beverage in this community, and that we earnestly request those engaged in it to discontinue the same.

Resolved, That Jonathan Sawyer Jonathan Snyder and Liberty B. Branch, be a committee to prosecute for any future violation of the statute and that they are here by authorized to raise funds to enforce such prosecution.

Resolved. That the said committee, present a copy of the foregoing Resolutions to every person, in this village engaged in the aforesaid Traffic.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be signed by the chairman and secretary, and that the papers in Keeseville, Burlington and Plattsburgh, be requested to publish the same.

Monster Eggs &c.

CROWNPOINT, May 6 1854.

MR. ED.—I suppose some of the farmers in the northern part of Essex County, think they are a little ahead in the egg line from some publications appearing in the Rep. of recent date—giving the public information of Eggs, of unmeasured size. But, Sir, listen to the following, and believe that in the egg line "Some things can be done as well as others."

Alvin Honsinger, Esq., of Crownpoint, N. Y. owns a hen that on the 17th day of April 1854, laid an egg of the following dimensions and weight: 7 1-2 inches around longest way 6 1-2 do. shortest way, weighs 3 3-4 oz, containing but one yolk.

Geo. Gunnisson Esq., of Crownpoint, N. Y. owns a hen that on the 11th day of April 1854 laid an egg of the following dimensions: 7 7-8 inches around the longest way, 6 1-8 inches around shortest way, weighs, 3 1 2 oz,—supposed to contain two yolks But mark, the two eggs were laid by the good old kind of speckled hens —and not by the noted Shanghais.

New discoveries of Iron Ore in Clinton County.

CADYVILLE, May 8, 1854.

COL,—I preceive by frequent paragraphs in your paper that you intend to keep 'posted' in relation to Ore Beds, and thinking you would like to hear some good account from this part of the county, I write you.

Professor Hall has been looking over our hills in search of one for a few days past, and has found in many places strong indications of the article. On a lot owned by Loring Ellis, (only five miles from Saranac river,) he says there is the largest quantity in Northern New York, and the specimens are of the first quality. So say good judges. Measures will be taken immediately to raise a quantity of the ore and test its quality.

Yours, &c.,
COL. TARBELL, J. GREEN,

SPIRITUAL MANIFESTATIONS examined and explained. We are indebted to Messrs. C. B. Hatch & Son, of Westport, for an elegantly bound copy of the above book. "Spirit Rappings" have not only made considerable excitement in the world, which is of little consequence, but they have made numberless lunatics which is a sad reflection. This book furnishes an antidote to the follies of the Spirit rappings written in plain yet logical style, and it gives the subject a calm, thorough, searching, philosophical examination, and refutation. We commend it to general circulation.

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine for April is rece'd. Contents:—The Commercial results of a war with Russia, The Puppets of all Nations. The Quiet Heart Part 5; Chronological Curiosities; The Reform bills of 1782 and 1854; The blue books and the Eastern question; Life in Sahara; The cost of the Coalition Ministry.

AGRICULTURE.—Whoever has given this interest any attention has observed that it has kept pace with the progress of mechanics and manufactures. Farms are being improved, and better conducted, practically and scientifically. A very great degree of interest is also manifested in the improvement of stock of all kinds. In horses, Essex and Clinton Counties are fast attaining celebrity. We have from time to time noted some of the best But what is best of all, farmers are universally thriving, and many are growing rapidly rich.—This, please note, is in Northern New York, once denounced as the "Siberian region" of the State.

——J. C. Finch of this place owns one of this breed that is a beauty.

GENERAL TERM, SARATOGA Co.—The Saratoga Whig says:—

There were sixty nine appeal cases on the calendar of the General Term, when it commenced its session at Ballston Spa. on Monday last. Of these, twenty five had been argued, or submitted, up to Wednesday evening, leaving quite a number still unimposed of. It is probable the Term will not close until to morrow. Judge James, who made his first appearance on the bench in this county at this term, seems to be in high favor with the bar. Judge James is beloved wherever

News of the Week.

The news of the week is highly interesting and important. Nebraska has been moved in Congress, and there seems to be no doubt it will pass at an early day. We are also evidently to be embroiled with Spain for Cuba. The President has also vetoed a bill donating public lands for the benefit of the insane, and at the same time proposed to pay Santa Ana $20,000,000 for more territory to quarrel over! The Constitutional distinction is this, that the latter will extend Slave territory, create new offices for democrats, and perhaps lead to war, and the former christian charity.

The news from Europe indicates unaccountable tardiness on the part of England and France, which some think means peace, while others say, the difficulties are becoming more and more complicated, with the prospect of embroiling the whole of the Eastern Continent. What a pity we have not an able and stable administration at home. Business men had better move prudently. The destiny of the country is in the hands of a reckless crew. This country and its business may be vastly benefited by the European troubles, or they may and probably will be ruthlessly trifled with. We say again to business men, be prudent.

BREVITY OF THE LAW.—The new code in this state makes some valuable reforms by cutting off the unnecessary verbiage from the law forms. The Huron Reflector however, gives us a specimen of the Prairie Practice before 'book larnin' spoiled it, which for brevity equals any forms in the new code. Example;

Died,

At St. Armand, Essex County, N. Y. on the morning of May 5th, Lucinda, wife of Elias Goodspeed, Esq., aged seventy years. Although aged, her death was sudden and entirely unexpected by her friends who reside within a few rods of her residence, and even to those of her immediate household. She had for a few weeks laboured under the influence of a bad cold, yet able to attend to domestic affairs in her family up to the evening before her death. She died as she had lived, in perfect quietness and peace. Not even a groan escaped her lips, or a spasm visible on her person. She had been a member of Church, for the past fifty eight years, during which time she had never been reproved or censured for fault, or unfaithfulness, in her Masters cause.

(The printers in Hampshire and Franklin counties, Mass., will confer a favour on her relations by publishing the above.)

The following description of the Magnificent Model of the World is taken from one of the leading papers of New York city, and will well repay perusal:—

PROF. HART'S WHOLE WORLD.

THE Entire World at one view, in magnificent bas relief, by Professor J. Woodman Hart.—This extraordinary, ingenious and comprehensive work of art—the first and only one of the kind ever conceived—stands forth as a monument of the unwearying patience and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility, is now open to the public, at the WORLD'S HALL 377 and 379 Broadway, fitted up at an immense cost expressly for this master-piece of Art.—This is not a mere panoramic display upon canvass, but an actual structure, on Mercator's projection, of over one thousand square feet, composed of real land and water. Immense labor and enormous expense have been lavished upon the design, which is now completed. So real is the work, that all the oceans, seas, rivers, lakes, gulfs and bays, are filled with running water, upon the surface of which floats ships and steamers, visibly moving envoigue to and from every clime. Mountains and valleys, with all the varied geographical phenomena they present, are spread out in the exact shape and form made by nature. Volcanoes visibly belch forth sulphuric flames. The dreadful maelstrom or whirlpool, off the coast of Norway, is also seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The wreck of the ill fated steamer San Francisco is represented in the right locality, and seen sinking in the boundless deep—the Three Bells, Antartic and the Kilby, whose noble commanders so bravely rescued so many of America's sons and daughters, are also in view.—The north west passage, recently discovered by Captain McClure, is accurately shown and expatiated upon. The localities of the war now raging in Europe and Asia are correctly delineated. The golden fields of California and Australia are prominent in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the beholder can sway with enthusiastic raptures over the entire surface of the mighty globe, upon which, as upon a stage, he appears as an actor; and while he is surprised at the vast novelty of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of its mechanical operations, and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the amusing lesson of an hour. The best talent of the country has been employed in the preparation of this mammoth undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass, without regard to expense, have been bestowed to render it worthy of this enlightened age, the whole having been calculated from the best European charts, together with all the recent surveys by authority of the United States government. The audience is taken on a pleasant tour from pole to pole, and under the guidance of the experienced lecturer, ensured a safe passage and speedy return to their happy homes. We will only add, that such are but few of the many advantages which can be gained only by a visit to this modern wonder. In connection with the above, a perfect model of the city of San Francisco, as it now exists, with all its buildings, streets, wharves, shipping, &c made from actual measurement taken upon the spot for that purpose, built of solid material. Also, numerous panoramic views of the California regions of gold, the whole rendering it one of the most popular, interesting and instructive places of amusement in New York, or, we may safely say, in the world.

We learn that Professor Hart will shortly publish a book relative to the design of the World, including a history of his extensive travels in the Old and New World, anecdotes, &c. which must be very interesting, and should be read by the million. We are also informed that for the purpose of popularizing American Art, and for the purpose of giving his valuable book an extensive circulation, Prof. Hart proposes to give to all persons purchasing his gift tickets of admission, in any part of the world, a vast amount of valuable and elegant property.

The mere announcement of this fact by Prof. Hart is a sufficient guarantee for its merit and success, he being known throughout the Union as an extensive traveler, public speaker, merchant, and a thorough active responsible business man; and we doubt not that the immense Hall will be duly crowded to behold its modern Wonder.

Blackhawk in Sulky.

WE have the largest and best cut of this chief ever got up, engraved expressly for the Republican Job Office.

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation, are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

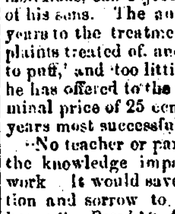
JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D

From A. Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia.—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M. D.

This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff, and too little presumption to impose, he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, you co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."



One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

With this new method Dr. C. has restored many afflicted ones to perfect health; as an evidence of which, he has innumerable certificates. Speaking of the treatment a physician remarks:—It is evident that inhaling so stately breathing an agreeable, healing Vapor, the medicinal properties must come in direct contact with the whole of the aerial cavity of the lungs, and thus escape the many and varied changes produced upon them when introduced into the stomach and subjected to the process of digestion. Henry's Invigorating Cordial.

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs an Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skilful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the ill cases for which it is recommended, and hence what it is presented to the public, as an efficious remedy is a solemn vow to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to insanity the cases of Impotency Seminal losses, Disordered Sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluor Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, there could cannot be excelled in the Nervous Debility of Invalids of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Inquietude, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

DEBILITY

TO FEMALES

Henry's Invigorating Cordial is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Females would exist, were they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which female are liable to are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN,

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVOUS DEBILITY,

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, mistaken as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excesses have brought on themselves Premature Impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and Shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the sexual passions, occasioning the necessity of renouncing the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. Its possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

It is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations, Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL"

is put up in 8 oz. Panal Bottles, and is easily recognized by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle, the counterfeit which is forgery, as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

AFFLICTED READ.

PHILADELPHIA MEDICAL HOUSE—Established 20 years ago by Dr. KINKELIN, corner of Third and Union sts. between Spruce and Pine, Philadelphia, Pa.

INVALIDS

Are apprised that Dr. Kinkelin continues his practice to a particular branch of medicine, which engages his undivided attention. He cautions the unfortunate against the abuse of mercury; thousands are annually mercurialized out of life. Recent affections are promptly extinguished.

TWENTY YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

In the treatment of a class of diseases hith rto neglected and imperfectly understood, has enabled Dr KINKELIN, (Author of a work on Self Preservation) to prove that nine tenths of the causes of nervous debility, local and constitutional weakness, mental and physical suffering, are traceable to certain habits, forming the most secret yet deadly and fatal springs of domestic misery and premature mortality.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

There is an evil habit sometimes indulged in by boys, in solitude, often growing up with them to manhood, and which, if not reformed in due time, not only begets serious obstacles to matrimonial happiness, but gives rise to a series of protracted insidious, and devastating affections.—Few of those who give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequences until they find the nervous system shattered, the strange and unaccountable feelings, and vague fears in the mind.

The unfortunate thus affected becomes feeble, is unable to labor with accustomed vigor, or to apply his mind to study; his step is tardy, and weak, he is dull, irresolute, and engages in his sport with less energy than usual.

If he emancipate him elf before the practice has done its worst, and enter matrimony his marriage is unfruitful and a sense tells him that this is caused by his early follies. These are considerations which should awaken the attention of those similarly situated.

MARRIAGE

Requires the fulfilment of several conditions, in order that it may be really the cause of mutual happiness. Could the veil which covers the origin of domestic wretchedness be raised, and its true source in every instance disclosed—to how many could it be traced to pitiful disqualifications and their attendant disappointments. Apply then while it is yet time, in order to have your constitution and relaxed organization rebraced, revivified and strengthened.

REMEMBER.

He who places himself under Dr. Kinkelin's treatment may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and rely upon the assurance, that the secrets of Dr. K's patient will never be disclosed

Young man—let no false modesty deter you from making your case known to one who, from education and respectability, can certainly befriend you.

Too many think they will conceal the secret in their own hearts, and cure themselves. Alas! how often is this a fatal delusion, and how many a promising young man, who might have been an ornament to society, has faded from the earth.

Strictures of the urethra are rapidly removed by the application of a new therapeutical agent, used on by Dr. K. We know and constitutional debility promptly cured, and full vigor restored.

COUNTRY INVALIDS.

Can have (by stating their case explicitly, together with all their symptoms, per letter inclosing a remittance) Dr. K's. medicine, as proprietated according.

Forwarded to any part of the United States, and packed, secure from DAMAGE or CURIOSITY.

VOLUME XIV. NO. 52. KEESEVILLE, N. Y., MAY 20 1854. WHOLE NUMBER 524

The Republican.

KEESEVILLE:

Saturday Morning, May 20.

The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands,
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands.
The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

"I had rather be right than be President."—Henry Clay.

So said this great American Statesman on an eminent occasion, and so say we now in regard to the position of Whigs in Congress. In opposition to the attempted outrages by the Administration, they form the grand centre of the opposing forces. But for their boldness and determination the threatened breach of national faith would have been consummated, the freedom of debate violated, and the worst of known despotisms extended under the auspices of the American Eagle and the protection of the Stars and Stripes to territory larger than New England! We are more gratified with the present position of whigs than if they were in power. They may yet be overborne, but it will be after the most determined resistance. We were never prouder of our name of whig than now, and thermore so, that whigs from Maine to Louisiana stand shoulder to shoulder in the strife.

THE IRON BUSINESS.

——The British Government has prohibited the exportation of Iron to the Continent! What is the meaning and object of this partial prohibition? Will their iron be wanted at home? Will it be rushed to this country for money to carry on the war? Was it to embarass the business of a few of the enemy? Was it to release the British manufacturers from ruinous contracts entered into under the late low prices of iron? These are some of the questions agitating the business men of this country.

What a shame that we have an Administration at home caring more for the rowdy, filibustering slavery propagandist members of its own party, than for national faith, and the country and its great business interests. But so it is, and business men must take care of themselves.

TEMPERANCE.—On Saturday afternoon last quite an excitement occurred in our village mixed up of fun and seriousness.—A quantity of liquor was sold on an execution against one of the grocery men, on a judgment for violating the excise law. A barrel or two was bid off by Jacob D. Kingsland for $18 or $20, and at once turned over by him to the boys who rolled it into the street and knocked the heads in. Patrick Clune bid off a barrel of gin, and after paying his bid the constable levied upon it on execution he held against Patrick. The latter resisted, and quite a skirmish took place. He was subdued, however, and in less than an hour was on his way to jail, with irons on his wrists.

—Having stated some two or three weeks since that no popular demonstration had been made here by leading business men in favor of no license and the prosecution of offenders, it is proper to state that since then, a bond of indemnity required of the Overseers of the Poor by the constable was promptly signed by nearly all the leading men in the place, and a resolution to sustain the officers was manifested.

TEXAS.—Serious Indian depredations have occurred near San Antonio in that State. We are indebted to John G. Viall late of Westport for papers containing the details. Several families were murdered, others scalped and left for dead, and others stolen and carried off. Among the latter were several children. In some instances, children were murdered in the presence of their parents, and the outrages were accompanied by all the usual Indian barbarities. We quote from Mr. Viall's letter:

"San Antonio, Texas.
Dear Sir, Apr. 17, 1854.

—— * * I send you these Extras thinking they may be of some interest to you. Our city is in a state of intense excitement, and curses against the injudicious disposition of the regular troops by the Administration are to be heard on every corner and from men of all parties. The fact is, a great mistake has been made in changing the position of the troops, as it leaves a large extent of frontier wholly unprotected against the Indians. I think however, that these marauders will be brought to justice for this ones, as the company now in pursuit under the command of that champion of Texas, Maj. G. T. Howard, is a most able and efficient body of men, and if there are any Indians to be had they will be very sure to get them." * * *

Yours, truly,
J. G. VIALL.

Col. J. TARBELL,
Keeseville, N. Y.

The Whigs of Vermont will hold their State Convention at Rutland on the 7th of June.

Hon. G. A. Simmons.

Mr. Simmons has made a great speech on Nebraska which in some respects is a new view of the question. We must try and find room for it next week, and in the mean time, we give our readers an abstract of its contents:

1. He endeavors to show that the Missouri Compromise is not only binding in honor but in law and cannot be repealed by legislation. This is a new point and the position is deemed sound by some of the best lawyers in Congress.

2. He shows the proposed repeal as a subversion of all our former policy, inconsistent with the Constitution, and highly revolutionary, besides being a swindle for the reason that the bill introduces Slavery before the territorial legislature can be formed and therefore a cheat and a fraud on republicanism.

3. He has also made some remarks on the policy of introducing negro slavery, into vacant territory, showing it a violation of the Constitution and an outrage on the free states.

UNPRECEDENTED LIBERALITY.

——The Rochester Union offers to all persons who send it "five Weekly Subscribers" an "elegant and costly Steel Engraving representing President Pierce in military dress on horseback.—Ex.

Is the Editor of the Union a fool, or does he take his readers to be green? Or it may be that they are all office seekers in that section. By way of improvement we suggest that it would be far more impressive if he were to select for his 'pioter' a scene in the military history of General Pierce at that point where he is said to have "fainted just without the reach of the bullets of the enemy when gallantly leading his troops into action!"

RAIL ROAD ACCIDENT.—A collision occurred on the Troy and Greenbush road the other day. The express train for N. Y. left Troy 5 minutes after the passenger train from Troy to Albany. The latter made two stops, and when just under way the second time the express train overtook and run into it at full speed. The engine split the rear passenger car completely in two, scattering the pieces and the passengers to the right and left, yet strange to say, no one was seriously hurt. The accident occurred in consequence of a new and inexperienced engineer on the express train.

Struggle on the Nebraska Bill.

Special Dispatch to the N. Y. Tribune.

Washington, Thursday, May 11.

The whigs fight well, but they are not heartily sustained by the other opponents of the bill. Giddings, Gerrit Smith, Haven, and the Softs generally.

A few Adamantines are thoroughly opposed to the bill, but generally, they hesitate, not seeing clearly the end of all these things. A few of the Softs are also openly opposed to the bill, and tho' they all hate and despise the Administration, they profess to serve it. Haven is a whig, and law partner of Mr. Fillmore, and voted to take up the Nebraska bill very much to the surprise of all. Subsequently he fought resolutely with the whigs. Gerrit Smith professes conscientious scruples against an organized opposition to the bill. Giddings and the Free Soilers keep fire at first and seemed to care less for the result than for agitation, but subsequently fought well according to the dispatches.—Now, what we wish to say is this, that for all great and beneficent measures, for all that pertains to the permanent honor and glory of the country, for internal progress, for resistance to external expansion by robbery and piracy, for opposition to wrong and oppression and the extension of Slave territory, the country must and does look to whigs. The whigs can save the ship of State and they will. They possess the great administrative talent of the country, and into their hands its destinies will be placed by acclamation in '56 as in 1840.

Whigs have reason to be proud of their representatives in Congress. They have taken a stand like Leonidas and his Spartans at Thermopylæ, and we trust they will hold their ground or perish in the attempt. They will be rewarded by their country.

GARRISONIANISM AND DISSOLUTION.

——Last week the Garrisonian section of the Abolitionists held their Anniversary in N. Y. when Mr. Garrison proposed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the one grand vital issue to be made with the slave power is, the dissolution of the existing American Union."

THE GREAT ISSUES OF THE DAY.

——In Europe: Republican, or Cossack.

In America: Freedom or Slavery.

Is the world in fact traveling forward, or backward? This is evidently an epoch in the world's history. It is soon to be decided whether truth or error is to prevail in the world. Who is on the side of truth?

☞ There is an excellent School for ladies in Essex which is deserving of patronage.

News of the Week.

A synopsis of the exciting doings in Congress is given elsewhere. Nebraska comes up again to-day.

—Our relations with Spain are said to be growing more and more imminent, and very soon probably the people will be called upon to "sustain the country right or wrong" All who do not sanction the most barefaced rascality—the most shameful disregard of decency, will be denounced as "traitors" and "federals!" Nothing but war can save the administration, and it is ready to sacrifice common honesty to bring it about.

—From Europe, we get only rumors—No battle yet, tho' it is said the Allied Fleets bombarded Odessa, some say two hours, some ten hours, and some two days No result was arrived at, save that both parties were somewhat damaged. Movements on the Danube have been favorable to the Turks. It would seem also, that the spirit of revolution is steadily extending among the masses, and the nations, that the war's delay only aids the revolutionists, and that when the tug of war does come, Europe will be one mighty volcano of strife.

THE ECLIPSE.—An eclipse of the sun is to take place, according to Astronomers, on the 26th inst., commencing at 6 minutes after 4 o'clock in the afternoon. It has been erroneously stated to commence in the morning. So says Prof. Curley of George town College in the National Intelligencer. To be seen, however, it may be well to be on hand at both hours named. It is to last two hours. Hence, those who take the morning watch must be up with the lark.

CONGRESS has been in a high state of excitement beyond that of any former occasion, caused by an attempt of the friends of Nebraska to stifle debate and abridge the freedom of speech. Against this outrage the opponents of that measure protested and resolved to "sit it out" to the 4th of March next if necessary. The struggle commenced Thursday noon of last week and continued till 2 o'clock Friday night, sitting clear through Thursday night, all day Friday and till 2 o'clock that night.—At the latter hour the Nebraskaites yielded for then and consented to adjourn. During that session, the house was in a state of anarchy and revolution. Hunt of La., Cullon of Tenn., and L. D. Campbell of Ohio, proved themselves men of cool and undaunted resolution, but of noble and chivalric courage. All honor to their names.

Couches and refreshments were moved into the Hall, and members ate and rested by platoons in turn. Douglass was in the midst of the melee rallying his pandemonium hosts. Edmundson of Va., a drunken set, and a representative of "the institution," was put forward to get up a fight with Mr. Sage of Troy, Wentworth of Ill., and Campbell of Ohio. He passed round from desk to desk using the most vulgar and profane language towards the opponents of the bill When he approached Mr. Campbell, the latter stood cool and collected, and placing his hands behind his back, and refraining from all menaces or threats, simply dared the gentleman to lay the weight of his finger upon him. The House was in an uproar, and Mr. Edmundson saved his precious hide by the interference of friends. He was put forward to get up a fight and Douglass was cognizant of the fact.

The reports occupy several columns of the city papers, and with the dispatches from Washington sent off at different stages of the session through the night are destined to arouse the people to the highest pitch of excitement and indignation.

We regret we have not room for the dispatches and proceedings entire.

☞ These are times when every true, patriotic whig should stand by his colors, and sleep upon his arms. It is no time now to be faint hearted, nor discouraged. When Gideon went out with the children of Israel to fight the Midianites, the Lord commanded him to send home all that were afraid, and there returned twenty and two thousand. Again, the Lord commanded Gideon to lead Israel down unto the water to drink. Those that bowed their faces to the water were sent home, while those who dipped water with their hands and put it to their lips, keeping their eye on the foe, were set apart, with whom Gideon put the Midianites to flight.

The moral is self-evident. With such men as Hunt of La., Cullon of Tenn. Campbell of Ohio, and others, we shall not wait for a Gideon, or a Moses nor for true men, If any are afraid let them depart now.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—Communications from kind friends are accumulating upon our hands, but we believe nothing not equally acceptible by anything. As soon as the long advertisement goes out they shall all have an early place. The first issue in June will be nearly if not entirely filled up with original articles written expressly for the Republican. Keep doing so, friends.

Re-copied for the Republican.

Annular Eclipse.

Partial Eclipse begins	4h	11m	4s	P. M.
Annular Eclipse begins	5	25	58	"
Greatest Eclipse	5	27	30	"
Annular Eclipse ends	5	29	22	"
Partial Eclipse ends	6	35	59	"
Whole duration of partial eclipse,	2	24	15·9	"
Duration of annular phase	0	3	44·4	"

[We take the liberty to say that the above calculations are by Mr. Elisha Arnold. There are few young men of superior attainments In some departments of science he is a proficient.]—Ed. Rep.

☞ During the struggle in Congress last week, Lewis D. Campbell of Ohio never shut his eyes to sleep from Thursday noon to Friday night at 2 o'clock! He is a faithful whig sentinel, and will be remembered "in the good time coming."

☞ "Col Tarbell of the Republican is in for a prize of a thousand dollars. Poverty is a crying evil any way; hence our rejoicing at the prosperity of our neighbors."—[Northern Standard.

We are sorry to say so, but there are several exceptions to the above.

1. The prize was $100,000. A mistake of our neighbor doubtless, or is that his estimate of blessings.'

2. Our 'boy' is indignant at the implied insinuation in the italics. We did not intend to have him see it, but noticing that something was evidently withheld from him, he stole the march in the absence of 'nurse' and read it. He has not suffered a cry,' nor even a whimper to escape his lips, and he asks the Editor of the Standard to retract. It was with difficulty that he could be restrained from coming right down in person to seek redress!

☞ Whigs occupy now very much the position they did from 1830 to 1840. They struggled then against executive dictation and official corruption. They struggle now against similar abuses multiplied beyond endurance, they struggle against the most shameful abuse of political and national faith—against an administration as reckless, as corrupt, and as weak as those that disgrace Spain, or Mexico, and their labors will be crowned with the popular approbation in '55 as in 1840.

☞ Through our friend E H. Garfield of this place, and one of our best merchants, we have received from D. C. Sheppard of New York a valuable present of a bonnet for our lady.—[Essex Rep.

As the editor of the Republican is a married man, it would have been much more becoming in him to have given that 'bonnet' to his WIFE.—[Albany Journal.

We wrote for the country where in the virtuous simplicity of the people 'wife,' 'lady,' and 'woman' are synonymous, and not for the city where 'knowledge of good and evil makes a wide distinction. Nor were we writing for the eye of the critic, or perhaps we should have said 'wife' However, our 'wife' has got the 'bonnet,' and the Journal Editor has perpetrated a criticism. We are satisfied if he is.

By the way Webster says, a 'lady' is, 'a woman of distinction' and by custom the title belongs to any woman of genteel Education.' The above paragraph was no doubt written by one of the new Editors, and as he is a young man without a 'wife' we fear he removed to the city too young and that he has been too early initiated into its 'mysteries.' Ode alvise to him is, that on some subjects, 'ignorance is bliss.' Then besides, the city papers are small fry and 'coat tails in' for valuable gifts, and we readily forgive and forget our contemporarie's envy.

Note—The Rochester American will find itself replied to in the above.

TRUTH.—The Jeffersonian (adamantine) calls the present, 'a loose and irreverent national administration,' and advises the Hards to 'stand aloof,' while at the same time it goes Nebraska.

NEW ATTRACTIONS.—Among others, Mr. Seaborn, with Hasbrouck, has just returned from N. Y., and those looking for something new to read will find their tastes accommodated by as attentive and polite gentlemen as there are in town.

FULLER,—is adding new horses to his Livery Stable, and says he is not to be outdone in anything pertaining to that business. That's right. To deserve success is to win it. Rivalry properly conducted is what the people want, and it is the way to increase business. The people will appreciate these improvements.

CADWELL.—has again returned from market with new goods. His energy, and judgment are securing him an extensive and profitable trade.

MISS. ELLIOT BLAKESLEE of this village is a proficient in the new style of painting. Her pictures deserve a call and an inspection. The art is an agreeable pastime and a [illegible] to her in the art.

THE SALTUS, is again afloat and safely moored in the care of her friends in Plattsburgh harbor. She arrived in Plattsburgh at midnight and such was the feeling among the people that they turned out 500 strong, with the brass band, and marched through the streets, cheering and rejoicing. Capt. Chamberlain will soon be on his favorite element once more, and will be greeted with great applause by his friends. The Commodore cannot be spared from the lake.

THE CANALS.

——The Albany State Register was recently advocating with great ability the Sale of the Canals. We are disposed to think they had better be in the hands of individuals than of the State.

A TOUGH YARN.—A few days since some workmen in Poughkeepsie while engaged in sawing a locust log, which was perfectly sound and probably one hundred years old, found a cavity in the centre containing a live toad, seven and half pounds in weight.—Exchange.

In our opinion, this is a very great—toad—seven pounds and a half! Just think of it!—Larger than a respectable mud turtle. And then a centenarian toad, a hundred years old at least, and how much more, no man can tell. May be he was an antodeluvian animal, of the times of the Ichthiosaurus, and great lizards, with necks long enough to reach across the street and gobble up a man, as a duck would a polly wog.—Will any two gentlemen of fair moral character, help us believe this story? We'll divide the responsibility, each taking a third, and in that way yield a reasonable degree of credence to the whole. For our portion of the story, we'll undertake to believe that some 'workmen in Poughkeepsie, was engaged in sawing a locust log, which was perfectly sound, and probably one hundred years old. The second gentleman may believe that 'they found a cavity in the centre, containing a live toad.' While the third may have faith in the fact that the said toad was 'seven and a half pounds in weight.' The latter gentleman should be a man of strong bilious temperament, with duplicate bumps of credulity largely developed.—State Register.

A FREAK OF NATURE.—We are credibly informed that a cat on the farm of Mr. Beggarly, in this county, gave birth two or three weeks since, to three kittens, and three naturally formed squirrels. The kittens and squirrels are said to be living and thriving.—Exchange.

Poor Grimalkin! How strange she must have looked, to see her 'squirrels' jumping about among the trees, sitting up like 'big folks' and cracking walnuts, and chattering! chattering! while their little brother and sister kittens looking wonderingly on, filled with surprise at the antics of their relatives! But we can't believe this story. It will take a half dozen gentlemen of 'good moral character,' to assist us in giving any credence to such a 'tale.'—Albany Register.

WHITEHALL.

——Of the business prospects of that village the Whitehall Chronicle says:

With the return of Spring our Village gives evidences of life and energy in every department of its business more cheering and inhabitable than we have seen for years. The fact is, Whitehall has reached its lowest point of declination, both in business and morals, and is now beginning to ascend to a more prosperous condition as regards the former, and to a more exalted state as regards the latter. The discouraging dulness and inactivity which has characterized the place, with respect to its business, is rapidly giving way to to a new born spirit of enterprise and activity On every side may be seen the signs of returning prosperity.

[Correspondence of The N. Y. Tribune.]

Forne-Y-Ana.

WASHINGTON, April 16. 1854.

The profitable position of Col. Forney, with the present Administration, being Clerk of the House of Representatives, with the funds of the House under his control, besides having a retinue of Clerks under him at the Capitol, and in the General Land Office, is a matter of much speculation just now. He has now become connected as associate editor with The Union newspaper, and consequently shares in the profits of the public printing. Taking into account all the items of actual and contingent profits to accrue, from the passage of sundry bills now before Congress, in which he, 'sub rosa,' has become largely interested, with his profits from the public printing, and the supply of stationary for the House of Representatives, Col. Forney may be set down good for $20,000 a year, independent of Executive favors from Frank lin Pierce, or half the fortune of Edwin Forrest, to both of whom he was once ardently attached,' and over the former it is said he now exercises complete control. The able and efficient Secretary of the Treasury deplores the ascendency which Col. Forney has over the President; but a member of Congress from New Hampshire told me this morning that he thought it deplorable for the country, for it was far better to have Forney President than Franklin Pierce that Forney was no fool, although he might be mistaken for a knave.' Knaves and fools sometimes resemble each other.

Lawyers in Wisconsin.—Livingston's Law Register gives a list of seven hundred and fifteen lawyers in Wisconsin The county of Milwaukie alone has one hundred and fifty-one of the number.

Military Cards.—The Albany Atlas is requested to state that portion of the Military Code referring to the duties of the different town and county officers, in the enrolment of the militia, and the assessment and collection of commutations, is now being printed by the Adjutant General, and copies will be forwarded to the several County Clerks for distribution about the 1st May.

Significant and True.—The Albany Register says, assemble "all the citizens of this city, of whatever political faith, who are in favor of the Nebraska measure, and a decent sized omnibus would hold them all. Gather all the editors of the State, who advocate that measure, and they would not make a cab load."

Latest News.

We learned, by way of a passenger from Boston yesterday, that an engagement is reported to have taken place between the Allied and Russian Fleets, in the black Sea in which the Russians were defeated and 20 of their vessels captured.—Malone Palladium of the 18th.

The Prohibitionist.

THE PROHIBITIONIST is published monthly, by the Executive Committee of the N. Y. State Temperance Society; H. Mandeville D. D., chairman of the committee, Editor; to whom communications for the paper should be addressed.

It is printed in the Folio Form, on a Double Medium sheet, making eight large four-columed pages to a number.

It advocates the Cause of Temperance generally, and especially the Legislative Prohibition of the Traffic in Intoxicating Beverages.

It is not the Organ of a Society, merely, but of a Great Reformatory Movement, and will be National in its spirit, scope, and purpose; and we hope to make it National also in its circulation and influence.

It is designed to supercede, in some sort, the present system of Tract Distribution, (being both cheaper and better,) and through the voluntary contributions of the friends of Temperance, to be placed in every family that will consent to receive it: with this view it will be furnished at the following low prices:

Any information relative to the property may be obtained at the office of the WORLD'S HALL, New York, or of F. J. Visscher & Co., No. 80 Nassau-St., New York.

The following description of the Magnificent Model of the World is taken from one of the leading papers of New York city, and will well repay perusal:—

PROF. HART'S WHOLE WORLD.

THE Entire World at one view, in magnificent bas relief by Professor J. Woodman Hart.—This extraordinary, ingenious and comprehensive work of art—the first and only one of the kind ever conceived—stands forth as a monument of the unwearying patience and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility, is now open to the public, at the WORLD'S HALL, 377 and 379 Broadway, fitted up at an immense cost expressly for this master-piece of Art.—This is not a mere panoramic display upon canvass, but an actual structure, on Mercator's projection, of over one thousand square feet, composed of real land and water. Immense labor and enormous expense have been lavished upon the design, which is now completed. So real is the work, that all the oceans, seas, rivers, lakes, gulfs and bays, are filled with running water, upon the surface of which floats ships and steamers, visibly moving en voyage to and from every clime. Mountains and valleys, with all the varied geographical phenomena they present, are spread out in the exact shape and form made by nature. Volcanoes visibly belch forth sulphuric flames. The dreadful maelstrom or whirlpool, off the coast of Norway, is also seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The wreck of the ill fated steamer San Francisco is represented in the right locality, and seen sinking in the boundless deep—the Three Bells, Antartic and the Kilby, whose noble commanders so bravely rescued so many of America's sons and daughters, are also in view.—The north west passage, recently discovered by Captain McClure, is accurately shown and expatiated upon. The localities of the war now raging in Europe and Asia are correctly delineated. The golden fields of California and Australia are prominent in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the beholder can sway with enthusiastic raptures over the entire surface of the mighty globe, upon which, as upon a stage, he appears as an actor; and while he is surprised at the vast novelty of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of its mechanical operations, and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the amusing lesson of an hour. The best talent of the country has been employed in the preparation of this mammoth undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass, without regard to expense, have been bestowed to render it worthy of this enlightened age, the whole having been calculated from the best European charts, together with all the recent surveys by authority of the United States government. The audience is taken on a pleasant tour from pole to pole, and under the guidance of the experienced lecturer, ensured a safe passage and speedy return to their happy homes. We will only add, that such are but few of the many advantages which can be gained only by a visit to this modern wonder. In connection with the above, a perfect model of the city of San Francisco, as it now exists, with all its buildings, streets, wharves, shipping, &c made from actual measurement taken upon the spot for that purpose, built of solid material. Also, numerous panoramic views of the California regions of gold, the whole rendering it one of the most popular, interesting and instructive places of amusement in New York, or, we may safely say, in the world.

We learn that Professor Hart will shortly publish a book relative to the design of the World, including a history of his extensive travels in the Old and New World, anecdotes, &c. which must be very interesting, and should be read by the million. We are also informed that for the purpose of popularizing American Art, and for the purpose of giving his valuable book an extensive circulation, Prof. Hart proposes to give to all persons purchasing his gift tickets of admission, in any part of the world, a vast amount of valuable and elegant property.

The mere announcement of this fact by Prof. Hart is sufficient guarantee for its merit and success, he being known throughout the Union as an extensive traveler, public speaker, merchant, and a thorough active responsible business man; and we doubt not that the Gift Hall will be daily crowded to behold his modern Wonder.

FRAUD!

ALL who want Axes of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations, stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each one has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

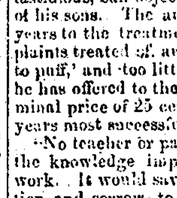
JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D.

From A. Woodward, M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia.—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health; in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M. D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little brazil to puff, and too little presumption to impose, he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."



One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

THE MARRIAGE STATE:

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery, and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT HE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flesh of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE,

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so predicative of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

AFFLICTED READ.

PHILADELPHIA MEDICAL HOUSE—Established 29 years ago by Dr. KINKELIN, corner of Third and Union sts. between Spruce and Pine, Philadelphia, Pa.

INVALIDS

Are apprised that Dr. Kinkelin continues his practice to a particular branch of medicine, which changes his undivided attention. He can use the curative agent against the abuse of mercury; these and are aquatic [illegible] out of the [illegible] of various diseases supervening.

TWENTY YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

In the treatment of a class of diseases hitherto neglected and imperfectly understood, has enabled Dr. KINKELIN, (Author of a work on Secret Dissipation) to prove that the truths of the causes of nervous debility, local and constitutional weakness, mental and physical sufferings are [illegible] to certain habits, forming the most secret yet deadly and fatal springs of domestic misery and premature mortality.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

There is an evil habit sometimes indulged in by boys, in solitude, often growing up with them to manhood, and which, if not reformed in due time, notoriously bars serious obstacles to matrimonial happiness, but gives rise to a series of protracted insidious and devastating affections—Few of those who give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequences until they find the nervous system shattered, [illegible] strange and unaccountable feelings, and vague fears in the mind.

The unfortunate individual becomes feeble, is unable to labor with accustomed vigor, or to apply his mind to study; his spirits fail and weak, he is dull, irresolute, and engages in his sport with less energy than usual.

If he emancipate himself before the practice has done its worst, and enter matrimony his marriage is unfruitful and his sense tells him that this is caused by his early follies. These are considerations which should awaken the attention of those similarly situated.

MARRIAGE

Requires the fulfilment of several conditions, in order that it may be really the source of mutual happiness. Could the secret which covers the origin of domestic wretchedness be raised, and its true source in every instance disclosed—in how many cases it be better adapted to prevent unhappiness and their attendant disappointments. Apply then while it is yet time, in order to have your constitution and relaxed organization restored, revivified and strengthened.

REMEMBER.

He who places himself under Dr. Kinkelin's treatment may religiously confide to his honor as a gentleman, and rely upon the assurance, that the secrets of Dr. K's patient will never be disclosed.

Young man—let no false modesty deter you from making your case known to one who, from education and respectability, can certainly befriend you.

Too many think they will conceal the secret in their own hearts, and cure themselves. Alas! how often is this a fatal delusion, and how many a promising young man, who might have been an ornament to society, has failed from the earth.

Strictures of the urethra are rapidly removed by the application of a new, chemical agent, used only by Dr. K. We know and constitutional debility promptly cured, and full vigor restored.

COUNTRY INVALIDS.

VOLUME XV. NO. 5. KEESEVILLE, N. Y., MAY 27, 1854. WHOLE NUMBER 825

The Republican.

KEESEVILLE:

Saturday Morning, May 27.

The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands,
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands,
The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

News of the week.

CONGRESS.

——The Nebraska swindle has passed the lower house, by a vote of 113 to 100. Its passage through the Senate and the signature of the President are supposed to be matters of form. Stephens, of Ga. a renegade whig was the marshal of the administration forces on the occasion.

Maurice, Peckham, Wheeler and others of this state, Adamantine, were true to the last. So was "Charley" Hughes of the Washington and Saratoga, dist., a Soft, all honor to their names.

The next day Douglass moved in the Senate a resolution recognizing the Independence of the Dominican Republic. Hayti and Liberia have been long praying for such a recognition in vain. The reason is the latter are free, while the former is a slave state.

The next step should be the reopening of the Slave trade. Slave policy is triumphant in the face of a Northern President, and a northern majority in Congress, and the people may as well be prepared for any event that may happen. In this christian and enlightened age, Slavery in the West, and Absolutism in the east are triumphant. We have no taste for comment. We feel more like mourning.

EUROPE.

——The news from the east is highly interesting The report of the bombardment of Odessa is confirmed. The defences were all destroyed and several Russian vessels sunk. No damage of consequence was done to the Allies. A battle on the Danube is reported in which the Turks gained a signal victory. No particulars yet. It seems that Turkey is the "sick man" he was represented by the Czar. The Allies have, or are about to assume the military and financial control of Turkish affairs during the war. This will also extend to the police regulations and of consequence into all departments of the Turkish government. In short, Turkey is to be devoured by her friends. Such are the latest prognostications of quid-nuncs. The Emperor of France is to take command in person of a military camp on the frontiers of Prussia.

KEESEVILLE ACADEMY.

——The Summer Term of this Institution opened on the 18th inst., with unusually flattering prospects. About 100 students have already entered, of whom over 40 are young ladies. The new female teacher who is peculiarly fitted for the position, and the addition of a separate department for the young ladies, offers new attractions to this popular Academy. New regulations have also been adopted throughout for the government of the School, giving it renewed vigor in all its branches. Keeseville Academy may be set down as a valuable and permanent fixture, and it is destined to attain a reputation and a position it has not hitherto.

PERSONAL.

——A. A. Lee, Att'y and Counselor at Law, recently of Elizabethtown, has removed to Troy, where he has formed a co-partnership with Judge Ball of that city. Mr. Lee is a worthy young man, and we congratulate him on his new location. It is pleasant to see young men in the way of doing well. We trust our young friend will realize his most sanguine expectations. We may safely say that he will never have cause to regret the change.

☞R. H. Lee, Esq., continues at the office of A. A. Lee in Elizabethtown.

——Joseph W. Reynolds says he is bound to leave Keeseville. We are sorry. He can't be spared. Keeseville has not been the same place since he left the saloon.

☞Cardwell has returned from a second trip to market with a new lot of goods, and employs a police to keep the crowd back.

ACROSTIC.

Jove spake in thunder, and the Gods awoke,
And all Olympus trembled as he spoke:
Cease now you revels, and in Synod meet,
Or else my shafts shall strike ye to my feet—
Brethren, Old Vulcan, who so long has forg'd
Destructive bolts for me, his rightful Lord,
Know all ye Gods and Godesses that he
Is by old age no longer fit for me.
Now for a choice of a successor I
Gather this conclave on our Mountain high—
So new since mortals have attain'd such skill,
Let me thus name the man his place to fill:
Away in Keeseville dwells the Iron King,
Neat fam'd Ausable, who is just the thing;
Draw these initials true, his name 'twill bring.

A Presidential Ticket.—We suggest Wm. Pitt Fessenden of Me. for President, Hon. Mr. Hunt of La. for Vice Presidents.

(Local Correspondence.)

Westport, May 23rd, 1854.

COL. TARBELL,

At a meeting of Comp. B., 31 Regt. 14th Brigade, 4th Division of the N. Y. S. M., the following officers were elected:—

B. F. Holcomb of Westport, Captain, in place of James B. Ross, resigned, Orlando Whitney of Essex, 1st Lieut., in place of B. F. Holcomb, promoted, Richard Lando, of Willsborough, in place of Wm. H. Younger, deceased.

Truly, Yours

[A-hem! Capt. Holcomb! Well, we like that. Frank early displayed more than ordinary military taste. When not more than fourteen years old he organized, equipped, drilled and paraded a company of Light Dragoons at one of our old "musters" in Ticonderoga, and it was the great feature of the occasion. Its remembrance really makes us sigh for a repetition of those "good old times." We wonder if a few sketches of "men and things" of those days would not be acceptable to our readers.—Well, we must think of it.]—Ed Rep.

TEMPERANCE IN WESTPORT.—We comply with the request in the following letter tho' the names attached to the petition crowd upon our space. We doubt not it will prove interesting, and we give it a place with pleasure.—[Ed. Rep.

Westport, May 20, 1854.

DEAR COL.,

Enclosed please find a petition with a large number of names of the Ladies of our village attached.

The petition has been presented in due form, and I am strongly in hopes it may have a beneficial effect upon those engaged in the unholy traffic. Our town is No-License and has been for several years, but notwithstanding this, there are those in our community who bid defiance to all law and order, and deal out destruction to men, women and children. We have some dealers in the article who make their boasts of how much liquor they have sold for the past year, and then again, we have some who are ashamed of the traffic—pretend to temperance people they do not deal in the article, and are so nice in their arrangements that they request their customers to bring tin pails, tea pots, and lamp fillers, thereby to prevent their being placed upon the same level with common rum sellers.

We should like to have you insert the petition in your paper if you have no objections.

Respectfully, yours,

Returned to her first love.—Connecticut for several years past has been ruled by locofoism but has now wheeled into the old Whig line again. Her legislature has just elected a whig and a free soil whig to the U. S. Senate.

NEXT GOV.—This subject has been considerably discussed by a few of the whig papers. It seems that Gov. Seward was earnestly thought of by his friends. Horace Greely it is supposed in certain contingencies may be the temperance candidate. Among other names mentioned are those of Gen. Ross of Essex, Judge Harris of Albany, ex. Lt. Gov. Patterson, Hon. M. S. Clark, Moses H. Grinnell, E. D Morgan, Gov. Hunt, &c., &c.

Chicken Fever.

"Hens we view," and wonder why
The "Shanghai" mania takes so well,
Fowl spirits seem to multiply
And "Dorkings" quickly sell,
Like an epidemic rages
This Monomania far and near.
And many own a "Cochin-China"

—Jas. Wilson, machinist in the employ of Messrs. E & J. D. Kingsland and Co. exhibited an egg to us the other day, measure and weight, as follows; measure longest way 7 3 8 inches—shortest 6 1.4—weight, a fraction less than 1-4 of a pound. This egg was laid by a cross breed between common and Shanghai.

——Mr. William Stranaham gave us the measure of a large one also, but we have lost, or mislaid it.

Re-opening of the Crystal Palace.

The whole arrangement and management of the Palace is undergoing an entire change. Barnum has been elected President of the association, and thro' his efforts the exhibition has been re-opened and continued, and what is more, it is to succeed. It re-opened on the 4th of May in the appropriate ceremonies. The unsettled State of Europe has enabled the Agent of the company to secure an unusual interest in the exhibition on that side of the Atlantic, and the Arts and Manufactures of Europe will be represented without limit. Steps have been taken to increase the interest of the exhibition in every department, and there has been added a department for Flowers, and we believe of Horticulture generally. The Crystal Palace is now bound to go, and no mistake.

PETITION

TO THE DEALERS IN ARDENT SPIRITS IN THE VILLAGE OF WESTPORT.

The undersigned, ladies of the town of Westport, and county of Essex, beg respectfully to represent that in their opinion the sale of Intoxicating Drinks is not only a great sin against God, but is the cause directly or indirectly of by far the greater amount, perhaps nearly all the pauperism and crimes which throughout our land are desolating firesides, and destroying the sacred ties of family relations. Hundreds and thousands of young men in our country, naturally young men of talent and promise, have not sufficient moral courage required to say no, and live out no to all the tempting excitement of the sparkling beverage; feeling deeply sensible of this, and knowing that many an otherwise happy home is cruelly robbed even during life, of an affectionate husband, a dutiful son and indulgent father, or a fond brother, and more cruelly by his death, all by the sale and use of alcoholic beverages. We do, therefore, pray you in view of all these evils, we solemnly implore you to desist from all traffic in ardent spirits in our village, and thereby restore to hundreds of families that happiness of which through you they are now deprived, and at once enlist yourselves in the sacred cause of Temperance.

Convict Shot at Clinton Prison.—Two prisoners were employed at the coal pits outside the yard—the usual precautions were observed to prevent an escape—a guard present with loaded musket, &c. A determined effort was made to escape, however, by both prisoners, when one of them—a young man by the name of Swan—was shot dead by the guard.

He was wounded by two buck shot—one entering the back of the head, the other near the shoulder—causing almost instant death. The other convict ran nearly a mile before he was taken, and had a narrow escape from a shot fired by another guard.

The attempt was premeditated. Upon the convicts were found extra shirts to protect them from the weather, and bread enough concealed in their clothing to last them some days.—C. C. Whig.

☞At a term of the Supreme Court held at Ballston Spa. on the 1st inst., present Justices Hand, Cady, Allen, and James, the following young gentlemen were examined and admitted as Attorneys, &c., viz:

Norman Boardman, Rodwick Goodrich, Samuel Hand, Henry Sacia, and Hiram Walworth, Jr.

A STAUNCH WHIG.—Col. Wm. Syer, of New Orleans, whose Democratic friends spoke of running him as a candidate for Mayor of that city, in a card upon the subject says: "I am a Whig, always have been a Whig, and always intend to [illegible] Whig, and will not accept of any nomination unless made by the Whig party."

BARNBURNER EXTRAVAGANCE.—The extraordinary transactions of the late officials are becoming more and more apparent. We heard an officer of one of the Prisons and a democrat state the other day that a judgement recently recovered against the Agent of the Sing Sing Prison for $30,000, in which the cost is $10,000, could have been settled of his own knowledge before suit for $10,000. There is no doubt of connivance or neglect, on the part of the agent at such a result, and doubtless will share in the recovery.

——To avoid these outrages, the Whigs have provided that the Agents shall pay down for all they buy. This will enable them to purchase cheaper, and they will no longer be able to run the state in debt beyond the means to pay, and no more judgements like the above can be obtained.

——Arrangements have been made with the Essex County Bank to receive the deposites and pay the drafts of the Clinton Prison. The selection is a good one as there is no better, nor abler managed Bank in the State.

POLITICAL.—The N. Y. Times, of Saturday, has the following:

Some months since, when the question was first pressed upon Congress and the country, we expressed the opinion that the results of the movement on public sentiment in the State of New York, would be to secure the nomination of William H. Seward for Governor, and his triumphant election. The development of popular opinion has been far more rapid, and the public indignation against the authors agents of this conspiracy has been far wider and more intense, than we had deemed possible; and everything, in our judgment, now indicates that in the event of the passage of this bill, Gov. Seward will be elected President of the United States in 1856, by the largest vote from the free States ever cast for any candidate. If the slaveholding States are resigned to this prospect, it does not become us to complain.

☞While Russia comes to us for steamships and engineers, and Turkey and France for pistols, even, England avails herself of the inventive skill of our mechanics. The Springfield Republican says:

Her authorities have sent three officers of ordnance and engineer corps, to visit our establishments and gather all necessary information and facilities for introducing their advantages at home.

These gentlemen—Col. Burns, Capt. Warlow, and Mr. Anderson—are now making a minute inspection of the Armory here, and have ordered copies of some of them made at the Ames manufacturing establishment in Chicopee, to be sent to England.

☞Levi J. North's Colossal Circus from the National Amphitheatre, Philadelphia, comprising three companies of English, French and American performers, will give our citizens a series of entertainments of the most dazzling brilliancy, on Tuesday, June 6th. Among the most striking efforts Mr. North's Principal and Scenic Acts, the nature of which it were impossible to describe, will rank pre-eminent. Let it suffice, when we say, that Mr. North is pronounced by the press and people of the principal cities of this country and Europe, the most classic and finished rider of the day. Prominent among the troupe are Mr. Burnell Russells, Mons. Edgar, Prof. McFarland, Signor Capaloni, with his performing bears, Little Victoria North, Master Willie, and a host of other first class artistes, selected with the greatest care from the leading amphitheatres of the Old World and the New. The entertainments will be of the highest order, introducing feats of the great Roman Amphitheatre, scenes from the Grecian Circus of the Olympiad, Arawonders and modern sports and pastimes. In all of these, the immense resources of this mammoth establishment will be brought into play, and the entire company, the whole stud of horses, including the dancing horse Tammany, the trick horse Spot Beauty, the perforning ponies, Tom and Jerry, and Harry Stebbins. In every scene, that droll and most eccentric clown, Ben Jennings, will appear, and keep the audience in a roar with his rare wit and side splitting stories. If "all the world and the rest of mankind" are not present on this occasion—well, there's no use of talking. North will be welcome with an overwhelming crowd.

CITY OF GLASGOW.—Hope, faintly and timidly, for the safety of this missing Steamer, is revived by the report of one seen going into the Azores. We shall look with painful solicitude for further intelligence.

☞Hon. Edward Everett has resigned his seat in the U. S. Senate as Senator from Mass. on account of ill health. This news will be received with profound regret by the Country.

CHANGES.—Jacob Mansfield has sold his farm and is to sell his personal property at auction on the first of June, preparatory to removing to Windsor Vt to settle the estate of his brother, deceased, with whom he was a partner.

Discoveries of Iron Ore.—It is stated that late examinations of the property of the Baltimore Coal Company, at Bloomington, Allegany county, on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, have brought to light immense deposits of the most valuable brown [illegible], apparently from ten to [illegible] thick.

☞"The Country Gentleman" is the name of an Agricultural paper, published weekly, at Albany, by Luther Tucker, No. 305 Broadway.—We have been an attentive reader of the Country Gentleman for several months, and have come to the conclusion that it is the very best publication of the kind issued from any press in the State. Its editor is well informed on agricultural subjects, and seems to know what information is most needed, by the American farmer, to make him a proficient in an occupation so beneficial and honorable. The editor is also fortunate in having an intelligent class of correspondents who afford much light, by the various experiments they make, on the various modes of treating the different soils, and the manner of raising animals and taking care of them. No farmer should be without a good agricultural paper, and the probability is he can make no better selection than that of the Country Gentleman. It is furnished to subscribers, by mail, at $2,00 a year, if paid in advance, or $2,50, when paid at the end of the year.

☞The land advertisement on the inside goes out next week, and we have concluded to defer the publication of the speech of Mr. Simmons.

PROPOSALS FOR THE PUBLIC PRINTING.—Pursuant to the provisions of an act entitled "An Act to Provide for the Public Printing," passed March 6 1846; and an act entitled "An Act concerning the laws journals, and documents of the Legislature," passed May, 12, 1847, the undersigned hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 20th day of June next, at no other time, for executing the printing for the Senate and the Assembly and for the Comptroller, Secretary of State, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Attorney-General, State Engineer and Surveyor, Commissioners of the Land Office, and Canal Fund, the Bank Department, and all other printing for any and every of the state Offices for the term of two years.

Separate bids will be received for the Senate, Assembly, or public offices, or for the printing of either of the public offices: the whole to be performed in the same style and execution as the typographical part of that, Executed on the 5th of March, 1849.

For the Senate and Assembly Journals the proposals should state the price for composition, press work, paper, pressing and folding of each signature of eight pages, 550 copies, and also for any additional number that may be required to be done at the same proportional rate.

For the Senate and Assembly bills the proposals should state the price for composition, press work, paper pressing, folding and stitching each signature of four pages, 250 copies, ordered by either House, and the rate for one hundred additional copies of each signature that may be required—the paper to be cap writing paper of a quality equal to that used for the Senate in 1846, weighing not less than 28 lbs to each ream of 17½ by 22 inches; and the work in all respects to be executed in the same manner—the lines in each section of the bills to be numbered, and with sufficient space between them for interlining words.

For the Senate and Assembly, both, the proposals should state the price for composition, press work, paper, pressing, folding, gathering and stitching each signature of eight pages 3000 copies; and the rates for each additional 1000 copies, for any additional number that may be required. Each page of documents or journals to be set in small Pica type when practicable, and contain 1,536 ems; but should it be necessary to use Long Primer, or in what is termed, rule, or rule and figure work, the size of the page must not be reduced, nor will increased compensation be allowed therefor. When it is necessary to put the matter in tables, the work will be estimated in the same manner as though it was printed in page form, allowing 16 pages for a double signature, for each sheet of 19 by 24 inches, and the allowance thus made is to include every charge. The papers to be used for the Legislative Documents and Journals must weigh at least 28 lbs to the ream of 19 by 24 inches, and the quality must be equal to the best used in printing the same Documents in 1846.

Blank forms for the legislative printing will be furnished by the respective Secretary of State or Comptroller, and bidders will be required to make their bids conform to the printed schedule, or the bid will not be recognized. For the purpose of making a comparison of bids, the Senate documents of 1846 will be used as a standard.

Samples of the Blanks and other printing required for the public offices and the canals may be seen in the Canal Department, and the other departments; and the proposals may state the price by the hundred for blanks of the specified kind.

For all printing in book or pamphlet form for any of the public offices, or for circulars on cap or post paper, the proposals also should state the price for 1,000 ems for composition, rendering the estimate to the printer's line and separately the price for paper and press work, folding and stitching for 100 copies, and the rate per hundred for each additional hundred required.

BINDING JOURNALS, BILLS, DOCUMENTS, AND SESSION LAWS.

Bids for proposals will also be received until the fifteenth day and hour fixed on the following twelve copies of the Senate and Assembly bills, and forty-one copies of the journals and seven sets of both Senate and Assembly documents, and for binding in boards with leather back and corners, the residue of the journals and documents of the two houses; also for the binding of fifteen hundred copies of the Session Laws; one set of the Laws of 1846, chapter 251, page 277 of Vol. 1 of the Laws 1847.

All the documents will be kept in the office of the Comptroller, and persons wishing to procure, and receive the same promptly, can apply at the office of the binding intended to be performed in the same manner, and correctly; and every person selected shall be required to enter into such undertaking as may be deemed just and reasonable.

No proposals will be received for the performance of all or a portion of the printing or binding above specified, unless the same proposal or bid will be received from any person, firm or party in interest for the performance of the same, and there must be annexed a guaranty, subscribed by a responsible person or persons, that the person or persons making such bid will, if the bid be accepted, enter into the contract according to the terms thereof, and give the security required by law in such case. Letting may be from the whole or any part of the work, and notice of the acceptance of bids or their rejection will be given forthwith; and as soon as the contract shall be executed by the successful bidder, and approved by the Secretary of State, Comptroller, Attorney General, Treasurer, Engineer and Surveyor, and the Attorney and Counsellor of the Canal Department, and the other departments, and the sureties in the bond required to be executed by the successful bidder, shall be approved by the Secretary of State, the Comptroller will issue his warrant to the person whose bid may be accepted, authorizing him to proceed with the printing, and from the time of the receipt of the warrant, the work must be commenced, and from time to time as fast as the printing is required, the manuscript will be furnished by the proper officers, and the printing must be executed with the greatest despatch, and the whole of the work must be completed and delivered to the proper officers, on or before the 1st day of March, 1855, unless the time for the completion of the work be extended by the Secretary of State, Comptroller, Attorney General, Treasurer, Engineer and Surveyor, and the Attorney and Counsellor of the Canal Department, and the other departments, or a majority of them, and the sureties in the bond consent to such extension. Each bid must be sealed up with the name only, and the proposals will be opened by the Secretary of State, Comptroller, Attorney General, Treasurer, Engineer and Surveyor, and the Attorney and Counsellor of the Canal Department, and the other departments, at the office of the Comptroller, on the first Tuesday after the 20th day of June next, at 12 o'clock, M., when the bidders may be present, and the contract will be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder, unless the bids be deemed unreasonable, when they will be rejected. The bidder to whom the contract is awarded will be required to enter into bonds with two sureties, in the penalty of $5,000, for the faithful performance of the contract, and the bonds must be executed and delivered to the Comptroller within ten days after the contract is awarded, or the bid will be rejected, and the contract awarded to the next lowest bidder, unless the time be extended by the Secretary of State, Comptroller, Attorney General, Treasurer, Engineer and Surveyor, and the Attorney and Counsellor of the Canal Department, and the other departments, or a majority of them, and the sureties consent to such extension.

Each proposal will be sealed up with the name only, and the envelope must be addressed to the Secretary of State, Albany, and indorsed "Proposals for Printing," and the envelope must also be endorsed with the name of the person making the bid, and the date when delivered to the Secretary of State, and the envelope and directed to the undersigned, at the office of the Secretary of State, Albany, May 10, 1854.

G. W. LAWTON NORTH, Secretary of State.

The following description of the Magnificent Model of the World is taken from one of the leading papers of New York city, and will well repay perusal:—

PROF. HART'S WHOLE WORLD.

THE Entire World at one view, in magnificent has relief, by Professor J. Woodman Hart.—This extraordinary, ingenious and comprehensive work of art—the first and only one of the kind ever conceived—stands forth as a monument of the unwearying patience and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility, is now open to the public, at the WORLD'S HALL, 377 and 379 Broadway, fitted up at an immense cost expressly for this master-piece of Art.—This is not a mere panoramic display upon canvass, but an actual structure, on Mercator's projection, of over one thousand square feet, composed of real land and water. Immense labor and enormous expense have been lavished upon the design, which is now completed. So real is the work, that all the oceans, seas, rivers, lakes, gulfs and bays, are filled with running water, upon the surface of which floats ships and steamers, visibly moving carouge to and from every clime. Mountains and valleys, with all the varied geographical phenomena they present, are spread out in the exact shape and form made by nature. Volcanoes visibly belch forth sulphuric flames. The dreadful maelstrom or whirlpool, off the coast of Norway, is also seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The wreck of the ill fated steamer San Francisco is represented in the right locality, and seen sinking in the boundless deep—the Three Bells, Antartic and the Kilby, whose noble commanders so bravely rescued so many of America's sons and daughters, are also in view—The north west passage, recently discovered by Captain McClure, is accurately shown and expatiated upon. The localities of the war now raging in Europe and Asia are correctly delineated. The golden fields of California and Australia are prominent in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the beholder can sway with enthusiastic raptures over the entire surface of the mighty globe, upon which, as upon a stage, he appears as an actor; and while he is surprised at the vast novelty of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of its mechanical operations, and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the amusing lesson of an hour. The best talent of the country has been employed in the preparation of this mammoth undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass, without regard to expense, have been bestowed to render it worthy of this enlightened age, the whole having been calculated from the best European charts, together with all the recent surveys by authority of the United States government. The audience is taken on a pleasant tour from pole to pole, and under the guidance of the experienced lecturer, secured a safe passage and speedy return to their happy home. We will only add, that such are but few of the many advantages which can be gained only by a visit to this modern wonder. In connection with the above, a perfect model of the city of San Francisco, as it now exists, with all its buildings, streets, wharves, shipping, &c made from actual measurement taken upon the spot for that purpose, built of solid material. Also, numerous panoramic views of the California regions of gold, the whole rendering it one of the most popular, interesting and instructive places of amusement in New York, or, we may safely say, in the world.

We learn that Professor Hart will shortly publish a book relative to the design of the World, including a history of his extensive travels in the Old and New World, anecdotes, &c. which must be very interesting, and should be read by the million. We are also informed that for the purpose of popularizing American Art, and for the purpose of giving his valuable book an extensive circulation, Prof. Hart proposes to give to all persons purchasing his gift tickets of admission, in any part of the world, a vast amount of valuable and elegant property.

The above announcement of this fact by Prof. Hart is a sufficient guarantee for its merit and success, he being known throughout the Union as an extensive traveler, public speaker, merchant and a thorough, active responsible business man; and we doubt not that the immense halls will be duly crowded to behold the modern Wonder.

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued of Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—no. Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

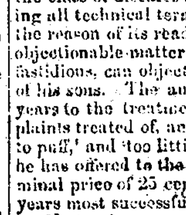
JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiseretion to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff, and too little presumption to impose, he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People' " Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influences of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so, to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ on the present and coming generations. Intemperance, (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."



One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

THE MARRIAGE STATE.

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

in that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

Dr. Jayne's Invigorating Cordial.

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION. This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience by the most skilful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most efficacious in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence with it a perfect confidence to the public, as an efficient remedy. It was so known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as necessarily. In case of impotency or other failures, loss of sexual fertility, menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluor Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in Lassitude or Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart Indigestion, Inebriness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

DEBILITY

TO FEMALES

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check relaxation and restore to health and happiness. Less suffering, & more unbroken peace among wives would exist, where they accordingly to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those destructive habits which females are liable to are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to health and vigor.

YOUNG MEN

That solitary practice so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVIOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, little aware the cause or source, of disease. To those then, who by excesses have brought upon themselves Premature Impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and Shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the sexual passions, occasioning the necessity of resuscitating the deficiencies of by enabling both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will assist to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE.

it is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL"

is put up in 8 oz. Pannel Bottles, and is easily recognized by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle, (to counterfeit which is forgery) as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

Sold for $2 per Bottle; Six for $9; $16 per dozen Prepared only by S. E. COHEN, No. 8 Frank'n Row Vine Street, below Eighth, Philadelphia, Pa. C. V. Clickner & Co., N. AFFLICTED READ.

PHILADELPHIA MEDICAL HOUSE—Established 20 years ago by Dr. KINKELIN, corner of Third and Union sts. between Spruce and Pine, Philadelphia, Pa.

INVALIDS

Are apprised that Dr. Kinkelin continues his practice to a particular branch of medicine, which engages his undivided attention. He cautions the unfortunate against the abuse of mercury; thousands are annually mercurialized out of life. Recent affections are promptly extinguished.

TWENTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE

In the treatment of a class of diseases hitherto neglected and imperfectly understood, has enabled Dr. KINKELIN, [Author of a work on Self Preservation] to prove that nine tenths of the causes of nervous debility, local and constitutional weaknesses, mental and physical suffering, are traceable to certain habits, forming the most severe yet deadly and fatal springs of domestic misery and premature mortality.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

There is an evil habit too commonly indulged in by boys, in solitude, often growing up with them to manhood, and which, if not reformed in due time, not only bears serious obstacles to matrimonial happiness, but gives rise to a series of protracted insidious, and devastating affections.—Few of those who give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequences, until they find the nervous system shattered, fearful strange and unaccountable feelings, and vague fears in the mind.

The unfortunate thus affected becomes feeble, is unable to labor with accustomed vigor, or to apply his mind to study; his step is tardy, and look dull, irresolute, and engages in his sport with less energy than usual.

If he emancipate him self before the practice has done its worst, and enter matrimony, his marriage is unfruitful and his sense tells him that this is caused by his early follies. These are considerations which should awaken the attention of those similarly situated.

MARRIAGE

Requires the fulfilment of several conditions, in order that it may be really the cause of mutual happiness. Could the veil which covers the origin of domestic wretchedness be raised, and its true source in every instance disclosed—in how many could it be traced to physical disqualifications and their attendant disagreements. Apply then while it is yet time, in order to have your unstrung and relaxed organization embraced, revivified and strengthened.

REMEMBER.

He who places himself under Dr. Kinkelin's treatment may reasonably confide in his honor as a gentleman, and rely upon the assurance, that the secrets of Dr. K's patient will never be disclosed.

Young man—let no false modesty deter you from making your case known to one who from education and respectability, can certainly befriend you.

Too many think they will conceal the secret in their own hearts, and cure themselves. A sad how often is this a fatal delusion, and how many a promising young man, who might have been an ornament to society, has sunk from the earth.

Strictures of the urethra are rapidly removed by the application of a new and powerful agent, used on by Dr. K. We have cured constitutional debility promptly cured, and full vigor restored.

COUNTRY INVALIDS.

Can have (by stating their case explicitly, together with all the symptoms, per letter inclosing a remittance) Dr. K's. medicine, properly packed according.

Fo warded to any part of the United States, and packed secure from DAMAGE or CURIOSITY.

Fugitive Slave case in Boston—Tremendous Excitement.

A case has been pending in Boston for a week, the decision of which was set down for yesterday. The claimant was from Va. and alleged that the Slave escaped on the 27th of March last. The proof showed that the Slave was at work in and about Boston as early as the first of March. The case caused intense excitement. The people collected in great numbers. An attempt at rescue was made and resisted.—An officer was shot, and others narrowly escaped. The U. S. Troops and the Militia were ordered out and the Court House where the case was tried presented the appearance of a besieged fortress. Handbills were sent into the country in all directions requesting the presence of the people in the city to protect the poor fugitive. Hundreds and thousands answered the call. A public meeting was held at Faneuil Hall, where inflamatory speeches and resolutions were made and adopted. No serious collisions had occurred between the people and the Soldiers at the last accounts, and apparently the excitement was abating. Nine rioters have been arrested. Should the decision be adverse to the slave, there will very likely be another attempt at rescue. We hope to get the final result before we go to press.

Later.—Slave returned to Va.

CONGRESS.—A recess from July 3rd to Oct. 1. has been voted by the U. S. Senate and it will probably be concurred in by the House.

PORT HENRY.

——A new Furnace is going up there immediately, and the wharf is being greatly enlarged. Mr. Gary and others have gone down from this place to work. A new Congregational Meeting house is to be built there this season. It is to be of brick. Witherbees have 40 boats in their employ freighting ore and coal.

MORIAH.

——The people of that town brag of the business done there and the rare'undances of money. When there the other day, we took occasion to point them to their plank side walks which are in a dilapidated condition, and a man in walking over them is in danger of being tripped up. A friend remarked that they "were keeping them to run Governor Seymour over in case he should visit that town." He was a Maine Law man, sure. We are under obligations to the Dist. Att'y for "material aid," and we are happy to know that he is doing a rapidly increasing business.

—We shall visit Port Henry and Moriah again next week, more leisurely than this week, when we shall note their business with more care. Pease said if we would come and visit him he would talk us blind. We shall give him a chance.

A TRUSTWORTHY HORSE.

——Wishing to be taken to the boat from Ticonderoga lower falls on Wednesday we made our wants known to the Landlord, Mr. Joel W. Holcomb. Directly we were informed by him, "your horse is ready, sir, —there is no other to go—step right in—when you get to the Lake, head the old horse towards home, throw the lines over the dash board and let him come." We did step into a buggy drawn by a noble looking grey horse, fat and sleek as an otter, and drove to the Lake ourself. The horse had all the life that was necessary without a whip, and without urging, and would occasionally 'shy' so as to require full strength on the reins, yet when we arrived at the Lake we followed directions and started the horse for home alone, where we presume he arrived in due time and we hope safely, for himself and the wagon.—Commend us to Joel and his grey horse.

Sheep Shearing.

TICONDEROGA.

——Entering Ticonderoga the other day we were surprised to behold a collection of a large crowd. On enquiry we were informed that it was a 'Town Sheep Shearing.' The farmers had selected a few of the choice st of their flocks and had met at the centre of the town to have a shearing and compare samples, and experiences. We shall give the details next week. We give this note, that other towns may know what is going on, and follow suit if they wish.

——There never was a any party, faction, sect or tribal whatever, to which the most ignorant were not the most violent; for a bee is not a busier animal than a blockhead.

Affairs in Washington.

[Correspondence of the Courier & Enquirer.]

Washington, May 27, 1854.

It is understood that there was an important discussion in the Cabinet on Thursday last. Two propositions were discussed —one being the immediate occupation or blockade of Cuba, and the other the sending of two special envoys to Spain with new propositions; the design being to force Spain to sell Cuba or bring on a war. It is expected that the special Commissioners will be nominated and confirmed.

Gov. Marcy is conservative, but the President is completely under the control of Fillibusters. Gov. Marcy is for conciliatory negotiations, but the President is powerless in the hands of rowdies and fillibusters.

CUBAN FILLIBUSTER MOVEMENTS.—The N. Y. Express states that a meeting of the officers of "Expedition for the invasion of Cuba" was held at No. 324 Broadway on Saturday evening. The Express says;

Among them we recognized several who had served in the Mexican war, in the New York and other regiments of Volunteers, and, be the case as it may, there were certainly those among them very capable of being in earnest.

The proceedings of those parties are of course quite private, and having apparently merely used this public room as a place for meeting together, they repaired to some more retired quarters to hold their counsel of war.

Santa Anna Defeated.

SANTA ANNA has been driven from before Acapulco, and his army literally cut to pieces by Alvarez, and his troops. It is evident that there will soon be a change of government in Mexico, and the Usurper again driven into exile—or, what he better deserves, receive his quietus at the hands of the public executioner.

Occupation of Kansas.—An Association was incorporated by the Legislature of Massachusetts, under the name of the 'Emigrant Aid Society.' Its Capital is $5,000,000, in Shares of $100. It is prohibited from holding more than $29,000 in real estate in Massachusetts, or to assess more than $1 on each share in 1854, or more than $10 in any year thereafter. Its plan, as decided on at a preliminary meeting of the corporators and subscribers to the stock, is to contract forthwith with the Transportation Lines for the conveyance of 20,000 emigrants; giving the advantage of the reduced fare to the emigrants. To erect immediately a large Receiving Establishment in Kansas, where the emigrants may be accommodated until they have time to settle themselves. To send out and set in operations steam sawmills, grist mills, and such necessaries of civilization as require capital, with the apparatus for a weekly newspaper.

A YANKEE TRICK IN THE BALTIC.—A letter from an officer in the Baltic fleet to an English paper, dated April 1st, tells the following rather good story;

'One morning, a few days since, we saw a vessel eight or ten miles ahead, which we fully believed to be a Russian man of war, as she made all sails to get away, and showed no colors. As we rapidly came up with her, she took in sail until she was under reefed topsails—fighting trim—so we beat to quarters, and the pipe sounded loudly, 'Hands, bring the ship into action.' For some three minutes everything was bustle—casting the guns loose, clearing the decks, &c. Five minutes more and every gun was shotted and primed and the men standing with the match lines in their hands, waiting for the word to fire. Just as we got within good distance the black guards ran up the American colors, and coolly told us he would have hoisted them sooner, but he wanted to see how smartly we would clear for action. If our tars did not bless him on the wrong side of heaven, never believe me.'

Western Eloquence.

"Gentlemen of the jury—can you for an instant suppose, that my client here, a man that has always sustained a high depredation in society, a man who you all on you suspect and esteem for his many good qualities; yes gentleman, a man who never drinks more than does him good—say a quart a day—can you for an instant suppose that this ere man would be guilty of taking a box of percussion caps?—Picture to yourself gentlemen, an individual fast asleep in his low cabin, with his innocent wife and orphan children by his side—all nature hushed in deep repose, and nought to be heard but the muttering of the silent thunder and the noise of the roring winds; then imagine to yourselves an individual making his way up to the door like a hyena softly entering the dwelling of the peaceful and happy family, and in the most dastardly manner, abstracting a whole box of percussions?

Gentlemen, I can not, I will not, dwell upon such a scene. My feelings turn from such a picture of moral turpitude! I cannot for an instant harbor the idea that any man, much less this ere man, could be guilty of committing an act of such unparalled discretion.

And now, gentlemen, after this brief view of the case, let me entreat of you to make up your minds candidly and impartially, and give us such a verdict as we might reasonably expect from such an enlightened an intolerant of our fellow citizens—remembering that in the Battle of Bunker Hill, it is better that ten innocent men escape, rather than one guilty, one should suffer.

"Judge, give us a piece of tobacco!"

How to make a Modern Young Lady.

"Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined"

TAKE your lady twig, whether healthy or not is of little consequence; wrap it well in clothing, but leave the neck, chest and arms bare; they are to sensitive and must be toughened. Shut it up in hot rooms, let it sleep all the evening in a room with a good coal fire, and a bright gas light.—The air will be cool before morning and the light stimulates the brain.

Let her lie late in the morning because she is sleepy, and sit up late at night because she is not. Send her to sch ol early make her study as many hours in the day as possible, give little or no time to exercise and fresh air, she must learn to do without it.

Send her to a dancing school to cultivate airs and graces and let her go to late parties to cultivate her manners. Screw her dress as tightly as possible around the waist and let it fall off the shoulders. Never imagine that the shoulders were meant to hang clothes on or that the form was made to be:—it needs moulding and training—instead of sending her to the ant to the bee for lessons tell her to take the wasp for lessons, tell her to take the wasp for her model in form and proportions. Give her shoes as tight as she can possibly wear and raise them on heels, so as to prevent anything like freedom of motion, as that is indulgent.

If she complain of head-ache or lassitude dose her with medicine or give her a glass of wine; don't think for a moment that she suffers from violating the laws of health—Give her as many 'ologies' as she can crowd into the years of school music of course, and drawing and a smattering of at least half a dozen languages. She may never need them, but they will tell among her accomplishments.

Be cold her finish d. She knows nothing of the sober duties of life, nothing of the value of either time or money but she has always had plenty of both, why should she not still? If not, is it not your fault. She has no health, but she is the more interesting; her feebleness appeals to your pity.

Here is our young lady. What shall we do with her? A.

A GREAT AND NOVEL ENTERPRISE.—We publish in our advertising columns a magnificent Gift enterprise, (the third of a series,) started in New York by Mr. Perham, who has been long and favorably known throughout the North and East.—An examination of it will present features that commend it to the attention of every Man, Woman and Child in the community. We have only to say that the former enterprises of this indefatigable manager have been characterized by the greatest fairness, and given the utmost satisfaction to all concerned. Send in your orders for tickets as early as possible, as they will undoubtedly be, taken up in a short time.

Breaking Horses.

MR. EDITOR:—I notice in your valuable paper some remarks on "breaking horses," from the "Patent Office Report." In this operation, Madam Gloss's receipt for conquering a stubborn, will apply, viz:—"first catch the subject" in order to break a colt well, first get a colt of good blood, and then he will need very little breaking.

A colt of good blood is always a colt of good courage, and the best way of ascertaining a good colt, is to try the courage. See if not having well lighted places, or the delights in loud noises, such as the sound of a drum—the noise of a bridge—the sound of a cannon, &c.

A good colt will generally precede his dam in travelling. The lags behind—if he is easily frightened at sights, or sounds—get rid of him at once. He will not be worth raising.—If you have a colt from a good stock, treat him with kindness, never irritate him. Feed him with salt, crusts of bread, pieces of carrots, &c., from the hand. Feed him well, give him a warm stable and good bedding in winter. Halter him and lead him about when he is a year old. Bridle him at two years, and occasionally put a saddle on his back, and always keep him in hand, and under kind control.—Keep up this practice, till three years old—you may then put a harness on him and lead him around in it. Take care that he never gets a chance to break from you, or run away. In the spring, summer and fall give him a good pasture to exercise in, where he can run and consolidate his limbs. At four, you may harness him in a sled, and afterward in a light wagon—always remain by his head. Do not blind him—let him see everything that is going on around him. A harrow is a good thing to tame him down.

If you want him to work with another horse, you may now harness him with a horse that is perfectly gentle, and is sure in all situations.

At 5 years old, he will be fit to put to any light work in saddle and harness.—But then he should not be overloaded or strained at this or any other age. At eight years old, the horse is mature. His bones muscle and cords are fully developed and consolidated.—N. B. BETTON, in Granite Farmer.

☞It is astonishing how "tedy" promotes independence. A Philadelphia "brick," who was lying a day or two since in a very spiritual manner, was advised in a friendly way to commence "going" or was going up. "Let it go up," said old bone she sore. "I kin get as 'high' as some kites any day."

DIED, Monday, May, 8, 1854, at Marquette, Lake Superior, of Consumption, Henry Shurburn, son of Alva Shurburn, formerly of Keene Essex Co., N. Y.

Henry Shurburn was a Laborer by trade and came to Lake Superior three years ago last fall.

BROMPTON, Yorkshire, England, 1854.

Robert Banks, to the City Festival Association of the City of New York:

SONNET,

Friends of the loved lamented Patriot CLAY.
Virginia's Second Star—Kentucky's boast.
COLUMBIA'S PRIDE, from first to latest coast.
I greet you well that keep his Natal Day—
On to unnumbered ages point the way
He walked to glory.—Let desponding youth
Take courage, as they treasure the great truth
From his high deeds; who dares be glorious may!
He whose sole heritage, * "was indigence
And infancy," † (to use his own strong phrase)
Bounds from seclusion; born for eminence;
His Country calls, the youthful sage obeys;
Fame, wisdom, majesty, where his form then
And powers that did the admiring world amaze.

* Or, "he whose whole heritage." &c.

† "I was born to no proud patrimonial estate from my father I inherited only infancy, ignorance, and indigence. I feel my defects," &c. HENRY CLAY.

☞We are happy to say to our readers that this week concludes the last notice on the inside. Next week they shall have the interesting speech of Mr. Simmons. They shall also soon have a Map of the Seat of War in Europe. Better ones have been issued than the one we had in view, and the delay is only to enable us to get the best within our means.

A SHARPER.—"Sonny, where is your father?

"Father's dead sir."

"Have you any mother?"

"Yes, I had one, but she's got married to John Danklin, and don't be my mother any more, cause she says she's got enough to do to 'tend to his own young 'uns."

What better remedy can there be for evil, than to abstain from that which causes it?

CHEATED AFTER ALL.—The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Journal of Commerce, speaking of the probable settlement of Nebraska and Kansas by free emigrants, 'smells the rat' He remarks:

Colonies of Northern freemen will probably be assisted to take immediate possession of the Territories, to say nothing of the aliens who may also be permitted to settle in them. The South finding themselves cheated, ought to set up the cry of repeal, for they will find that while they secured the addition of twelve free States to the Union, they have interposed an obstacle to the future admission of a single new slave tate.

There is little, if any doubt, that the territories of Nebraska and Kansas will come in as free States. Through the efforts of the North, those regions will speedily be filled by emigrants, who are and ever will be opposed to Slavery.

PROPOSALS FOR THE PUBLIC PRINTING.—Pursuant to the provisions of an act entitled "an Act to Provide for the Public Printing," passed March 6 1846; and an act entitled an Act concerning the Journals and documents of the Legislature," passed May, 14, 1847, the undersigned hereby gives notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 24th day of June next, at noon of that day, for executing the printing for the Senate and the Assembly and for the Comptroller, Secretary of State, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Attorney General, State Engineer and Surveyor, Commissioners of the Land Office, and Canal Fund, the Bank Department, and all other printing for any and every of the state Offices for the term of two years.

Separate bids will be received for the Senate Assembly, or public offices or for the printing of either of the public offices; the whole to be performed in the same style and execution as to type and paper, as that furnished on the 5th of March, 1845.

For the Senate and Assembly Journals the proposals should state the price for composition, press work, paper, pressing and folding of each signature of eight pages, 600 copies, and also for any additional number that may be required to be done at the same proportional rates.

For the Senate and Assembly bids the proposals should state the price for composition, press work, paper pressing, folding and stitching each signature of four pages, 250 copies, ordered by either house, and the rate for one hundred additional copies of each signature that may be required—the paper to be of cap writing paper of a quality equal to that used for the Senate in 1845, weighing not less than 25 lbs. to each ream of 17½ by 15½ inches; and the work in all respects to be executed in the same manner—a number of blanks in each section of the bills to be numbered, and with sufficient space between them for interlining words.

For the Senate and Assembly Documents the proposals should state the price for composition, press work, paper, pressing, folding, gathering and stitching each signature of eight, pages 600 copies; and the rates for each additional 1,000 copies, for any additional number that may be required. Each page of documents or journals to contain not less than 48 nor more than 52 ems; but should it be necessary to put it in smaller type or to whatever turned rule, or rule and figure work, the size of the page must not be reduced, nor will increased compensation be allowed therefor. When it is necessary to put the matter in tables, the work will be executed in the same manner as though it was printed in pages of the form allowing 16 pages or a double signature, for each size of 39 by 24 inches, and the allowance thus made is to include every charge. The paper to be used for the Legislative Documents and Journals must weigh a least 28 lbs to the ream of 12 by 24 inches, and the quality must be equal to the best used in printing the Senate Documents in 1845.

Blank forms for the legislative printing will be furnished by the Secretary of State or Comptroller, and bidders will be required to have their bids conform to the printed schedule, or the bids will not be recognized. For the purpose of making a comparison of bids, the Senate documents of 1845 will be used as a standard.

Samples of the Blanks and other printing required for the public offices, and the canals may be seen at the Canal Department, and the other Departments; and the proposals may state the price by the hundred for blanks of the specified kinds.

For stereotyping in book or pamphlet form for any of the state offices, or for circulars on cap or post paper, the proposals may state the price for 1,000 ems for composition, specifying the estimate to the printed thousand separately the price for paper and press work, folding and stitching for 100 copies and the rate per hundred for each additional hundred required.

BINDING JOURNALS, BILLS, DOCUMENTS, AND S. S. LAWS.

Sealed proposals will also be received the same day and hour for the full binding of twelve copies of the Senate and Assembly bills and forty-one copies of the journals and documents of both houses and for finishing in boards with leather back and corners the residue of the journals and documents of the two houses; also for the binding of eighteen hundred copies of the Session Laws; as required by sec. 9 of chapter 231, page 277 of Vol 1, of the laws of 1847.

A set of documents will be kept in the office of the Comptroller, of the same kind as those required under the above proposals, and should the book be made in a manner different to the pattern, the Comptroller and Secretary reserve to themselves the right to make such deduction as they may deem just and reasonable.

To every proposal or bill for the performance of all or any portion of the printing or binding above specified, and by one proposal or bill will be received from any person, firm or party in interest for the performance of the same work, there must be annexed a guaranty, endorsed by a guarantor of sufficient ability, that the person or persons making such bid will, if the bid be accepted, enter into a contract according to the terms thereof, and give the security required by law; and within ten days from the time he or they shall receive notice of the acceptance of his or their bid; and to every such guaranty there must be annexed a certificate of the Secretary of State, Comptroller, Attorney General, Treasurer, State Engineer and Surveyor, or the Judge of the county where the guarantor resides, that the guarantor is a man of property and able to make good his guaranty.

Each proposal will be sealed up, with the guaranty, and directed to the undersigned. Proposals for assembling paper for any other portion of the printing or binding specified in this notice, as the case may be, will be received, if sealed up and directed, the proposals to be endorsed "Proposals for printing," and addressed to the undersigned, or either of them. The following description of the Magnificent Model of the World is taken from one of the leading papers of New York city, and will well repay perusal:—

PROF. HART'S WHOLE WORLD.

THE Entire World at one view, in magnificent has relief by Professor J. Woodman Hart.—This extraordinary, ingenious and comprehensive work of art—the first and only one of the kind ever conceived—stands forth as a monument of the unwearying patience and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility, is now open to the public, at the WORLD'S HALL, 377 and 379 Broadway, fitted up at an immense cost expressly for this master-piece of Art.—This is not a mere panoramic display upon canvass, but an actual structure, on Mercator's projection, of over one thousand square feet, composed of real land and water. Immense labor and enormous expense have been lavished upon the design, which is now completed. So real is the work, that all the oceans, seas, rivers, lakes, gulfs and bays, are filled with running water, upon the surface of which floats ships and steamers, visibly moving envoyage to and from every clime. Mountains and valleys, with all the varied geographical phenomena they present, are spread out in the exact shape and form made by nature. Volcanoes visibly belch forth sulphuric flames. The dreadful maelstrom or whirlpool, off the coast of Norway, is also seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The wreck of the ill fated steamer San Francisco is represented in the right locality, and seen sinking in the boundless deep—the Three Bells, Antartic and the Kilby, whose noble commanders so bravely rescued so many of America's sons and daughters, are also in view—The north west passage, recently discovered by Captain McClure, is accurately shown and expatiated upon. The localities of the war now raging in Europe and Asia are correctly delineated. The golden fields of California and Australia are prominent in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the beholder can sway with enthusiastic raptures over the entire surface of the mighty globe, upon which, as upon a stage, he appears as an actor; and while he is surprised at the vast novelty of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of its mechanical operations, and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the amusing lesson of an hour. The best talent of the country has been employed in the preparation of this mammoth undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass, without regard to expense, have been bestowed to render it worthy of this enlightened age, the whole having been calculated from the best European charts, together with all the recent surveys by authority of the United States government. The audience is taken on a pleasant tour from pole to polo, and under the guidance of the experienced lecturer, ensured a safe passage and speedy return to their happy homes. We will only add, that such are but few of the many advantages which can be gained only by a visit to this modern wonder. In connection with the above, a perfect model of the city of San Francisco, as it now exists, with all its buildings, streets, wharves, shipping, &c made from actual measurement taken upon the spot for that purpose, built of solid material. Also, numerous panoramic views of the California regions of gold, the whole rendering it one of the most popular, interesting and instructive places of amusement in New York, or, we may safely say, in the world.

We learn that Professor Hart will shortly publish a book relative to the design of the World, including a history of his extensive travels in the Old and New World, anecdotes, &c. which must be very interesting, and should be read by the million. We are also informed that for the purpose of popularizing American Art, and for the purpose of giving his valuable book an extensive circulation, Prof. Hart proposes to give to all persons purchasing his gift tickets of admission, in any part of the world, a vast amount of valuable and elegant property.

The mere announcement of this fact by Prof. Hart is a sufficient guarantee for its merit and success, he being known throughout the Union as an extensive traveler, public speaker, merchant, and a thorough active responsible business man; and we doubt not that the immense Hall will be daily crowded to behold his modern Wonder.

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

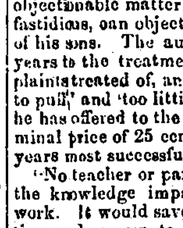
JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D

From A Woodward, M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and 'with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."



One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife; with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY has recently been Made by Dr Curtis, of this city, in the treatment of Consumption, Asthma and all diseases of the lungs. We refer to "Dr. Curtis's Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup." With this new method, Dr. C. has restored many afflicted ones to perfect health; as an evidence of which, he has innumerable certificates. Speaking of the treatment a physician remarks—It is evident that inhaling—constantly breathing an agreeable, healing Vapor, the medicinal properties must come in direct contact with the whole of the aerial cavity of the lungs, and thus escape the many and varied changes produced upon them when introduced into the stomach, and subjected to the process of digestion. The Hygeana is for sale at all the Druggists' throughout the country. Of the New York Dutchman of January 18th.

AFFLICTED READ.

PHILADELPHIA MEDICAL HOUSE—Established 20 years ago by Dr KINKELIN, corner of Third and Union sts. between Spruce and Pine, Philadelphia, Pa.

INVALIDS

Are apprised that Dr. Kinkelin continues his practice to a particular branch of medicine, which engages his undivided attention. He cautions the community against the abuse of mercury; thousands are annually mercurialized out of life. Recent affections are promptly extinguished.

TWENTY YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

In the treatment of a class of diseases hitherto neglected and imperfectly understood, has enabled Dr KINKELIN, [Author of a work on Self Preservation] to prove that nine tenths of the causes of nervous debility, local and constitutional weakness, mental and physical suffering, are traceable to certain habits, forming the most secret yet deadly and fatal springs of domestic misery and premature mortality.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

There is an evil habit sometimes indulged in by boys, in solitude, often growing up with them to manhood, and which, if not reformed in due time, not only begets serious obstacles to matrimonial happiness, but gives rise to a series of protracted insidious, and devastating affections—Few of those who give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequences until they find the nervous system shattered, feel strange and unaccountable feelings, and vague fears in the mind.

The unfortunate thus affected becomes feeble, is unable to labor with accustomed vigor, or to apply his mind to study; his step is tardy and weak, he is dull, irresolute, and engages in his sport with less energy than usual.

If he emancipate himself before the practice has done its worst, and enter matrimony, his marriage is unfruitful and his sense tells him that this is caused by his early follies. These are considerations which should awaken the attention of those similarly situated.

MARRIAGE

Requires the fulfilment of several conditions, in order that it may be really the cause of mutual happiness. Could the veil which covers the origin of domestic wretchedness be raised, and its true source in every instance disclosed—in how many would it be traced to physical disqualifications and their attendant disappointments. Apply then while it is yet time, in order to have your assailing and relaxed organization rebraced, revivified and strengthened.

REMEMBER.

He who places himself under Dr. Kinkelin's treatment may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and rely upon the assurance, that the secrets of Dr. K's patients will never be disclosed.

Young man—let no false modesty deter you from making your case known to one who, from education and respectability, can certainly befriend you.

Too many think they will conceal the secret in their own hearts, and cure themselves. Alas! how often is this a fatal delusion, and how many a promising young man, who might have been an ornament to society, has faded from the earth.

Strictures of the urethra are rapidly removed by the application of a new therapeutical agent, used only by Dr. K. Weakness and constitutional debility promptly cured, and full vigor restored.

COUNTRY INVALIDS.

Can have (by stating their case explicitly, together with all their symptoms, per letter enclosing a remittance) Dr. K's medicine, appropriated accordingly.

VOLUME XV. NO. 7. — KEESEVILLE, N. Y., JUNE 10, 1854. — WHOLE NUMBER 527

SPEECH

OF HON. G. A. SIMMONS, OF NEW YORK, DELIVERED IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MAY 10, 1854, ON THE NEBRASKA AND KANSAS BILL.

Mr. SIMMONS said:

Mr. CHAIRMAN: The bill to organize the Territories of Nebraska and Kansas proposes to withdraw the question of slavery from the National Legislature, and pass it over to the Territories themselves, and to carry this new policy not only into the future, but the past; and so it begins by removing the prohibition against slavery north of the parallel of 36° 30', in the territory purchased of France, leaving it to the Territorial Legislatures to admit slavery there if they choose.

Nebraska and Kansas together are large enough for a dozen or fifteen middling sized States; having a climate considering their western distance from the Atlantic, more temperate than our northern slave States, and comprising much prairie land that is easily cultivated by slaves, and well adapted to raise and furnish them for more southern markets, and thus favors and extends the internal slave trade. The territory in question appears also, as has been shown by a learned Senator from Tennessee, [Mr BELL,] to comprise all or nearly all, of our remaining good agricultural soil for emigrants from the old States, and if converted into slave territory, will form a cordon around the free States in the West as well as the South, and we of the North shall be completely hemmed in by slavery on all our borders except Canada and the ocean. Now, Mr Chairman, to all this I am opposed now and forever, here and everywhere, not only to this particular bill, but to the measure, under any form or modification whatever.

My first objection is, that it repudiates a contract binding on the National Government in law, which the courts will be bound to uphold against the action of Congress.

My second objection is, that it repudiates all the antecedent policy of the country, from its independence to the present time in respect to the settlement and government of our Territories, and substitutes another, which is ill timed, unconstitutional, anti-republican, and revolutionary in a high degree. And my third objection is, that as a future policy, it permits the extension of slavery into our new Territories where it does not now exist, and never ought to exist.

I say, then, that the Missouri compromise was a contract binding in law, and which the courts will be bound to uphold in opposition to the action of Congress. Other gentlemen have spoken of it as a compact binding in honor and good faith; but I do not intend to repeat their arguments. It is of no use; where this is not found, we must turn to something else.

First, sir, the ordinance for the organization and government of the Northwest Territory of 1787, was certainly such a compact, not merely because it calls itself on its face, but because it was a territorial charter, in the nature of a colonial charter, granted by the parent country to that infant Territory and the States to be formed within it. It has the proper parties—the United States on the one hand, and the people in the said Territory and in the States to be formed within it, on the other. This was so adjudged by the circuit court of the United States, held by Mr. Justice McLean and Judge Leavitt, in the case of Spooner against McConnell, in 1838—1 McLean's Reports, 344. It was a charter in reference to its subject-matters.—Two things were granted by the parent country to the Territory—a constitution of government, and the use of certain domains for settlement. Let us examine them seperately.

The constitution contains all the essentials of the best constructed State constitutions, viz: a bill of civil rights and privileges, and a territorial government, or system of political rights. The first provides for freedom of religious opinions and worship; for the writ of habeas corpus; for the trial by jury; for a proportionate representation in the Legislature; for judicial proceedings according to the common law; for capital offenses being bailable; for fines being moderate, and punishments not being cruel or unusual; for no man's being deprived of his liberty or property, but by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land; for full compensation for property taken, and for no law to be passed impairing the obligation of contracts; for the encouragement of religion, education, and schools, and for the rights of the Indians; that the Territory and States formed therein, shall forever remain a part of the Confederacy, subject to the constitutional authority of Congress; and that there shall be formed within the Territory not less than three nor more than five republican States, to be admitted into the Union and that slavery shall be forever excluded from the whole Territory. The frame of government is given for temporary purposes and local objects The civil rights are permanent, and the territorial inhabitants have, therefore, a double guarrantee; first, a charter, against the parent country; and, second, a constitution against their own Legislature.

Again, sir, the use of large domains is granted for settlement, large enough for five States, which have been since successively carved out of that original territory and admitted into the Union, lessening the original area by degrees in the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan, until exhausted in the State of Wisconsin. But the settlers and their descendants, in all those portions of the old Territory, were parties to the compact, and entitled to all its stipulated benefits, just as the whole twenty three millions of the United States, now inhabiting thirty-one states, are parties to the compact with Great Britain acknowledging our independence, and as all their descendents will, when amounting to one hundred millions. Nay, sir, all those seperate portions of the north west Territory first had, and still have, an interest in each.

Now, sir, this charter was accepted and acted on by the settlers, by emigrations and settlements made on the faith of it; and thus became binding on both parties to its extent of era for new Territories to be formed within it, and of constitutions of government to be granted to them in pursuance of the original compact. The charter was based on mutual considerations of advantage; the parent country secured to itself the advantages of new settlements and states, and the Territories the benefits of large domains for settlement under a republican government, and of the civil rights and privileges specified, including exemption from slavery.

But this ordinance of 1787, as to all these permanent articles or bills of rights, including exemption from slavery, has been three or four times adjudged, both in the national and state courts, to be a compact and incapable of being rescinded without the common consent of the parties to it. In the case of Spooner against McConnell and others, the United States circuit court, Judge McLean and Leavitt giving written opinions, it was ruled that these provisions in the ordinance were "a compact between the United States on the one hand, and the future inhabitants of a rising Territory and the States to be formed within it, on the other." The same was held by the supreme court of Illinois twice, as I find by the cases in 1 Breese, R. 208, and 3 Scammon, R. 71.

The compact was formed between political communities, or the United States and the future inhabitants of a rising Territory and the States which should be formed within it. Consequently all who became inhabitants of the Territory made themselves parties to the compact, which, being so formed, could only be rescinded by the common consent of those who were parties to it. Now, sir, what political communities? The parent country and the territorial inhabitants of this great organized Territory. It was certainly a compact of some kind, and I ask what? Why, sir, a charter, a charter, a territorial or colonial charter; for no other kind of compact performs such offices between such parties.

The relation of a Territory to the United States is usually thought to be that of passive obedience to despotic power, like clay in the hands of the potter; but is this so? Have not our own Territories as much right to their laws and franchises, conferred before emigration and settlement, on the faith of them against the parent Government, as our Colonies had against the British Crown? The Crown could not take away such rights without a judicial proceeding by quo warranto and not by legislative repeals. Now, sir, I ask the attention of the committee to the act constituting the Territory of Missouri, in 1812, or rather enlarging and improving an older one, with the consent of the Territory.

The parties to it are the United States on the one hand, and the Territory and States to be formed within it on the other, in all respects similar to the parties to the charter of the Northwest Territory. It is similar to it, also, in its subject matters.—It grants a constitution of government, including both civil and political rights substantially the same as those granted by that ordinance, omitting only the last article excluding slavery. The Missouri charter is entitled "An act for the government of the Territory of Missouri," while the other is entitled 'An ordinance for the government of the Territory of the United States northwest of the river Ohio,' amounting to the same thing. The first thirteen sections of the Missouri act are provisions for organizing the territorial government like the corresponding provisions in the ordinance for Ohio, and then the fourteenth section reads thus:

"And be it further enacted, That the people of the said territory shall always be entitled to a proportionate representation in the General Assembly; to judicial proceedings according to the common law and the laws and usages in force in the said territory; to the benefit of the writ of habeas corpus. In all criminal cases the trial shall be by jury of good and lawful men of the vicinage; all persons shall be bailable, unless for capital offenses where the proof shall be evident or the presumption great. All fines shall be moderate, and no cruel or unusual punishments shall be inflicted.—No man shall be deprived of his life, liberty or property, but by the judgment of his peers or law of the land. If the public exigencies make it necessary for the common preservation to take the property of any person, or to demand his particular service full compensation shall be made for the same. No ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, shall be made No law shall be made which shall lay any person under restraint, burdan, or disability, on account of his religious opinions, professions, or mode of worship, in all which he shall be free to maintain his own and not burdened for those of another.—Religion, morality, and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall be encouraged and provided for from the public lands of the United states in the said territory, in such manner as Congress may deem expedient."

Again, the Missouri act, like the ordinance, grants the use of extensive domains for settlement, large enough for many moderate sized territories and states to be formed within it, and comprising all of Louisiana, except the State of that name, extending from the 33d° parallel of latitude to the British dominions, all of which is covered by this original territorial organization, and is left unprotected from slavery by reason of the omission of the last article of the Ohio ordinance forbidding slavery.

It is plain, sir, that the Missouri act was copied substantially from the Ohio ordinance, omitting the last article forbiding slavery. Each of them distinguishes between the transient and the permanent in the same way; between the temporary provisions for a territorial government and the permanent provisions embodied in the bill of rights. These the Ohio ordinance declares shall remain forever, and the Missouri act that the people shall always be entitled to them.

This Missouri charter, Mr. Chairman, was, like the other, accepted and acted on by the settlers, by immigrations and settlements made on the faith of it, and became binding on both parties to its full extent of area, and future population for new Territories to be formed within it, and of constitutions to be granted to them. Now, sir, the eighth section of the Missouri compromise act of 1820, was only an amendment of the charter of 1812 by adding the last article of the Ohio ordinance forbidding slavery, which had been omitted in the original; and the amendment was accepted by the Territory of Missouri, which did not become a State till a year afterwards, in 1821; and it thus became part and parcel of the charter, from that time, as much as if originally incorporated in it. The Territory, then, was competent, as a political community, to accept the amendment; and her domains then comprised all the territory covered by the amendment, from which the State of Missouri, as well as Iowa and Minnesota, were afterwards taken and erected under seperate organizations, but leaving a remainder—Nebraska and Kansas.

It is a well known rule of interpretation that all acts relating to the same subject-matter are to be taken and constructed as but parts of only one system. (Smith on Stat., 750.) Now, sir, take first the act constituting the Missouri territory in 1812, covering all the old Territory of Louisiana as ceded by France, except the State of Louisana lying south of the parallel of 33°; next the act of 1819, detaching and erecting the Territory of Arkansas, leaving to Missouri Territory the same area as before, except Arkansas; next the eighth section of the compromise act of 1820, amending the territorial constitution of Missouri, by adding the clause forbidding slavery over all its area north of the parallel of 36° 30'; next the act of detaching and admitting the State of Missouri in 1821; next the act admitting Arkansas as a state into the Union; next the act of 1836, seperating and erecting the territory of Iowa; next the act of 1846, admitting Iowa as a State; and lastly, the act of 1849 seperating and erecting the territory of Minnesota. All these acts passed since the original act of 1812 are parts of one system, and part performances of the original charter of that date, and such of them as were passed since the amendment of 1820 are parts of the same charter, as amended by the clause forbidding slavery and were necessary to carry out the obligations required by the amended charter.

Again, sir, the fact that the six last articles of the Ohio ordinance are declared to be a compact on its face, while the fourteenth section of the Missouri charter containing precisely the same things, except the last article, forbidding slavery, and afterwards amended by adding this is not, is of no consequence; because a statute is either a law or a contract by its own nature and substance, and not by what it calls itself 'The question is not,' says Judge Story, 'whether such contracts or grants are made directly by law in the form of legislation, or in any other form, but whether they exist at all.' 'And it may be laid down as a general principle, that whenever a law is in its own nature a contract and absolute rights have vested under it, a repeal of that law cannot divest those rights or annihilate or impair the title so acquired.' (3 Story's Com. 257—'58.) Upon the same principle, 'a legislative act declaring that certain lands which should be purchased for the Indians should not be thereafter subject to any tax, constituted a contract which could not be rescinded by a subsequent legislative act, such repealing act being void' (6 Cranch, 164.)

But we have seen that the act constituting the Territory of Missouri like the ordinance constituting the Northwest territory embodies the substance of a colonial charter, viz: certain rights and privileges or franchises are guaranteed to the settlers on the one hand, and emigrations and settlements are secured to the parent country on the other. The Missouri compromise act itself has, in principle, been lately decided by a court in Missouri to be a compact, and not repealable.

I have thus far attempted to show that the act constituting Missouri Territory in 1812, with its amendment of 1820, called the Missouri compromise, is a compact in the nature of a colonial charter.

Can the Missouri compromise, constitutionally speaking, be repealed? I say no.

I might here quote the opinions of Daniel Webster in 1850, which to me are clearly intended to reach this restriction of slavery by the eighth section of the Missouri compromise act, as well as the treaty with Texas, and the laws of nature forbidding slavery, in his opinion, in New Mexico and California; but as his meaning may be disputed, I quote Louis McLane, one of the ablest men of his day. He said in 1820.

"It has already been avowed by gentlemen on this floor, from the South and the West, that they will agree upon a line which shall divide the slaveholding from the non-slaveholding States. It is this adjustment I am anxious to effect; but I wish to effect it by some compact which shall be binding upon all parties and all subsequent Legislatures, which cannot be changed, and will not fluctuate with the diversity of feeling and of sentiment to which the empire in its march must be destined. There is a vast and immense tract of country west of the Mississippi yet to be settled, and immediately connected with the northern section of the Union, upon which the compromise can be effected."

And, sir, it was effected upon that vast tract of of country then unsettled, comprising Nebraska, as well as Iowa and Minnesota, and did become irrepealable by the Legislature.

If the amendment of 1820 to the Missouri charter forbidding slavery is a compact like the six articles of the Ohio ordinance, 'it cannot be annulled without the common consent of all the parties;' and Congress cannot annul it any more than the Crown before our Revolution could annul a colonial charter without a writ of quo warranto in a court of law, and proof and conviction of a breach of it on the part of the Colony.

"This compact," says Judge McLean, speaking of the Ohio ordinance, 'could only be rescinded by the common consent of those who were parties to it.—1 McLean's R., 344.

It follows that if a statute organizing a Territory is a territorial charter, in the nature of a colonial charter, then, when once accepted and acted on by immigrations and settlements on the faith of it, it cannot be revoked and that a statute amending that charter with the assent of the Territory, cannot be rescinded.

"In the charters under which all these Colonies were settled, with a single exception, (Pennsylvania,) there is an express declaration that all subjects, and their children inhabiting therein, shall be deemed natural born subjects, and shall enjoy all the privileges and immunities thereof; and that the laws of England, as far as they are applicable, shall be is force there; and no laws shall be made, which are repugnant to, but as near as may be conveniently, shall conform to the laws of England. Now this declaration, even if the Crown previously possessed a right to establish what laws it pleased over the Territory, as a conquest from the natives, being a fundamental rule of the original settlement of the Colonies, and before the emigrations thither, was conclusive, and could not afterwards be abrogated by the Crown."—1 Story Com, 139.

The provincial Colonies of New York and Virginia, and even the proprietary Colonies, except that of William Penn, stand on equal grounds with the chartered Colonies of New England in this respect If their rights are not secured by charters in technical form, they are equally sacred and beyond the reach of the Crown by fundamental rules of their setilements and emigrations made on the faith of them. Are our organized Territories less entitled?

Sir, there are many acts of Congress that cannot be repealed; that is to say, all that are in substance and effect contracts whether in the forms of contract or law, and without regard to what they may call themselves. Acts admitting States, acts acquiring or ceding territory, acts granting lands or privileges, acts granting preemptive rights when acted on, acts granting any other rights or franchises, and all acts implying contracts, though not expressing them, are irrevocable, if accepted and acted on.

If, then, the exemption from slavery north of the parallel of 36° 30' became a part of the territorial charter of Missouri by an amendment in 1820 to its bill of rights, and has been accepted and acted on it cannot be revoked by the parent government alone without the consent of the other parties to it. A public charter can only be altered or resoinded by the Legislature in the case of towns and counties, and similar divisions under the same political jurisdiction because they are only the arms and hands of the same political body—the State—and are all represented in the same state Legislature, and parties themselves to all such acts dismembering them; but a colony or territory, having another government, and not allowed any power or vote in the parent government, stands on different grounds, and sustains a different relation from that of towns, counties, or other subdivisions of a State, just as Canada sustains a different relation to England from either Ireland or Scotland.

But again, sir, if we call the act constituting the Territory of Missouri, and its amendment forbidding slavery, the organic law or constitution of the Territory instead of a charter, this will not vary the case, because such a constitution or fundamental law is, as we have seen, when acted on, and emigrations and settlements made on the strength of it, as irrevocable as a charter. In fact, such a fundamental law has a double character; it is irrevocable as a contract against the parent country, and inviolable as a constitution against the Territorial Legislature; for the constitution of a Territory differs from that of a State, which is self-imposed by the people of the State alone, while that of a Territory is granted by the parent country, and accepted by the Territory; consequently a State may alter its own constitution within certain limits, as its pleasure, but a Territory alone cannot alter its constitution, nor can the parent country alone alter it, because it takes both to make it; the right to alter must be reserved in the act erecting the Territory.

Such a territorial constitution, granting franchises such as personal freedom, and prohibition of slavery, is a 'most valuable law,' as well as a fundamental one, and, after emigrations and settlements made on the faith of it, cannot be revoked. Indeed laws of a Territory are prorepeal, for the reason that they are implied contracts between the parent country and the Territory, whether given in the forms of law or proclamation, and not express compacts in the forms of charters.

'There is no principle of the English law more sacred,' says the circuit court of the United States, 'than that rights granted by the king, whether of property, franchise, or government, by proclamation, letters patent, or charters, are binding on him; he can neither revoke, annul, or impair them. The inviolability of royal charters was solemny asserted in the Declaration of Independence; the taking them away was declared a grievance; the acts of Parliament which were repugnant to the charter rights of the colonies and colonists, were denounced as 'acts of pretended legislation.' As contracts, their obligation is protected by the Constitution of the United States; and the Supreme Court has uniformly held them to be as sacred as the deeds of individuals or the grants of a government, whether the thing granted is franchise or property'

So says the Circuit Court of the United States.

So Mr. Jefferson understood such fundamental laws given to a colony, and settlements made on the faith of them, as equivalent to charters; and in drafting the Declaration of Independence, he places a violation of them on the same footing—'for taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments.' What is a more valuable law, sir, than a law forbidding slavery in a new Territory? This restriction of slavery has long been acted on; settlements made, and rights vested, on the strength of it; Iowa, as well as Arkansas, admitted into the Union, and Minnesota erected into a Territory, on the strength of it. This bill makes a broad sweep, and repeals the restriction in respect to Minnesota as well as Nebraska and Kansas. Can this be done? Sir, with constitutional lawyers there cannot be two opinions.

It may be objected that the Territories are vacant and unsettled, and no persons are there to have any vested rights, and consequently, none can be violated. Now; first, the facts are not so; there are some settlers there, entitled to insist on the exclusion of slavery; and, secondly, the compact is not only with the present inhabitants, but all future ones, as one political community, and, consequently, all other portions of the domain covered by the original charter, at the time of its being amended in 1820, by supplying the clause forbidding slavery, are interested in the protection of these unsettled portions situate in their neighborhood. This bill abolishes the law of freedom over all the territory in the immediate neighborhood of free States; and one of the grievances stated in the Declaration of Independence to be resisted by force and arms was, 'for abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province,' &c. Have not the free States as much interest in preventing slavery in Nebraska and Kansas, situated, as they are, next to them, and right before them, in their emigrations, to the westward, as our old thirteen States had in the preservation of the free system of English laws in Canada?

Again, sir, the objection assumes that all the territory outside of the State of Missouri lost its organization by merger in the State, when admitted into the Union in 1821, with contracted limits, and thereby lost its charter and franchises, and among these, the exemption from slavery. But, first, the facts are otherwise; for the laws outside the State were not abolished, but all rights held under them were protected by officers of adjacent districts as a substitute for a territorial government.—The Territory of Missouri, in its original charter, comprised the whole of Louisiana as then settled, and to be settled, except the State of that name, situated south of the thirty-third parallel of latitude, and to that extent was one of the parties to the compact amending its charter, called the Missouri compromise; consequently the whole, as then peopled and to be peopled, continues to be a party until all the engagements in the original charter are carried out and performed, and all portions of that territory are settled, and admitted into the Union; because the original charter was entire for the whole territory, and does not become severed into many by dividing the area, or dismembered piecemeal, as fast as portions of the territory become States. Suppose Wisconsin had remained unsettled until Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Michigan had become settled and taken into the Union, could Congress, without their consent convert it into a Botany Bay, or fill it up with negro slavery? No, sir. No, sir.

A man's real estate descends to his children, but to all of them, born and unborn; and the former cannot snatch from a posthumous child his share, under the pretense that it could have no vested rights. The charter of Missouri was to all Territories, born and unborn, within the whole domain, and protects all of them, organized and to be organized, such as Nebraska and Kansas.

Again. Arkansas was a part of Missouri Territory, and had a territorial organization in 1820, at the passage of the Missouri compromise law, and continued so until after the territorial organization of Iowa; so that this outside Territory was never destitute of a territorial organization or political community, in some part of it, to represent it, after the admission of the State of Missouri, with contracted limits, into the Union, although if it were so, its franchises, secured by the amended charter forbidding slavery, would only be suspended and not extinguished, and would be revived on the first organization of any part of the territory; yes, sir, and will be revived by the present bill in these Territories of Nebraska and Kansas, with an authority paramount to all its repugnant provisions.

But, sir, the principle itself is not sound that chartered rights, within vacant and unorganized Territories, are not vested rights, and entitled to the protection of the laws.

Part occupation and settlement are enough to give vested rights to the whole. The chartered limits of most of our colonies extended to the Mississippi, and some of them to the South sea; were the unsettled portions less sacred and secure than the settled portions under charters from the Crown?

The United States was only one of the parties to the amended charter of Missouri forbidding slavery, and cannot rescind it without the consent of all the other parties; namely, the Territories and States formed, and to be formed, within the original Territory. This consent cannot be given by their Representatives in Congress where they are identified with the other party to the compact, but only by distinct acts of their own political communities; and it has not been given to this repeal.

My next objection is to the policy of this measure. Its effect will be to convert the whole of the unsettled territory between the Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains into slave territory, and into which slaves will certainly be taken in large numbers; because you do not wait for the Territorial Legislatures to repeal the restriction against slavery, if they choose, but you do it by this bill, and leave the Territories to lock the door after the horse is stolen. You repudiate all the former policy of this country, and adopt another, untried, unconstitutional, anti-republican, and revolutionary in a high degree. The territory in rear of old States, and extending to the Mississippi, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Great Lakes was divided between the North and the South from the beginning, extending the line between free and slave States onward to the Mississippi river along the Ohio to its mouth, thus dedicating to slavery, the territory within which we have the States of Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, and Forida, which was acquired after we became an independent nation, but was slaveholding at the time, and naturally fell into her position as a slave State. If slavery was to be carried into the new Territory, this was a natural apportionment. But we hear nothing of non-intervention or squatter sovereignty. It was done by Congress prohibiting slavery, by the ordinance of 1787, from the northern section of the Territory, and permitting it in the southern section, under treaty obligations with the old States that ceded it; and because Congress never had any power to exclude it from Kentucky and Tennessee, and deemed it best to admit Florida with slavery.

Then, sir, in 1820, the Missouri compromise line was fixed; but it was a mere extension of the old one, or nearly a continuation of it, excepting from the northern section, however, the State of Missouri. This compromise was nothing new in principle; a similar one had been implied from 1787, and earlier. It was only applying to the western slope of the Mississippi basin the same policy that had been applied to the eastern slope—a line of division to accomodate both sections of the Union, with suitable domains for emigration. This partition, like that east of the Mississippi, was of domains already subject to slavery, and its best soils already occupied with slaves. Here, again, we hear nothing of non-intervention or squatter sovereignty. The divisons was made by Congress; and slavery permitted in the South and forbidden in the North by Congress. Texas, though acquired afterwards, was a portion of the Mississippi basin, and was subjected to the same division, giving but a small crust, however, to the freemen of the North; and Texas, too, was a slave State when taken into the Union, large enough for several others.

Next comes the domains on the Pacific, all of them free by the laws of the countries ceding them to us, and so came into our hands; and not only so, but situated at a vast distance from the slave States, and not necessary as outlets of slavery under any pretenses, whatever. At the same time the slave Territory and States on both slopes of the Mississippi, including Texas, have got the largest quantity and best quality of the lands, while their population, besides slaves, is only one half that of the free States and Territories.

Under these circumstances you make an effort to divide all these free Territories on the Pacific, and convert half of them or more into slave territories. Prah, pudor! And because not agreed to, this fortunate opportunity is taken to break up the whole compromise west of the Mississippi. All this evil is now at our doors, and deservedly, because we early forsook our first love of freedom, and consented to the extension of slavery into the new Territories in the outset. I should like to know, Mr. Chairman, what the slaves States could have got by the extension of the line to the Pacific? Nothing, in substance. The North, if anybody, has cause of complaint, for the reason that slavery was not forbidden to Utah, which lies mainly north of that line, while New Mexico, lying mainly south of it, may have slaves if she choose, and California, that lies half and half, only exercised her own choice.

I propose now, sir, to compare this long established policy of congressional intervention with that now proposed to be substituted, and see for ourselves which is most consistent with the Constitution. Nothing need be said of its constitutionality as applied to the domains east of the Mississippi, for the ordinance of 1787, restricting slavery from the Northwest Territory, was the act of the old Congress before the Constitution, and confirmed by the new. But as to the domains west of the Mississippi, ceded by France, and a small part of Texas, Congress assumed the right to restrict and exclude slavery from all north of the parallel of 36°30'. Had it, in truth, the power to do it? I have no doubt of it, sir.

The exclusion of slavery from North Texas, by treaty with that State, is too plainly constitutional to require any argument, but the exclusion from all of Louisiana north of 36° 30, by the Missouri compromise act, is insisted, at this late day, both here and at the other end of this Capitol, to be unwarranted by the Constitution. Let us see. In the first place there are two extreme opinions on this question, one holding that the Constitution legalizes slavery in our Territories, in spite of all congressional legislation to the contrary; the other, that it legalizes freedom in all our Territories, in spite of all congressional legislation to the contrary.

If we had to choose between these two we could not hesitate to allow the construction in favor of constitutional freedom in all the Territories to be much the best sustained; but the misfortune is, that this, as well as the other construction, comes too late in the day; the Constitution has been practically interpreted very differently for sixty-four years, and we must now take that instrument as every other, not as it might or ought to have been construed and applied to practice at first but as the parties to it have themselves construed and applied it from the beginning.

Between these two speculative opinions, then, we have a middle one, expounded by Marshall and Story, and supported by all our experience as a nation, in Congress and out of it, which is, that Congress possesses this whole power over slavery in the Territories, to be exercised under proper limitations and restriction. This power to admit or exclude slavery, is a power of Government, and as the power of governing the Territories, as Judge Story remarks, is neither in the States nor in the Territories themselves, it is therefore, in Congress

But, Mr. Chairman, let us look into this power of Congress to exclude slavery from the Territories a little more closely with our own eyes. What are the sources of its power to legislate for territories, and what the limitations imposed on its exercise in respect to slavery? I answer, that the source of its power is either an express power to dispose of, and make all needful rules and regulations respecting, the territory or other property belonging to the United States,' or an implied power to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution all other powers vested by the Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department thereof;' and among these are the powers to acquire territory and admit new States into the Union. Respecting the original territory belonging to the United States at the formation of the Constitution, Congress had the power to make all needful rules and regulations. But needful for what purpose? To fit and prepare them by emigration and republican institutions for admission into the Union.

Respecting the territory acquired by treaty from France and other nations, this follows in substance the same rule; for the acquisition of territory must be to extend the area of our Union by the formation and admission of new republican States, and the power to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into effect the acquisition of territory, can be no other than the power to make all needful rules and regulations respecting such territory for the same purposes as in case of the original territory belonging to the United States, namely, to prepare and fit them by immigration and republican institutions for admission into the Union. Now, sir, in making all needful rules and regulations respecting the old territory, or all laws that shall be necessary and proper to carry into effect our acquisitions of new territory, Congress is not confined to the management of them as public lands, but is to govern them, or make laws for their government as civil and political communities. Political jurisdiction and property in the soil are both included in the very word 'territory.' This is the doctrine of Vattel:

'A nation which inhabits a country has an exclusive right to it. This right comprehends two things:

'First. The domain, by virtue of which the nation alone may use the country for the supply of its inhabitants, may dispose of it as it thinks proper, and derive from it every advantage it is capable of yielding.

'Second. The empire, or the right of sovereign command, by which the nation directs and regulates everything that passes in the country. The whole space over which a nation extends its government, becomes the seat of its jurisdiction, and is called its territory.—Vattel 99, 99; Chap. xviii., sec. 203.'

Now, sir, I go one step further. Congress having the power, is bound to exercise it. May, in the law, means shall.—Congress is bound to make all needful rules and regulations, or all laws necessary and proper for these purposes, and we have no power to make any others. Needful rules and regulations, and laws necessary and proper for the Territories, are the only ones we have any right to make, and the very terms of the grant exclude the power to go beyond and legislate aside from the objects and purposes indicated. No, sir; no, sir, we can only make 'needful regulations' or 'laws necessary and proper' for raising up minor republican States for this Union, and are bound to refuse and prevent all others. If it was needful or necessary and proper to continue slavery temporarily in Territories already possessing it, as in our south western domains east of the Mississippi, or in the old settled portions of Louisiana west of the Mississippi, so be it; but it was not needful or necessary and proper to introduce it into new, unsettled Territories, like those northwest of the Ohio and the Territories of Nebraska and Kansas, as yet uninhabited and uncontaminated; much less so into the Pacific Territories, where the regions are wild and vacant or settled long ago, under the laws of freedom without even the foot prints of slavery.—Where the French laws admitted slavery, and we had taken them with the soil, it was our constitutional duty to abolish them as to all vacant and unsettled tracts where slavery has not penetrated, as in Nebraska and Kansas, and formerly Iowa and Minnesota, for the simple reason that such prohibition as the Missouri compromise act was a needful regulation or a law necessary and proper for that territory, and, for the like reason, we are bound not to pass any law admitting slavery into the Pacific territories.

To be sure, Congress is to be the judge as to what regulations are needful, and what laws are necessary and proper for the territories; but then it is to judge fairly and not arbitrarily, or its acts are a fraud, on the Constitution, and consequently void.

But again, sir, it is contended for the purpose of giving all persons from the States a right to emigrate into all the territories with, or without slaves, in spite of the legislation of Congress to the contrary, that the jurisdiction and soil of our territories are both held in trust by the National Government for the benefit of the States equally, or the emigrants from them, and that Congress cannot administer that trust without an unrestricted admission of slaveholders as well as non-slaveholders. I reply, that not only the States and emigrants from them, are beneficiaries of the trust, and have an interest in its just administration, but the territories themselves, and the future States to be formed out of them, are still greater beneficiaries, and have still greater interests in it; and if Congress is bound to regard the interests of the parent States, it is equally bound to look to those of the territories and the States to be formed from them, Would Congress have a right to convert any one or more of our territories into a sort of penal colony upon which to empty all the jails and State prisons of the old States? Would these be needful regulations or laws necessary and proper to form republican States to be admitted into this Union? Is slavery anywhere a needful institution, or one necessary and proper to start with in planting republican States in vacant and unsettled domains? Our ancestors contended otherwise with Great Britain, and set forth in their Declaration of Independence, as one cause for resistance, that the Crown had withheld his assent from the most wholesome and necessary laws, meaning laws forbidding the increase of slavery.

True, the Declaration of Independence is no part of the Federal Constitution, but its principles are in it; it is to the Constitution what the ironwork is to a seventy-four—binding the parts together, and holding its timbers in their places. It furnishes a light to guide us to a right interpretation of its powers. Granting that the States are all equally interested in the trust, can emigrants enter the territories by a rush, and take possession without the consent of the trustee? Cannot a trustee of lands held for the use of the members of a family make a partition between them with their consent, and accommodate them all?—But I deny that such a restriction of slavery from Nebraska, and other territory north of 36° 30', bears unequally against the settlers from the slave States. If they have to sell out their slaves before emigrating there, so the emigrants from the free States have to sell out their farms, and cattle, and other effects. Both classes are on an equal footing in this respect, and the slaveholder can live there without work himself, on the labor of others, as well as he could before going there. Sir, he can do better than before. With the proceeds of the sales of his slaves he can hire more labor, and better labor, than he could own, and the very proceeds of his slaves cannot fail to be invested in a more profitable business to him. If an account were to be taken, the balance would be in favor of the slaveholder, compared with the non-slaveholder, accruing from their change of locations and reinvestment of their capitals; for the advantage to every slaveholder in removing to a new free territory is a sample of the public advantage to an entire slave State if all could at once sell out and rid themselves of their slaves without loss, and obtain free laborers in their places.

Now, sir, let us look at the constitutionality of territorial legislation in respect to slavery.

The bill before us does not admit an inherent, independent right in the settlers, but proposes to grant them the right, as it does all powers, to be exercised by the territories. But, sir, it can be easily shown that such a delegation by Congress of its power to the Territories to legislate slavery into their limits, is inconsistent with the Constitution.

The legislative power confided to Representatives is a personal trust, and cannot be delegated to even the whole mass of the population, and much less to only a small part of that population when its legislation is to affect the whole mass. So a State Legislature cannot authorize the people at large and much less those of a particular locality, to pass a Maine law, or a free school law for the whole State. No, sir, it is only when the power of local legislation is to affect only that locality, that it can be delegated to the local Legislature.

But are not all the people of the States affected by the introduction of slavery into a territory? Are they not affected by the political power and influence of slave States to be formed from those territories, and having their extra representation on this floor, and the extra number of votes for President on account of their property?—Are not all the people of this nation to be affected, for good or for evil, by the increase of slavery anywhere and everywhere within their bounds? If a nation or man has one side struck with a paralytic stroke can it be said that the other is not affected or interested in preventing or curing it?

But, sir, if I had any doubt about this restriction called the Missouri compromise for other reasons, the fact that it was judged to be constitutional by the ablest statesmen of our country at the time, and has been acquiesced in and acted on for over thirty years, and acquired all the sanctity of a constitutional amendment, would inspire me with modesty enough to dread the responsibility of attempting to rip it all up and throw it to the winds.

In the next place, sir, the old policy is eminently republican, for the reason that if congressional legislation is employed, all parties to be affected by its legislation of slavery into the territories have a voice in making the laws. But not so if the territorial inhabitants are to control it. Have the citizens of the free States no interest in preventing the spread of slavery through our territories? Their population is about thirteen and a half millions, while that of the slave States, apart from slaves, is only a fraction over six millions; and is it doubtful whether the greater streams of emigrants from the free States have not a right to their proportion of free territory to occupy equal to their needs?

But the free States and their descendants have a higher interest in deciding whether slavery shall be planted in the new territories. If it is once planted there, it cannot, or will not, be eradicated by territorial legislation, and they will become slave States for whatever amount of slavery shall happen to be there. These slave States have the advantage over the free ones, by having Representatives on this floor for their property, to the number already of about twenty, for which the free States have no equivalent; and just so have the slave States a property vote in the choice of President. Have the free States no interest in preventing this inequality becoming greater? Are rotten boroughs to be extended to countervail the increase of our free population?

And the last, though not least reason, why the old policy is republican, is, that it enlarges the basis of democratic government—the masses of freemen who have intelligence and virtue enough for self government—and in the same proportion lessons the aristocratic element in this nation. Never, as long as these two elements are nearly equally balanced, shall we have stable, consistent public measures, but only when one of them has become too weak to struggle for the mastery, and is content to watch and check the measures of the majority.

Now, sir, what shall we say if this attempted delegation of power to the Territories over slavery is anti-republican? Yet, sir, so it is.

First, it deprives the people of the Territories themselves of the power of preventing the introduction of slavery. They will find slavery already introduced, before legislation by them is possible. For in what condition does the bill leave the Territories? Vacant and unsettled; or only a few inhabitants, not nearly enough, without further emigration, to choose and organize their Territorial Legislatures. The bill leaves the Territories subject to its former laws of slavery; and slaves, to some extent, will be taken there before the Legislature can be formed, and cannot be legislated out again without full compensation. Thus they become slave Territories to a greater or less extent, and slaveholders in case of any attempt, will hold the balance of power between the parties. It is a policy that disregards all the advantages of experience, and distrusts the wisdom of the whole compared to the interested prejudices of the few.

In the second place, sir, this territorial power over slavery is not confined to the small area of the few settlers who introduce it; but once established, it forms a nucleus which is gradually to spread over vast regions, growing into states long after the little bands of adventurers who introduced it are sleeping in their graves.

It is anti-republican, sir, because it deprives all the rest of the United States of a voice in making the laws which are so vitally to affect them, politically as well as socially; and because it deprives the great mass of our free laborers of the great domains created for their use, and necessary for their employment and progress in the march of civilization.

But, sir, the old policy is highly conservative of the Union. Congressional legislation covers a large domain, enough for many states and territories—in fact the whole domain belonging to the United States at this time, and not already furnished with needful regulations. Therefore the collision between North and South, always arrising when legislating about slavery, occurs but once for all; while territorial legislation covers less territory, and the nation has to be convulsed on every application for the admission of a new state. But who believes that such an application can be refused without a rupture of the Union? Nobody, sir, nobody.—There is nobody stupid enough to believe it. How much better, then, to prevent all those dangers in the outset. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

But, sir, our territory is not inexhaustible; a supply of soil will not, like its products, always follow a demand for it. The free population of the North is already, as I have said double that of the slave states, and its peaceful conquests of our great western domains will be in the same proportion, at least, to those made by emigrants from the south. Will those freemen consent to be hemmed in, without room, by a scattered set of slaveholders? Again, sir, under what circumstances are we going to pass this bill? None of us, or of Senate, or of the Executive branch of the Government was elected with reference to it. No petitions for it have come from the South, and no election at the North have favoured it. It is a very important question, and the free States find themselves taken by surprise. Why not postpone action on it until the people can have an opportunity of electing another Congress? If this is pressed through at this time, will it not be evidence of a conscious belief in its friends, that a majority of the next House of Representatives would be against it? How did young Louis Bonaparte get the Empire of France? Victor Hugo says he got as a thief in the night. How long will he hold it, sir? Thereby hangs a tale.

Now, sir, as a future policy, it allows the extension of slavery into our new territories where it now does not exist, and never ought to exist. To this I am opposed.

I shall very briefly, Mr. Chairman, give my reasons why, intending to say nothing offensive to gentlemen who think differently, or even unworthy of their consideration, and certainly nothing designed to excite any apprehensions or improper actions in in any part of our Union.

But before entering on my argument, Mr. Chairman, let me put the free States right before the country in respect to the contest commenced in this House. Let it be remembered, that the North is acting only on the defensive; that she is not using her claim to freedom in these Territories as a sword to attack slavery in the States, but as a shield to protect her own freedom in its growth and expansion, not attempting to undermine existing institutions anywhere, but to prevent future ones coming into existence in the great central and vacant Territories of the Union, where the very souls and bodies of both masters and slaves are yet to be created, and where there is no necessity for slavery to spread itself for more room or otherwise. It is this consideration, sir, that gives a character to this bill, so new and startling in this country, boasting above all others of its freedom, and in this age of light and progress, when all the world but ourselves is striking off the fetters of ancient slavery instead of forging new ones for generations yet unborn.

But I do not intend to dwell on the evils of slavery, viewed in the light of religion and morality, or as a grievous wrong to the slave. In this light the subject has been too exclusively considered for years; for I have long been of opinion that it would be more effective to consider slavery in its relations to the master, in the light of political economy, as a question of profit and loss, dollars and cents, and to show it up as it truly is, an unprofitable and losing investment. In this point of view we need not have recourse to Smith's Wealth of Nations, or Soy's Political Economy, by whom its unprofitableness was pointed out nearly a century ago; for we have at home, before our eyes, facts that speak louder than words; we have only to compare the growth of the free States with that of the slave States, in population and wealth, in agriculture, manufactures, and commerce, in schools and literature, in the sciences and the arts, in all the elements, material as well as moral, of civilization, to be satisfied. Why is it, Mr. Chairman, that in traversing Pennsylvania and Ohio, and all the free States, bordering on our slave States, we meet with farms highly cultivated, dwelling-houses and out-houses in order, gardens and orchards planted in abundance, highways, school houses, and churches, everywhere convenient, as they should be, factories and merchants' store-houses rising up all around us, and villages and cities keeping pace with the country; while, on the other side of the borders, we are warned, without other information, by the sterile and dilapidated features of the country, and the stationary, if not retrograde, character of the farms and villages, of the presence of slavery. It is not because the northern farmer, or manufacturer, or merchant, is able to make all these improvements with his own hands; he, too, has to employ the hands of others. But what does he pay, and what hands does he employ? He pays only the interest, while the slaveholder has to advance the principal.

An industrious young man at the North, educated only to farming, when he attains to the age of majority, if he has nothing but the clothes on his back, is worth more, in fact, than is at first thought supposed; his personal powers of industry are equal to a fund producing annually at least over $100, over and above all drawbacks—say $1,500. Now, the northern farmer is able to avail himself of this fund by simply paying the interest; while the southern planter, whether he raises or purchases his laborers, inasmuch as slaves, like other chattles, sell for about what it costs to raise them, has to advance from his means the whole capital, instead of the interest, and thus from five to ten hundred millions of dollars are, to the planters of the South, a dead capital, sunk in the bodies of their laborers, the northern farmers having all this difference to lay out in hiring so much more labor; and the same is true of the manufacturer and the merchant. All this is over and above the gain that accrues to the northern employer by reason of the better quality and greater value of his free labor; for who does not see the superior advantage to the community at large of having for its basis, in every part of the country, a class of thinking, independendent freemen, outreaching all the others in its powers of invention and production? Where do we find our inventions and improvements in the arts take their rise? Who was Fulton, Whitney, and the other inventors in America? Who were the discoverers of useful improvements in modern Europe: were they the feudal barons, or serfs? Shall we then extend a policy which lessens the increase of these masses of free thinkers and laborers, and substitute for them the mere shadows of human beings? Shall we dishonor their occupations by reducing them to a level with slaves? Shall we wound the self-respect of our free citizens of this class, not only in their own eyes, but all the world over?

But again, sir, slavery is inconsistent with that variety of employments required by human society for its development, especially in such states as Nebraska and Kansas. Our own experience, as well as that of all other parts of America, furnishes evidence enough that slave labor is only adapted to a few of the simplest operations of industry, and not to other operations requiring the exercise of educated mind or trained habits of thought. Hence agriculture, and the production of cotton, sugar, rum, and tobacco, are all the business employments to be found in a country well stocked with slaves. An individual, sir, is not educated rightly, he never acquires full possession of any of his faculties for thought or for action, unless he cultivates all of them in due proportion. So a nation never gets full possession of any of her capabilities only in proportion as she opens and develops them all. The history of every country proves this. Take England, where her commerce is carried to such a pitch above that of any other nation, and look to her manufactures; see these, too, in the same comparative degree of perfection, while her agriculture marches in advance of both, and draws from her wheat soils in the cottage allotments one hundred and twelve and a half bushels per acre, about double the yield of our own. Now, all this is because the various employments of a nation, like those of individuals, are the mutual helpers and promotors of each other and, like mutual insurance companies, have to flourish or fall together.

A nation is a mutilated being unless all its capabilities, both of industry and of soil, of people and of country, are unfolded and [illegible]gether. The ancients used to think the march of society must be in single file, and its industry and resources be developed in succession, first, agriculture carried to perfection; next, manufactures and the arts; and after these, commerce, with its instruments of exchange and transportation, could be raised up and find something to do. But the moderns, within the last three centuries, have discovered that all these employments are helpers and promoters of each other, like the functions of the human body, so that one without the other cannot perform its part, and much less be made perfect.

The history of slavery in Europe, under the milder name of villenage, or serfage, confirms these views; nothing but agriculture, and that of a low grade, is ever thought of where this prevails. And, therefore, a country like much of Africa, that is not adapted to a variety of employments, for want of a variety of soils and products, cannot be expected to make great progress in anything, or not until the intercourse between all parts of the world shall have united them all as mutual helpers and promoters under a common system.

It is this variety of employment, under the name of the division of labor, that has brought out that wonder in productive industry hard to believe, and yet true, that a small portion of the people, availing itself of this advantage, produces more than the whole without it: that a few people, employed in agriculture, produce more from the soil, where the rest are engaged in manufactures and commerce, than all would produce if employed only in husbandry. And the same is the case in each department of educated labor. And more, sir; the further this variety of employment is carried, the smaller is the proportion of the people in any one kind of industry that is able to overmatch the whole. A large manufacturing system in the southern States would increase, and not lessen, their staple productions from the soil. But freemen only can do it.

Slavery is still more inconsistent with variety in the productions of the mind, or rather with any at all. The injury to society by this institution is not so much the presence of slaves as the absence of freemen. It keeps out of a community the only class of people that supply the new thoughts and original creations of mind. It is only since the emancipation of the lower orders in Europe that we have the productions of a Shakspeare and Milton, of a Locke and Newton, and thousands of others. All such productions are contributed from the masses, and in just the rate and proportion of their progress in personal freedom and social equality. It was this, imperfect as it was, that gave rise to the literature and philosophy of the ancient Republics; but it was, after all, their personal, and not their political freedom—for personal freedom is consistent with absolute monarchy—though it has no security without the right of self-government; while more political liberty, without freedom in the masses, is every where as sterile and barren of mental as of physical improvements, and the enslavement of an inferior by a superior race, as in Hungary or America, furnishes no exception to the rule. Without the ability as well as the presence of all the people to examine and discuss the character of constitutions and laws, how can the world expect to improve their systems of government and jurisprudence?

But, sir, the physical and mental pursuits of man are but part of his business here; he has other wants and aspirations that engage his thoughts and occupy his life. Yes, sir, a sense of right and justice is one of the elements of humanity as much as that of interest and utility. Indeed, God has linked them together, and experience, as well as Revelation, teaches us that righteousness is as necessary as wealth and power to exalt a nation. And, sir, these moral wants and aspirations will never be quieted with anything but the proper objects that are adapted to satisfy them. They are blended in our Constitution with those promptings to the other objects of pursuit, and will always continue to be so blended, and exert their influence on all your systems of wealth and economy.

The greatest orator of antiquity, more than two thousand years ago, told the Athenians, when assembled as a Legislature, that "laws have for their objects, the right the honorable, (good faith?) and the expedient, and this they seek to find; and, when found, it is proclaimed a common ordinance, equal and alike to all, and which all are bound to obey, for the reason that all laws are the invention and gift of the gods, the opinion of wise men, the correction of all faults, voluntary and involuntary, and the general compact of the State." Was he not right; and will any other laws be permanent, and serve as a general compact of our Republic? He was right. Slavery will always be condemned as wicked, as well as regreted as inexpedient. Both these elements are combined in human laws, and both must be respected, or neither will attain its ends. Indeed, the moral enters the most intimately of the two, and as the body without the spirit is dead, so law without right is dead also.

Sir, I am not called on to defend the ministers of the Christian religion, for they need no defence; or if they do, they are fully competent for their own. I must, however, remark that Christianity is the fountain-head of all true civil and political liberty and liberal institutions in the world. It is christianity that has abolished slavery, as far as it has been abolished in Europe; it is this that has given to the States there all the civil and political rights they enjoy, compared with the pagan governments of the ancients, and has infused into their laws and social institutions those principles of equality and rectitude which are the boast of modern States, even of our own.

But further, sir; even the very principle of representation in modern governments, unknown to the ancients, was borrowed from the Christian church. Its ministers have always taken a leading part in the assertion of civil liberty and the support of free constitutions. Even this is not all; they were the originators and patrons of learning in ancient times, and the preservers of it for us during the darkest ages of Europe. To them the moderns are indebted for keeping alive, in their monasteries, the productions of ancient genius, like sparks raked up in the ashes, until the barbarians who overturned the civil institutions of the Old World, became civilized in their turn, and reappeared in the more polished forms of modern Europe. Ancient Republics were necessarily defective. Sir, inasmuch as pagan morality was depraved, they were not governments of equal liberty or correct charity; they wanted that Christian spirit that purified every system into which it entered. Even the government of England, which Montesquieu says is a republic under the disguise of a monarchy, was half reared before its builders took their rules and principles from Christianity. But not so with our Constitution. If its structure is composed chiefly of materials borrowed from the English, its foundations were laid on the Christian religion; for the pagan institution of slavery was forced into it by others, and not voluntarily adopted.

Now, sir, have we made a mistake? Have we got to change our plan and finish the edifice with pagan materials, or, at least, erect wings of pagan institutions. Is all this needful, or necessary and proper to form good republican States for this Union? Because we can tolerate slavery in the old States until time and nature can silently abolish or remove it, is it necessary and proper, or a needful regulation for new Territories to begin them with plantations of negro slavery? Are the ends of government less valuable than the means, and civil liberties less precious than political ones? If political men like Patrick Henry may deprecate in the strongest terms the invasion of political rights, may not the ministers of Christianity deprecate the invasion of our civil liberties in the name of Almighty God?

Sir, I have no fears of the final determination of this question by the American people. The passage of this bill will not be the end, but only the beginning of the end.

The Republican.

KEESEVILLE:

Saturday Morning, June 10.

The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands,
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands.
The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

Platforms.

With the fragments of these political chess-boards in full view, we are not so presumptuous as to attempt to propose one, yet we think we can put two or three planks together that will be satisfactory to reasonable minds.

PLANK FIRST.

Governor and the Maine Law—An earnest discussion is going on among leading whig papers in regard to the whig candidate for Governor. The advocates of the Maine Law, insist that he shall pledge himself in favor of such a law, and the friends of temperance propose a State Convention to be held in New York city at the time of the State Fair to nominate a State Ticket. Now we think this all premature. A whig Gov. in the place of Seymour would not have vetoed the bill of last winter, unless clearly unconstitutional, whether a temperance man or not. Dont our friends see this? The reason is plain. Whig Governors and whig Presidents don't veto bills unless "clearly unconstitutional, or passed hastily without due deliberation. If there are doubts, they will give way to the collected wisdom of the Legislature or of Congress, and the voice of the people as represented by those bodies. This is whig doctrine. Whigs have also heretofore been opposed to distinctive and specific pledges, and we are now. We ask only a pledge to the good old whig veto doctrine. If the whig State Convention puts such a man in nomination, we shall support him devotedly, without regard to his antecedents on the temperance question, knowing that this, like all other important questions of State or national policy, is safe in the hands of an honorable whig of the old school.—We are a temperance man and say this in full view of the whole aspect of the subject in this state, and believe it will meet the approbation of all reasonable men on 'second sober thought.'

PLANK SECOND.

Slavery and the Union.—We detest slavery from the bottom of our heart, and regard it as a system of abominations that 'smells to Heaven. If ever a resort to arms, assassination, massacre, and a fight for freedom was right, it would be justifiable in the colored population of the South.—Southern slavery has scarce a parallel in inhumanity and oppression, yet we are for the 'Union now and forever, one and inseperable.' Slavery is aggressive and domineering, making 'hewers of wood and drawers of water' of the north, but we blame them less than northern doughfaces. The north has the majority and could control the legislation and the destinies of the country, but for 'a mess of pottage' men are found to sell themselves to serve the devil in the shape of American Slavery. Here lies the difficulty. The fault is at home and here the blame should be attached. No, no, we are not for a dissolution of the Union. We are for laboring on till the race of dough-faces are exterminated, and then the north can assert her rights.

PLANK THIRD.

The Song of the Syren—Disappointed politicians, agitators, ambitious demagogues and others, for pecuniary objects, pat whigs on the back, and calling them clever fellows, say, "come now, throw up old party names and let's have a new party—a great party, a successful party." Fol de rol! Just as victory is in their grasp, through the divisions and abominations of their opponents, whigs are asked to throw up their organiza-

very suggestion is absurd, and if whigs look around and examine the antece-ts of those from whom these suggestions ie, it will be more so. It will be found t they have caused serious disasters to gs and to freedom. If they are patriots, them support whigs who have ever been e, and if they are patriots they will. t whigs be true and not desert their ors and their friends in the hour of tri-, if they would preserve their consist-cy. If whigs would succeed, they can so only by an honorable perseverance. elding now, would be like the fainting of n. Pierce, in the Mexican war, just with-t the reach of the enemy's fire.

Concert of action at the north is desira-, but for whigs to cut and run and play cond fiddle to their aforetime bitter oppo-nts, just as the enemy is torn to atoms, a piece of absurdity that a genuine Chi-man could not excel. The patriotism of n who is unwilling to support a true man cause he happens to be called a whig, ust be only skin deep, or reach his heart rough his pockets.

News of the Week.

POLITICAL SIGNS.—A Free Soil Coun-y Convention was held in and for Chitten-en Co., Vt., on the 3d inst., at which on notion of J. S. Adams, of Burlington, a rominent member of that party the nom-nation of candidates was postpone d to the ast Wednesday in June inst.

On the 7th inst, the Whig State Con-rention of that State met at Rutland, and nominated Mr. Shafter, one of the ablest Free Soilers of that state for Lt. Governor. t is not difficult to see what this means.—Giddings and Hale also now say they are ready to co-operate with any or all parties opposed to the extension of the Slave pow-er. That is the right kind of talk too, and it is what they ought to have said in 1844.

POLITICAL.— The Legislature of New Hampshire, met on Wednesday, and on the organization of the House the democrats had an apparent majority of 2 !

ELECTIONS.—Charter elections in seve-ral cities have recently taken place result-ing in the triumphant election of the whig tickets. All parties contributed to this re-sult. Judge Conrad is elected Mayor of Philadelphia, by 8000 majority, against a dem. majority of 2000, and in spite of the utmost exertions of federal officers and public pap. In the city of Washington even, the seat of Congress, and the resi-dence of the President, heads of the Cabi-net, and an army of understrappers, and in spite of every effort and of hundreds and thousands of dollars expended to corrupt the people, the whigs have carried every-thing before them.

CONGRESS.—This body evidently exhaus-ted itself in the desperate efforts to carry Nebraska. Nothing has been done since, and it is conceded that nothing is to be done. An adjournment is talked of till the fall months.

RIOT.—As a party of Americans were marching through the streets of Brooklyn the other day they were attacked by a par-ty of catholic Irish. Two boys were seri-ously wounded by gun shots. Reports have gone forth that 20 or 30 were killed but this is an exageration. Whether the attack was unprovoked we are not advised.

FOREIGN.—It is said, but not credited, that Spain is now willing to sell Cuba. It is also said that Prussia and Austria have joined England and France against Russia. The Russians are retreating from the Cir-cassian frontiers. The great battles of which we expected news are yet to be fought.

Later arrivals report the retreat of the Russians from the whole extent of their frontier towns to the interior. Russian prizes taken by the British fleet in the Bal-tic, have arrived in England. Both the French and English armies in the east are to be reinforced.

More Monstrous Eggs.

Enos Barnes Esq. of Chesterfield has left with us three monstrous eggs. One measuring 7 7-8 by 6 1-8— weighing a fraction less than a quarter of a pound— laid by a native hen owned by him, Another measuring 7 3-4 by 6 1-4— weighing about the same as the above, laid by a native hen belonging to I. H. Smith, a neighbor of Mr. Barnes.

And a third, about the same size of the above, laid by a Shanghai, belonging to Mr. Smith a neighbor of Mr. Barnes.— They are "whoppers"—as large as goose eggs. Crownpoint must look out or she will lose her laurels in the Egg line.

☞ We are happy, and we presume our friends will be also, to be freed from the long land advertisement which has so long confined us to such narrow limits. This week we make everything give way to the speech of Mr. Simmons, presuming our readers would prefer it entire in one num-ber than to have it continued. We have on hand numerous interesting communica-tions, and have others promised. Some kind friends have also handed us in a few relics in the shape of newspapers and books of the last century, from which we shall soon quote.

☞ We again call attention to the adver-tisement of N. Allen, & Co., of Burlington Vermont, Resisting the Laws.

The folly of a riotous resistance to the laws has been frequently demonstrated, but never more glaringly than at Boston in the fugitive slave case. However much the hearts of the people may be with the oppressed, mobs cannot defeat the execu-tion of the laws backed as they will be by swords and bayonets. The people should remember the distinction between riots and revolution. Riots only injure the cause they pretend to espouse, and tho faithful but peaceful execution of the fugitive slave law will render it the most obnoxious. Re-sistance to the laws must end either in dis-graceful and murderous defeat, or civil war and revolution. A moments reflection will satisfy every sensible and honest man that resistance is not only futile, but wicked, because it can be but a riot at best, and must meet with a riot's deserts. Howev-er righteous the cause, only the bigot, the fanatic, the crazy, and the indiscreet can urge on to a riot, with a riots result.

The proceedings in Boston may be thus stated in substance: A display of the leaders in Faneuil Hall seemed to be their only object—the people excited to a state of frenzy—an officer murdered in the dis-charge of his duty—the fugitive remanded to slavery—and when the decision of the commissioner was adverse to him, and he needed assistance most his valorous friends were no where to be seen! Of course a mob cannot resist an organized soldiery, and hence the folly and wickedness of stir-ring up the people to riot and murder in the first place and then abandoning the fu-gitive in the hour of need. The moral is, that there is reason to be used even on the subject of slavery as abominable as it is, and that the people should learn to distinguish between mere agitators and practical, de-voted friends of freedom of a life time.

The Administration Urging on the Annex-ation of Cuba!

WASHINGTON, June 2, 1854.

The 'Union' of to-day has a very extra-ordinary and significant article relative to Cuban affairs, which excites general atten-tion and occasions no little remark in po-litical circles.

The 'Union' advocates the immediate possession of Cuba, as a great point, which it is the duty, to perseveringly labor for.

The 'immediate' clause is interpeted that we are on the eve of highly important transactions with Spain,—perhaps war.

This article, it is understood here, is offi-cial, and is designed to foreshadow the poli-cy the government has marked out to pur-sue.

Affairs at Washington.

WASHINGTON, May, 27, 1854.

It is understood that there was an im-portant discussion in the Cabinet on Thursday last. Two propositions was dis-cussed—one being the immediate occupa-tion or blockade of Cuba, and the other the sending of two special envoys to Spain with propositions; the design being to force Spain to sell Cuba or bring on a war. It is expected that the special Commissioners will be nominated and confirmed.

PROPOSALS FOR THE PUBLIC PAINTING.—Pursuant to the provisions of an act entitled "An Act to Provide for the Public Printing," passed March 5 1845; and an act entitled "An Act concerning the laws journals, and documents of the Legislature," passed May, 12, 1847, the undersigned hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 2th day of June next, at noon of that day, for executing the printing for the Senate and the Assembly and for the Comptroller, Secretary of State, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Attorney-General, State Engineer and Surveyor, Com-missioners of the Land Office, and Canal Fund, the Bank Department, and all other printing for any and every of the State Offices for the term of two years.

Separate bids will be received for the Senate, Assem-bly, or public offices, or for the printing of either of the public offices; the whole to be performed in the same style and execution as to type and paper, as that fur-nished on the 5th of March, 1846.

For the Senate and Assembly Journals the proposals should state the price for composition, press work, pa-per, pressing and folding of each signature of eight pa-ges, 500 copies, and also for any additional number that may be required to be done at the same proportional rates.

For the Senate and Assembly bids the proposals should state the price for composition, press work, paper pressing, folding and stitching each signature of four pages, 250 copies, ordered by either house, and the rate for an hundred additional copies of each signature that may be required—the paper to be cap writing paper of a quality equal to that used for the Senate in 1846, weighing not less than 25 lbs. to each ream of 17½ by 28½ inches; and the work in all respects to be executed in the same man-ner—the lines in each section of the bills to be num-bered, and with sufficient space between them for inter-lining words.

For the Senate and Assembly Documents the propo-sals should state the price for composition, press-work, paper, pressing, folding, gathering and stitching each signature of eight, pages 800 copies; and the rates for each additional 1,000 copies, for any additional number that may be required. Each page of documents or jour-nal must be set in small Pica type when practicable, and contain 1,536 ems; but should it be necessary to put it in smaller type, or in what is termed rule, or rule and fig-ure work, the size of the page must not be reduced, nor will increased compensation be allowed therefor. When it is necessary to put the matter in tables, the work will be estimated in the same manner as though it was print-ed in page form, allowing 16 pages or a double signa-ture, for each sheet of 19 by 24 inches, and the allowance thus made is to include every charge. The paper to be used for the Legislative Documents and Journals must weigh at least 20 lbs to the ream of 19 by 24 inches, and the quality must be equal to the best used in printing the Senate Documents in 1846.

Blank forms for the legislative printing will be furnish-ed by the Secretary of State or Comptroller, and bidders will be required to have their bids conform to the print-ed schedule, or the bids will not be recognized. For the purpose of making a comparison of bids, the Senate documents of 1846 will be used as a standard.

Samples of the Blanks and other printing required for the public offices and the canals may be seen at the Ca-nal Department, and the other Departments; and the proposals may state the price by the hundred for blanks of the specified kind.

For all printing in book or pamphlet form for any of the State offices, or for circulars on cap for post paper, the proposals should state the price for 1,000 ems for com-position, restricting the estimate to the printed lines and separately the price for paper and press work, folding and stitching for 100 copies, and the rate per hundred for each additional hundred required.

BINDING JOURNALS, BILLS, DOCUMENTS, AND SESSION LAWS.

Sealed proposals will also be received until the same day and hour for the full binding of twelve copies of the Senate and Assembly bills, and forty-one copies of the journals and documents of both houses, and for binding in boards with leather back and corners, the residue of the journals and documents of the two houses; also for the binding of eighteen hundred copies of the Session Laws; as required by Sec. 6 of chapter 251, page 177 of Vol. 1, of the laws of 1847.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of de-cency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exhlusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medi cal Manual."—The author of this work un-like the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to re-commend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and ex-perienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confi-dence.

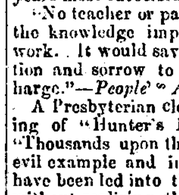
JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D

From A Woodward, M. D., of Penn. Uni versity, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Nu-merous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs some of them of long standing have come un-der my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been consider-ed beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professio-nal skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most com-prehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoid ing all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various com-plaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff, and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely no-minal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortifica-tion and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People' s Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writ-ing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful conse-quences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to en-lighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the reli-gion of Jesus Christ, on the present and com-ing generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so active ly engaged in."



One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be for-warded free of postage to any part of the Uni-ted States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.— Address (post paid) CONDEN & Co., publish-ers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY has recently been made by Dr. Curtis, of this city, in the treatment of Consumption, Asthma, and all diseases of the lungs. We refer to Dr. Curtis's Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup." With this new method Dr. C. has restored many afflicted ones to perfect health; as an evidence of which he has innumerable certificates. Speaking of the treatment a physician remarks:—It is evident that inhaling—or plainly breathing an agreeable healing Vapor, the medicinal properties must come in direct contact with the whole of the aerial cavity of the lungs, and thus receive the many and varied changes produced upon them when introduced into the stomach, and subjected to the process of digestion. The Hygeana is for sale at all the druggists' throughout the country. (From the New York Dutchman of January 14th.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence without it is presented to the public, as an efficacious remedy in a so known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as in safety. In cases as Impotency Hoemorrhages, Disordered Sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluror Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, when the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Female after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart. Indigestion, Dugishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

DEBILITY

TO FEMALES

Henry's Invigorating Cordial is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among ladies would exist, were they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those constitutional which females are liable to are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN.

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVIOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excess have brought on themselves Premature Impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and shrivelling of the Genital Organs. Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the unsual passions, occasioning the necessity of recovering the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state. and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strength ener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE.

It is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL."

is put up in 8 oz. Pannel Bottles, and is easily recognized by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle, (to counterfeit which is forgery) as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

AFFLICTED READ.

PHILADELPHIA MEDICAL HOUSE—Established 20 years ago by Dr. KINKELIN, corner of Third and Union sts. between Spruce and Pine, Philadelphia, Pa.

INVALIDS

Are apprised that Dr. Kinkelin continues his practice to a particular branch of medicine, which engages his undivided attention. He cautions the unfortunate against the abuse of mercury; thousands are annually mercurialized out of life. Recent affections are promptly extinguished.

TWENTY YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

In the treatment of a class of diseases hitherto neglected and imperfectly understood, has enabled Dr KINKELIN, [Author of a work on Self Preservation] to prove that nine tenths of the causes of nervous debility, local and constitutional weakness, mental and physical suffering, are traceable to certain habits, forming the most secret yet deadly and fatal springs of domestic misery and premature mortality.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

There is an evil habit sometimes indulged in by boys, in solitude, often growing up with them to manhood, and which, if not reformed in due time, not only begets serious obstacles to matrimonial happiness, but gives rise to a series of protracted insidious, and devastating affections.—Few of those who give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequences, until they find the nervous system shattered, feel strange and unaccountable feelings, and vague fears in the mind.

The unfortunate thus affected becomes feeble, is unable to labor with accustomed vigor, or to apply his mind to study: his step is tardy and weak, he is dull, irresolute, and engages in his sport with less energy than usual.

If he emancipate him elf before the practice has done its worst, and enter matrimony his marriage is unfruitful and his sense tells him that this is caused by his early follies. These are considerations which should awaken the attention of those similarly situated.

MARRIAGE

Requires the fulfilment of several conditions, in order that it may be really the cause of mutual happiness. Could the veil which covers the origin of domestic Wretchedness be raised, and its true source in every instance disclosed—in how many could it be traced to physical disqualifications and their attendant disappointments. Apply then while it is yet time, in order to have your unstrung and relaxed organization rebraced, revivified and strengthened.

REMEMBER.

He who places himself under Dr. Kinkelin's treatment may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and rely upon the assurance, that the secrets of Dr. K's. patient will never be disclosed

Young man—let no false modesty deter you from making your case known to one who, from education and respectability, can certainly befriend you.

Too many think they will conceal the secret in their own hearts, and cure themselves. Alas! how often is this a fatal delusion, and how many a promising young man, who might have been an ornament to society, has faded from the earth.

Strictures of the urethra are rapidly removed by the application of a new therapeutical agent, used only by Dr. K. Weakness and constitutional debility promptly cured, and full vigor restored.

COUNTRY INVALIDS.

Can have (by stating their case explicitly, together with all their symptoms, per letter inclosing a remittance) Dr. K's. medicine, as propriated accordingly.

Forwarded to any part of the United States, and packed secure from DAMAGE or CURIOSITY.

Humanity's Call.

Come ye Rumsellers and join in our ranks,
We'll greet you with welcome, we'll give you our thanks;
We'll aid and assist you, if you will but come
And join with the RECHABS, or become a good "Son."

What! can you take pleasure in anger, and strife?
In brawls, and contentions with malice most rife?
In rendering unhappy the circle of friends,
By changing mankind to mere fools, brutes, and fiends?

All this you accomplish if liquor you sell:
The mis'ry and wretchedness, ah! who can tell,
That's caused by the trafic in Alchol's King,
And quaffed in cherry coblers, mint Juleps or sling.

Oh, then be persuaded, this once by a friend,
To the noble cause temperance, your influence lend,
You ne'er will be sorry, you ne'er will lament,
When in the Sons' Hall, or Rechabites' Tent.

Your candid attention, one moment I ask,
Is here your object? Away with the trash;
Your spirit eternal, in Heaven must dwell,
Or to everlasting be doomed unto hell.

Oh, then, I entreat you, your errors forsake;
To righteousness, honor, and glory, awake;
To consumate folly, no longer, then cease,
While pardon, through Jesus, you all, may receive

FRANKLIN.

SCHROON, May 1854.

That Cottage Home.

I dreamed a dream the other night,
When all around was still,
I thought I saw my cottage white
Upon yon flowery hill.
The grass-plot green before the door,
The porch with vines o'ergrown,
Were lovely as they were before,
When that cottage was my own.
Oh! Rumseller,
That home, that home of thine,
That pleasant home, that happy home,
That cottage home was mine.

The gravel walk so white and straight,
With flower banks on each side,
That led down to the wicket gate,
Where Willy used to ride.
The locust o'er the path that grew,
The willow boughs that swayed,
And told me with a tale most true,
That there my Mary played.
Oh! Rumseller, &c.

The silver lake so calm and clear,
Along whose banks I've strayed,
So often with my Lucy dear,
To watch the sun-light fade.
The pearly stream that sweetly ran
The garden feet along,
And murmering forth, as bright as then,
All sung the mournful song.
Oh! Rumseller, &c.

The window towards the garden gate,
That looked out to the west,
Where that loved being used to wait,
Who made my home so blest,
Was closed, the sombre curtains hung,
And no loved face was there,
Nor voice—the evening song that sung
Or breathed the morning prayer.
Oh! Rumseller, &c,

Under my Window.

BY T. WESTWOOD.

Under my window, under my window,
All in the Midsummer weather,
Three little girls, with flattering curls,
Flit to and fro together:—
There's Bell, with her bonnet of satin sheen
And Maud, with her mantle of silver-green,
And Kate, with the scarlet feather.

Under my window, under my window,
Leaning stealthily over,
Merry and clear, the voice I hear,
Of each glad-hearted rover.
Ah! sly little Kate, she steals my roses,
And Maud and Bell twine wreaths and posies
As busy as bees in clover.

Under my window, under my window,
In the blue Midsummer weather,
Stealing slow, on a hushed tip-toe,
I catch them all together:—
Bell, with her bonnet of satin sheen,
And Maud, with her mantle of silver-green,
And Kate, with the scarlet feather,

Under my window, under my window,
And off, through the orchard closes,
While Maud, she flouts, and Bell, she pouts,
They scamper and drop their posies,
But dear little Kate takes naught amiss,
And leaps in my arms with a loving kiss,
And I give her all my roses.

A Love Song.

Give me but thy heart, though cold;
I ask no more!
Give to others gems and gold;
But leave me poor!
Give to whom thou wilt thy smiles;
Cast o'er others all thy wiles;
But let thy tears flow fast and free,
For ME, with ME!

Giv'st thou but ONE look, sweet heart?
A word—no more?
It is Music's sweetest part
When lips run o'er!
'Tis a part I fain would learn,
So, pr'y thee, here thy lessons turn,
And teach me, to the close,
All love's pleasures,—all its woes!

[Barry Cornwall.

☞ The following lines were written in East Windsor, in 1785, with reference to a spring very much like this;—

When first of April did arrive
In seventeen hundred eighty-five,
The icy bridge which long had shut
The bridge of the Connecticut,
Now breaks up, begins to float,
And passengers must use the boat;
Yet, on the twentieth day, 'twas so,
By fresh supplies of hail and snow,
That sleighs and punge did thick convey
Mankind to church to fast and pray.

[Hartford Courant.

The Whig Party.

The suggestion of the Register and Watchman was, that the time had come for a union of all at the North who are hostile to the extension of slavery. Perhaps the language used was susceptible of a construction looking to a dissolution of the Whig party; but such a construction did not occur to us, until the charge was made by others, and we do not think any such interpretation can be given to it. The Whigs claim, and have always claimed to be a Republican party, although calling themselves the 'Whig' party. Some of our cotemporaries seem to be thrown into a fever heat, by what they conceive to be a design to change the name of 'Whig' party, and lay as much stress upon it as if they supposed the safety and success of the party depended upon the preservation of its name. Now we care very little for names, as such. They are mostly arbitrary, and serve mainly to distinguish parties from each other. they cannot be said to represent fixed principles, for however much parties change or reverse their doctrines, they hold on to their name.

The Democratic party have been on every side of every political question, but still call themselves Democrats. If, therefore a new party christening would tend any more to unite in action those agreeing on a great and vital principle, and thereby contribute to its adoption, we should not hesitate to do it, and consequently do not sympathize with those who go into horrors at the idea of dropping their party name. But we see no necessity for such a change in the name of the Whig party, and as we said before, draw no such inference from the language of the Journal and Register. What we understand from the articles in question is, that the Whig party in the North should take such a position on the subject of Slavery, as shall bring into our ranks all who entertain similar opinions, and thus concentrate, for effectual political action those who are striving for the same object. So far from seeing anything to denounce in this suggestion, it seems to us to dictate not less of good policy, than honesty.

If we look at the political measures that divide the parties, we shall be obliged to confess that, with the exception of Slavery, they are few and not very important. The tariff, as a political issue, is passing away—and in the rapid progress of the manufacturing interest of the country, is losing its importance. Internal improvement is quite as much of a sectional question, and is of local, rather than general interest.

There are, it is true, many questions of policy and legislation, in which the two great parties differ; but we mean to say, there is no great, absorbing and vital principle which is now at issue between the Whigs and Democrats; nothing, we may safely say, worthy of a moment's consideration in comparison with the question of Slavery as presented to Congress and the people by the Nebraska bill, and by the conduct of the Slave States for the last twenty years.

* * * *

The true course of the Whig party of the North is to us plain and unmistakable. It is not to dissolve the party, to change its principles or its name. It is, to boldly and firmly avow the principles which animate, and which ought to animate every freeman who loves his country, of resistance to Slavery, wherever, under the Constitution, it may be reached. We would do this, not to conciliate fanatics, or for the purpose of inviting coalition with other parties, but because it is right and just, and because it is the sentiment which really, and truly animates the heart of every honest man.

The effect of such a position would undoubtedly be to bring into our ranks every sincere opponent of Slavery, because it would remove the only cause which created and keeps together an antislavery party. There are doubtless ambitious leaders of that party, who use it as a hobby horse for office or influence, who care more for the preservation of the party, than for the success of its principles; but the great mass of that party do not act from such motives.

So far then, as the suggestions of the Register favor the course of policy above indicated, they meet our decided concurrence; and they are nothing, after all, but the re-assertion of doctrines heretofore professed by the Whigs of this State, and never renounced.

If we mistake not the signs of the times, the consequence of the passage of the Nebraska bill, will be to create a great Republican party at the North, having for a leading principle, uncompromising resistance to the admission of more Slave States, and uncompromising war upon slavery, wherever it exists, outside of the Constitution; and that Republican party, will be the Whig party, under its present name and organization, with all Baltimore Platforms kicked from under it, and its ranks swollen by multitudes of the haters of Slavery and tyranny, from all other quarters. We believe this movement will be the spontaneous impulse of the great heart of the Whig party, and will infuse new life, vigor and energy into it, and secure the eventual triumph of Freedom over slavery. —[Vermont Statesman.

A Russian Captain in the Navy, who has been here on a tour of inspection, and went out Saturday in the Hermann has some apprehensions of being seized at Southampton as "contraband of war."—N. Y. Paper.

Mr. Clayton, the leading member of the Senate committee on foreign relations, it is said, is of opinion that war with Spain will commence within ninety days.

Four Things to be Done.

First, Resolve upon the Restoration of the Missouri Compromise and the repeal of the Fugitive Slave Law and every other repealable law which favors Slavery. Second, Encourage the emigration of Freemen to the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska, Third, See to it that every Legislature at the North returns true men to the Senate of the United States; and, fourth, Rebuke the forty-four 'Dough Face' traitors, and honor the true men who stood up for Freedom.—Albany Journal.

THE NEXT GOVERNOR.—The Syracuse Journal proposes Hon. E. W. Leavenworth the present Secretary of State, for the nomination for Governor on the Whig Ticket next fall. Speaking of him, the Journal remarks;

"We know of no one who has been named by our competitors for the high office in question, who, in our opinion, would fill the Gubernatorial Chair with more dignity and efficiency, than our popular Secretary of State. His great experience in public life, together with his many distinguished political, legal and social qualifications, commend him to our judgment as peculiarly well fitted for the high and responsible station of Governor of the Empire State.

We recommend this nomination to the favorable consideration of the whig party."

Coming as this does from the home-paper of Mr. Leavenworth, the suggestion is probably intended as one for the serious consideration of the Whigs of the State. Mr. Leavenworth has every qualification for the honorable station of Governor, and there is entire fitness in his aspiring to it. Of the number of candidates mentioned, his having been thus put forward, must stand among the most prominent.—[Troy Whig.

WELL SAID.—In the course of his able and excellent speech on the Nebraska bill, Hon Wm. Cullon, of Tennessee, urged that inasmuch as this measure benefited neither the North nor the South, and no one but the politicians, it should, by good rights be placed upon the private calendar, and the title of it should be amended so as to read. 'A bill to make great men out of small ones, and to sacrifice the public peace and prosperity upon the altar of political ambition.'

☞ A Paris correspondent of the Cincinnatti Gazette, says that a curious experiment was made a few days ago in the basin of the fountain of the Palais Royal, and in the presence of an immense crowd. A glass globe, containing a certain liquid was thrown on the water and then broken with a pole. The liquid immediately spread itself over the surface of the water, and taken fire spontaneously, continued to burn with an intense flame for a period of fifty-six seconds, throwing out a dense smoke.—The basin had the appearance of being all on fire. Three gentlemen, well known to science in Paris, have invented this fluid, after long and patient study, with the design of making it available in the present war, in burning ships and in protecting or attacking fortified places, where there may be a ditch. Thrown by means of a forcing pump on the head of a sap into an intrenchment, or a ditch full of water, or on a breach at the moment of assault, or in a naval combat, this liquid would cause the most terrible ravages. An experiment has since been tried on the river Siene in which instance the fluid continued to burn with a flame sufficiently intense to set fire to the sides of a ship, for more than a minute.—Suppose that a boat laden with this liquid, should be floated into the midst of an enemy's fleet, and should be so managed that it would take fire at the moment of arriving near or in the midst of the fleet, and that the liquid should then be distributed on the surface of the water; the whole fleet would take fire in spite of all the efforts that might be made to prevent it, and they would take fire exactly in the most dangerous place. It is not necessary to enlarge on the nature and importance of the services which this formidable application of Chemical science may render in the continental and naval war which has just commenced.

A deputation from a neighboring state waiting upon Agesilaus, King of Sparta, expressed their astonishment that the city had no walls. 'No walls,' said the King, 'that is your opinion now, but come and breakfast with me to-morrow, and I'll show you the walls of Sparta.' The next day, at the appointed time, the deputation called on Agesilaus, who, taking them out, showed them the Spartan militia drawn up in formidable array, 'There,' said he, 'are the walls of Sparta; each man is a brick.'—Hence rose the saying—a 'perfect brick,'—now so current, especially in the purely classic quarters of our town.

☞ In a small country church the singing had been led for many years by one of the deacons, whose voice and musical powers had been gradually giving out. One evening, on an occasion of interest, the clergyman gave out the hymn, which was sung even worse than usual—the deacon, of course, leading off. Upon its conclusion, the minister arose, and requested Brother——to repeat the hymn, as he could not conscientiously pray after such singing. The deacon very composedly 'pitched' it to another tune, and it was again performed with manifestly little improvement upon the first time. The clergyman said no more, but proceeded with the prayer. He had finished, and taken the book to give out a second hymn, when he was interrupted by Deacon——gravely getting up, and saying, in a voice audible to the whole congregation, 'will Mr.——please make another prayer? It will be impossible for me to sing after such praying as that!'

WASHINGTON, June 3, 1854.

JONATHAN TARBELL, Esq.,

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 25th was duly received. * * * *
I am unable at present to decide in my own mind what is best. The great object now is, to unite the North in their own defence, for the slave power, knowing the ease with which northern politicians and people can be divided, have thrown off the masque and commenced acting on the aggressive. Southern votes are nearly all as much united on every other question against the north as on the Nebraska Bill. It will be so on the Pacific R. Road. They are determined to use the tools now in their power to extend their fortifications around the slave states so as to make Cuba and other Foreign acquisitions counterbalance the great increase of free population and free states. They have always held the power with only a minority, now less than half of the people, and they mean to continue it or divide and have a southern Republic. In short all their acts are to be local and sectional, to aid the rotten boroughs of the south to contervail the natural superiority in numbers of the north. Now, there can be no remedy for this in the world, but by first uniting the north, which can only be done by awakening them to the dangers. * * * *
Even the recovery of Nebraska by the north through a Repeal of the Act abolishing the Missouri Compromise will be perfectly useless without a recovery to be permanent of the national government by the north. If the north can be so awakened and united as to secure state legislatures in all the north, we are safe; not without them. It seems to me, that the time is come for the north to pause and reflect.—Their condition is one of colonial vassalage to a few southern slaveholders. This is all done by means of executive appointments and indirect bribery, which ought to be spread out before the people and the north aught to know, that this patronage is a game that two can play at, and that national reform is indispensable not only to save the country but to save the liberties of the north. I hope to see the whole north so aroused as to take the initiatory steps next year if possible, of amending or renewing the national constitution, basing it on the democracy of numbers and not on rotten boroughs as the present constitution places the Senate. The public talent of New-York would then not be crushed out but have something to do. But enough.
* * * *

Yours truly,

MR. EDITOR:—I am one of those who claim to love their country. I love her institutions, her laws and glorious Constitution, and there is nothing this side of the mortal state of existence, I venerate more than our noble minded ancestors who formed our Constitution and laws and secured to us our institutions.

I deem it sacrilege to attempt to pervert or by sophistry reason away the plain meaning of the humblest efforts of that patriotic band, who for aught they knew, when they signed that immortal document the Declaration of Independence, were signing their death warrant. I would preserve all the works in their pristine purity, and not cast a slur upon their humblest efforts. Wo to those who do. But, I am heartily tired of southern arrogance, and southern dictation, (perhaps I am alone,) and I am perfectly willing they should take care of their negroes and what other property they may have without any more northern interference in any shape. I am also willing and sincerely desirous that they should not only do so, but that they should make their own laws, educate their own children, and adopt such system of government as they may choose, whether monarchy, aristocracy, or democracy—provided they will let us do the same. I am extremely anxious that slave holding states should have a fair chance to live, and to that end as they are complaining continually, that we are infringing upon their rights. I propose that we take measures immediately to separate from them. If we have injured them, as much as they contend let us do so no more, but separate at once, and get rid of the foul stain of slavery. What say you, fellow citizens? Speak out and let us know where you stand. If they want war, let it come and let us have no more boy's play.

VOX.

A Chapter of American History.

Verse, 1. Now it came to pass in the 78th year of the Great Rupublic, that Franklin the Nebraska-ite sat in the chair of state, and stretched his sceptre over all the tribes thereof, whose wings, like a great eagle spread from sea to sea, and from the river to the going down of the sun.

2d. Now this Franklin the Nebraska-ite being of the tribe of 'Granites,' and dwelling among the settlers of the north, was a very cunning man, and withal a great deceiver of the people; leading them to believe that if he were set over them and made ruler in the land, he would do justice unto all the tribes thereof.

3d. Now the division of the tribes over which Franklin reigned was after this sort: all the tribes that had bored the ears of Ethiopians to the doorposts, consigning them to cruel bondage, chose their lot to the south of what is called the Mason and Dixons Line, where the Indian weed, and cane and cotton groweth, and where they found "well watered plains," so they separated from their brethren among the hills, and pitched their tents far to the south in the vallies thereof.

4th. But it came to pass that when the tribes at the southern borders of the land, came to establish laws and usages for themselves, and they became known to their brethren of the northern provinces, that these were greatly grieved; and they said unto them, the thing which you have done Brothers, is not well pleasing in the sight of our God, who has declared that he made of one blood all the nations that dwell on the earth. It is not right that you should scourge and beat, and buy and sell your own flesh of darker skin;—rend the holy marriage vow;—tear the child from the parent, the parent from the child; and cause the endeared relations in life each to weep apart and in secret, brethren, "these things ought not so to be."

5th. But the enslaving tribes heeded not, so that in process of time the contention between the enslaving and the free became exceeding sharp, and a great sanhedrim or council of the nation came together, to commune with each other, and to cause the brethren to be at peace.

6th. Now the tribes at the south coveted much of the goodly lands of the north; not that they desired to spread upon them flocks and herds, but to blacken the fields with Ethiopean slaves.

7th. And it came to pass that as the settlers at the south constantly cried in the ears of the north, give us of your lands for our slaves, which is our property, for the place is too strait for us, that some of their brethren of the north were carried away with their dissimulation, and yielding to their importunity said unto them, drawing a certain line, thus far you may come with your bond-men and bond-women, and no further shall you go. And the tribes of the south answered and said, amen, so be it, and the Lord do so unto us, and more also if we keep not this our solemn covenant, so the writing was sealed, and the land marks set, to be a perpetual sign unto all generations.

8th. But when years had come and gone and many of the wise fathers had been gathered unto their people, behold! there arose rulers of the tribes "that knew not Joseph," who forsook the law of their God and their fathers, and would not walk in the way of wisdom.

9th. Again it came to pass in the 2d year of the reign of Franklin the Nebraska-ite, that a mighty conspirator against the freedom of the north arose, and was unto Franklin as a counsellor and brother, and the name of this subtle enemy and deceiver was Arnold, (appropriate association,) of the tribe of Illinois, and he was one of the counsel of the nation.

10th. Now this same Arnold thought in his heart, whom but me will southern tribes delight to honor, if for them I throw wide open all the gates that now bar them from immense plantations to be formed, which have heretofore been consecrated to freedom by solemn covenant of all the tribes.

11th. So he framed a decree for the great counsel to approve to the effect, that all the ancient land marks, covenants, and solemnly pledged adjustments between the tribes touching the controversy in regard to free lands should be annuled, and slavery have free course.

12th. But when the northern tribes heard thereof their wrath waxed hot, and their fury came up in their face, and they sent messengers to cry in the ears of the counsel, "oh, sell us not to the southern tribes, to be by them made hewers of wood and drawers of water."

13. And it came to pass, also, that when all these things came to the ears of the ministers of the Lord, they assembled together about 3000, and they each blew a trumphet, and cried with a lamentable voice in the ears of Arnold and the counsel, "oh, do not commit this great wickedness, and sin against God." But the Lord hardened the heart of Arnold, so that his wrath was kindled against the Priests of the Lord, so much that he foamed again with rage, and if power had been with him as with a ruler of old, he would have 'Doeg-ized' them all (1st. Samuel 22d chap., 18 verse.)

14. But the counsel would not listen to the voice of wisdom, nor the cry of the people, so the decree was signed by the counsel and Franklin was well pleased with the doings thereof.

15. There came a swift messengar from the south with tidings, that Arnold had built a gallows fifty cubits high, on which to hang all the Mordecai's of all the free tribes. Then behold! the Sovereign People cried aloud with one voice hang him and all his coadjutors thereon.

MR. EDITOR:—I know not whether I may safely aspire to the honor of newspaper correspondent, an honor too great to be thoughtlessly requested, and which I may well doubt my capacity to dignify. Access to a public Journal, in which to record one's favorite ideas, is an invaluable privilege, and for it every one, even the worthiest, should be grateful. With readiness to repay such gratitude, and with a promise to you of my best ability, I present myself an applicant for that honor and privilege.—No one, I think, can have a deeper regard than I for newspapers; and I well understand the power, which they possess over society, for, I as every American citizen is able to do, have traced the strongest influences, of which I have been sensible, to that class of publications. Therefore it will become a matter of serious consideration to me, should I be permitted to remain your correspondent, in what way I can exercise the priviliges of such, with, at least, the slightest interference with the duties and purposes of your paper. I suppose that Editors frequently wonder at the stupidity of those whom they receive into their favors, in not perceiving, that the surest rule is brevity. But that brevity, which is better than volumnious (for all may not be) is a talent, and aside from Editors possessed by few. But undoubtedly it is easily enough cultivated under the direction of Editors, who are unmerciful to contributors, unmerciful to them. I am willing to learn if there be need, Miscellany, you know, is the proper scope for the youthful pen; perhaps because greater profits can be made there, with less capital.

It is from that exhaustless source, Mr. Editor that I purpose to derive occasional articles to place at your disposal. Plain matters of fact ordinarily occuring, all are willing to hear and read, and at the present time few subjects can be presented with which there is so little familiarity, that they cannot excite the interest of very many readers. Toward that upon which we have familiar ideas, the attention of the mind is easily directed. It is true of the knowledge of men generally, that out of the established pursuits of life, it is miscellaneous. Therefore "miscellany" is appropriate to news paper writers.—I cannot refrain from here remarking an invaluable service (do not all perceive it?) of the press. Beyond that particular thing, to which we devote ourselves though life, we cannot readily acquire more than general information, which however does much for the welfare and improvement of society.—But how else could that be diffused than by the labours of the editor? But through such means, even many of the abstruse sciences are so plainly illustrated in various particulars upon practical points, of daily interest, that their most important truths are fast becoming matters of common understanding. And universally no book can teach the practical world so well as a newspaper. Nor is it less true because it is not assiduous in teaching its own importance. Editors will have wrought a crowning benifit, when they have made the public fully sensible, of the extent and manner of their usefulness. Of themselves, men are rather slow to learn anything so great. Schools and newspapers should be equal subjects of regard.

Better perhaps that children should be excluded from the one, as soon as they are able to read, than be deprived of the latter. And communities mindful of this are fortunate beyond all others, nor are editors less so, who happen to be situated among them.

But I will not detain you longer, with such remarks as the above. I am desirous of communicating to you the incidents of a melancholy accident lately occuring in this town. As far as I have been made acquainted, the circumstances are as follows: One day last week Mr. Daniel Crosson resident of that part of Schuyler Falls, known as Morrisonville, in company with his wife, and Mrs. Newcomb his mother-in-law, a widow lady, was going in a double carriage, from his place of residence to a store, not more than a mile distant, kept by J. Y. Winn. At the distance of nearly or prehaps quite a half mile from home, they had arrived at the summit of a 'high hill,' and at that place, the 'fore-board' of the wagon fell out, which naturally enough frightened the horses. They became unmanageable, and ran from the top of the hill at full speed. Before reaching the bottom Mr. Crosson was thrown from the carriage, and severely injured. The others were carried a considerable distance farther, until the horses turned out of the road, and struck the wheel against a tree standing in front of a grocery. Both were thrown out of the carriage, Mrs. Newcomb so violently against the tree, that she was deprived of sense. She remained unconscious, till Sunday evening, when she expired. The other was not dangerously injured, but received severe bruises upon her face. Mrs. Newcomb was far advanced in life, I think over seventy years of age.

She was the widow of Hon. Kinner Newcomb, one of the first settlers of Plattsburgh. By the surviving of those pioneers of civilization, her death will be regarded with emotions, which cannot be felt by their descendants or by the public at large. Especially by those of that class with whom she was personally intimate, will her death be a sourse of deep and peculiar grief. She was one among those, who performed the labour of establishing the new society, in which their posterity were to enjoy the blessings of civilization, and in which they are quietly reposing, with nothing more dear to their minds, than the memories of early life. And farther, the event which terminated the life of Mrs Newcomb, cannot fail to produce melancholy emotions, which do not arise from the usual form in which death appears. She was in that stage of life which seems too sacred, for death to approach violently. Her friends indeed were sensible that her life might not be spared to them through many seasons; but were expecting to see her yield up existence, with that peace and composure, which should belong to the dying hours of old age; and felt assured of that consolation, which the aged leave behind to mourning friends: But in agony and terror she was devoted to death, and yielded to his rudest blow. Reflection here cannot leave the heart unaffected. I trust, Mr. Editor that you would not insist upon whatever apology might be due from me, for the freedom I have taken, in penning the above; therefore I will close this communication, already extended (as you know are all newspaper articles) beyond original design, only saying, should this be favorably received others will occasionally follow.

SCHUYLER FALLS, N. Y June 7th, 1854.

"From the Burlington Free Press."

The Parade of the Invincibles.

The following report of the great event of the season, after the eclipse, has been furnished for our columns, by a disinterested eye witness, and is doubtless correct in every important particular.

Notwithstanding the opposition of the 3,000 Nebraska Clergymen and the manifestos of Senator Little Giant, the annual invigoration of the Invincibles Diabolicals of the U. V. M. came off, or rather on, Wednesday, June 7th, with great eclat, and, strange to say, without the slightest interferrence on the part of Theadore Parker or the Administration. The day was fine, a refreshing shower had fixed everything above and below just about right, and it was the general impression that old Mother Nature had put on her "go to meetin" cloths in expectation of the "coming out" of her best beloved, her orphan children, she being a widow.

They came out, and a more grotesque-looking set of kindred claiming one common parent, never before agitated the central diaphragms of the gaping multitude who thronged the streets and hung delighted upon their steps.

At precisely 77 7-7 minutes past 3 o'clock, P. M. the Hugag was sounded from the top of the College Infirmary, the attendants gathered together, and the garturition commenced.

The course of the ridiculous mus was down College Street, as far as that venerable relic of antiquity, the Academy, when further progress in that direction becoming impossible, an abrupt turn was made towards Pearl St., and the stationary scarecrow was thus avoided and all invidious comparisons prevented. Arrived at Pearl St., a short halt was ordered to enable Dr. OPODILDOCK to pay his respects to his illustrious predecessor, which he did with much unction. The next 'breathin spell' was at the Exchange Hotel where the usual civilities were exchanged and the martial guests treated to abundance of steadfast gazing and an indefinite quantity of amalgamated huzzas.

After this interesting season had been indulged for a proper time there was a forced march to the Seminary during which the "Bys" allowed themselves neither food, drink nor sleep. The whole distance was accomplished in the incredible short space of 9 1 9 minutes. Their arrival was warmly greeted, the whole available force of the institution being up in arms to receive them. A long halt was the consequence; for when was it ever known that any of earth's brave ones ran away from any of earth's fair ones, especially when the fair one wanted the brave one to remain.

The gallant Colonel, the idol of his tribe presented himself for inspection, with his aids, close to the outer barrier of the sacred enclosure, and a series of mutual reconnoisances was carried on doubtless to the mutual satisfacton of all concerned. Following this movement was the eloquent address of that lover of women and women's rights, whose fame is known throughout all the country from Cambridge to Bakersfield, the poet-hero, LONGFELLOW.

Wreathing his countenance with seductive smiles he thus began:

"Most potent, grave and reverened Misses;—lovely and bewitching grenadiers, this is an occasion, such as the gods love, (sensation) I make no doubt but that Mars and Venus are waving their handkerchiefs in honor of us, and perhaps even now, quaffing a bumper to unfading beauty and the extension of arms. (Rush towards the speaker.) The sight of fair women to a gallant soldiery, is like the dew drop to the flowers, (applause from the Invincibles) and after having marched many a weary parasang over the desert, it is wonderfully refreshing to halt at this oasis, (cries of yes, yes, from one party, and hear, hear, from the other,) even though it be under the walls of a fortress, whose legions have spread their conquests as wide as Alexander. (Loud applause.)

It is a proud thing for this army, small detachments of which have so perseveringly beseiged this castle, by moonlight and lovelight, to stand here this day prepared for open war. In such presence I cannot, like Lafayette, speak for 'iberty and freedom. I see this can never be a free people; a thousand tender ties forbid. ("So they do," from the 'bys.')

On the one hand are the women, equipped in the radiant hues of sunset, armed to the eyes with the darts of Cupid, and fortified on all sides liko the old hero, Gen. Jackson, at New Orleans. (Tremendous applause.) On the other, in all the pomp, &c., &c., is our noble Colonel and his refulgent host, clad in golden panoply of their regimentals, brilliant with cobwebs, and artistic in tights,—a perfect army of skeletons, wanting only ribs (Immense applause.) But the hours of this day are rapidly flying," and ere yonder sun goes down we must march across Champlain, take Juniper Island, have the Four Brothers, drive Rouse's Point through the base of Mansfield mountains, and tie up Camels Hump with Canada Line, yet animated by your approving smiles we fear no enemy but absence.

As the poet says, one ford toast before we part: "The Ladies—the poetry of life—in ey the present edition, Lyrics and Heroics now before me, bound in muslin and morocco, become the drawing-room companions of a gallant soldiary." [Deafening applause which continued for some minutes.

The poet ceased and retired, covered with satisfaction, while many moistened eye and many a heaving "buzzum" gave prima facie evidence of the fascination of his person and the melting power of his words.

His place was instantly filled by Dr. Opodeldock, who had been longing for a "shake in" and a chance to display his scientific convictions before the listening fair. The performance of the learned Doctor was excessively creditable, showing that he was nowhere so much at home in the practice of his art as among the "Fems and Sems." The "gallant soldiary" then started for the American, where the customary exercises and evolutions were performed. We have not room for a very minute account thereof, and can therefore give but an outline.

The speech of Col. A. J. BRICK was universally admired. He commenced by saying that the present fandango occurred under circumstances of much mercy, that the Invincibles were generally full of spirit and lust of life, and that the efficiency of the officers and the inefficiency of the privates were universally acknowledged. Upon the affairs of the country the Col. remarked with much discrimination and originality. He said that the Union was in danger from a small aperture in its bottom—that one of the chaps in Congress in consequence of running his face into a bad bill, had run his bill into the ground, and that in this alarming state of things noue but the Invincibles could be effectually relied on to keep niggers and pedlars out of Nebraska.

The Colonel also informed his auditors, with some hesitation as to the propriety of the step that he had been confidentially informed of war in Europe, that his Czarship wanted to rule all the Turkeys, which his Gobblership did not like, and to prevent being stuffed and put in the Museum, he had applied to the British Lion and some other animals for help; and that Johnny Bull with fifteen Frenchmen were to be sent next year to his rescue. He then gave his troops some good advice; exhorted them not to spend their time cum feminis et in vino, nor be unreasonably given to recitations, but to employ the hottest kind of moral suasion on the liquor law and to stand erect by keeping brimful of wind and cold potatoes. He closed by assuring them of his distinguished consideration and in return demanded three cheers.

Dr. Esculapius Obadiah Higreaves Opodildock then elevated his lank form and delivered his annual verterinary report.—He opened by an affecting illusion to his own emaciated condition; ascribing it to his unparalleled exertions in behalf of destitute orphans and fatherless widows.

The prinoipal disease among the Invincibles he stated to be the Blue Fever, the symptoms of which are a sensible enlargement of the ears and elongation of the integuments, accompanied with pain in the muscles of the pinna and stampedius of the tinpanum. This terrible disease also left marks of its ravages upon the person of the patient, such as general average, book worms and such like humors. The Doctor at first treated this disease homœopathically, giving what would create the disease in a healthy person, but he finally adopted a new treatment, to wit; the 2d differential of a grain of common sense dissolved in half a pint of the milk of human kindness. This last medicine he gave to the roommate of the patient and then required the latter to smell his breath. The Doctor stated that in the north western division of the army one Stephen A. Douglas had been taken down with the Presidential Fever. His skill decided the application of various remedies, the most successful being Free Soil and Whig leeches on the pit of his stomach, and a large Uncle Tom's Plaster over his mouth. Many cases of the Rum Palsy had come under the Doctor's notice for which he prescribed with success by placing ½ lb. gun powder in the patient's stomach and then touching it off with a red hot poker. This treatment had cured every patient save one. Horatio N. New York had become so penetrated and saturated with the liquid disease that the gunpowder would not ignite. The Doctor classified the diseases of the year as follows: In the Surgical Department, Jackson Optics, Blue Fever, New Pipes, Rumless Jugs, White hats, Dunning Letters, Hard Times, spruce Gum and Fool all over.

Prevailing Epidemics: All mouth, 10 cases; no wood, no water, brick in the hat, 302 cases; poor debts, calf in the leg, 4 cases;—Nebraska, 1 case; hards and softs, 1 case;—Burns, 1 case; red noses seatless pants and brainless heads, 202 cases; June training, 1 case.

He then gave the invincibles his benediction and a pinch of snuff, and succumbed.

Laudeate Deum Barebones now came forward and pronounced a most excellent discourse, which being in Latin, we cannot at this time lay before our readers.

The roll was then called, and the multitude convulsed at the sound thereof.—among the illustrious names were the following:

Col. Andrew Jackson Brick, Commander; Wellington, Napoleon, Nincumpoop, Aids; Jehosaphat Montazumhurt, Captain; James Jemima Jasper Jenny Hoyburk, 1st Lieut.; John Jeremiah Nebuchadnezzer Zerubbabel Smith, Jr., 3d, Lieut; Death On Pale Brandy; Miss E. Tabitha Philopena Phoebeanna Pettingall, of Ripton; Miss Amazonia Angelica Equestria Franconi, Jeremiah 2 Shortlegs, Stephen Abominable Douglas, Dyonisius Theodosius Scroonwhacker Skinmahorn, Peter I'diwinkle Wag Wag and E. Pluribus One of Of 'Em.

This closed the exercises. The Invincibles departed up the hill to their respective abodes, having met with no accident, caused no disturbance, made everybody laugh, and brought together more people than Burlington has seen before since the days of hard cider and Harrison songs. The annual training of the Students has now become an 'Institution' which cannot be dispensed with. Conducted in a proper manner, as it usually is, it furnishes fun for all who witness it, puts money into the pockets of our tradesmen, and drives away disease and melancholy, by the power of a hearty laugh and the influence of a pleasant remembrance. 'Long may it wave.'

KEESEVILLE:

Saturday Morning, June 17.

The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands,
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands,
The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

Nebraska,—worse and worse.

Qualification of Voters.—By looking over the Nebraska bill, our readers will find it more infamous than has ever been conceived. Among other things, the qualifications of voters are extraordinary and unusual, but have not been dwelt upon.—The act requires, that after the first election the qualifications of voters shall be according to the directions of the territorial legislature, and the acts of Congress, and the voters shall first subscribe to an oath to support the Constitution of the U. S., (this is well enough—but it adds,) "and the provisions of this act," (the Nebraska bill.) What freeman will take such an oath? Who ever heard of such a monstrous provision? No freeman will swear to support the provisions of the Nebraska bill, and thus, the friends of slavery will have the elections in their own hands. And mind you, this is in a proviso. Shades of the Alien and Sedition laws, forbear!—"Popular Sovereignty," avaunt!

NATIONAL PARTIES.—We have always taken pride in the Whig party as a national party and our pride is undiminished There is danger, but no necessity of its becoming sectional. Hatred of slavery and opposition to its extension as not sectional. Washington, and Jefferson, and their compeers deplored slavery and were opposed to its extension. In confining it to its original limits, while we do not encroach upon what the South claim as "rights." We are not sectional, but national. The wildest fanatic in his moments of reason does not pretend that we should go father than to restrict slavery to its original limits.—Whigs should be careful in these wild times to keep these old landmarks in view lest they lose their reconing and get cast away upon an unknown and boundless sea.—More than this, they must not forget the gallant spirits of the South who stand by them in these desperate onslaughts of slavery—Hunt, Culom, Etheridge, Bell, Houston, and others. Taylor was true and there are more like him to bare aloft the Whig banner in the midst of the foe. To be Republican is not sectional.

"113 Guns for Nebraska."

Our readers are aware that in several parts of the country, 113 guns were fired on the passage of the Nebraska bill, 113 being the vote for the bill in the House.—A friend just from Cleveland, Ohio, informs us that the guns fired at that place, were at the sole expense of the Post Master, who purchased the powder, and hired some men to fire the guns; that there were none others in the place in favor of the bill; that the guns attracted no attention, and not a person went near to assist or to cheer, save the five or six who were hired. That the Post Master is a rowdy, and would go in for any measure for a fat office.

Correspondence of the Editor.

[A venerable friend of this county, writes us the following cheering letter.]—ED. REP.

FRIEND TARBELL,— * * * I like your political position as assumed. I also, was born a whig, and shall die one, seeing no grounds for a change in my political organization. Against the system of American slavery, I have ever held uncompromising hostility. Against the encroachments of the south, I have ever presented a front of adamant. But as I have ever believed that the prominent whig doctrine of the north was non-extension of slavery, I have seen no cause for entering the ranks of ultraists, thus thinning the ranks, and weakening the efforts of all true friends of freedom. I am as ever,

Truly yours,

June 2d, 1854.

First Impressions.—People are in the habit of judging of a man by his manners, or dress, and concluding in their own minds his station in society, whether he is high or low bred, and whether a man of mark, and whether in prosperous, or failing circumstances. No criterion is more deceptive, as we had occasion the other day to demonstrate in our own person. An old friend said to us, "well, Col. you wear good clothes, I guess you must be doing well." We were sorry to undeceive him, but a long confidence would not permit us to suffer a false impression to remain on our friend's mind by our silence. So we said, (and its a fact too:) Our hat was a present, our clothes are old ones that we wore last year, and we got trusted for our boots!

Acknowledgments.—To John B. Hollenbeck Esq, of Burlington, Vt., for printed copies of the 'Proceedings of the Grand Encampment of Vt.,' and also "Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Vt.," (Masons,) at their annual communication in Burlington, A. D. 5854, for which he will accept our thanks.—Also to Hon Geo. A. Simmons, for interesting and valuable public documents.—And to Hon. Wm. H. Seward, for same.

THE BOATS.—The Saltus is on the ferry between Plattsburgh and Burlington, commanded by Capt Lot Chamberlain—one of the good fellows the world cant beat.—The Saranac is towing. The line boats touch at Port Kent at night going south, and in the morning going north. We have regretted the absence of some "old familiar faces" from the command of the boats, but having had occasion to be on the lake recently, we are prepared to say, that Capt. Flagg and Capt. Mayo, on the America, and Capt. Foster and Capt. Anderson, on the Canada, with their respective assistants—are combinations that have never been and cannot be excelled.

4TH. OF JULY.

——Pease of Port Henry is preparing to receive the young folks at his house in his ancient cordial manner. The Steamboats and Pease's ferry combine to render that a most accessible point and of course he will have a crowd as of old. All know that whoever goes there may rely on a good time.

——We learn by communication from Essex that the young folks there also are preparing to invite their friends together at C. G. Fancher's Hotel. They always get up fashionable and agreeable parties at Essex. There are those there who spare neither pains nor expense on such occasions to give them eclat.

OF COURSE NOT.—Mr K. Sherman of Moriah, having located himself for a time at Cleveland, Ohio, writes us under date of June 2d, that 'being anxious to know what is going on in Essex County, he has come to the conclusion that his only way to get the general news is to order the Republican sent to him at that place.' Of course, there is no other correct way, and the Republican is sent accordingly.

He further adds, that Cleveland is the prettiest city in the world.'

Mr. Sherman has established a branch for the sale of Iron ore from Moriah under the firm of Sherman and Witherbees.—His office is with H. N. Gates, foot of Superior St. Boards at the Weddell House. But the best of it is the following:

"P. S I am making money." Good.

HON. GEO. A. SIMMONS,—is at home on a short visit, and will remain until telegraphed to return. Nothing has been done in Congress since the Nebraska outrage, and nothing is likely to be done for the remainder of the session. Mr. Simmons is looking well and feeling well, and is happy to receive calls from his constituents.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.—The Turks are moving upon the Russians at Silistria, with 90,000 men, and news of a great battle may be looked for at no distant day.

Hon Thomas H. Bond, LADY, daughter and son, of Oswego, left in the steamship Atlantic for Liverpool, on Saturday.—City Paper.

Where is the "local" of the Albany Journal, that he does not rebuke Mr. Bond for taking his "Lady" in company with his daughter too? Such "carryings on" will never do.

CROWN POINT, June 7, 1854.

MR. EDITOR;—A Democrat of Crown-point, N. Y., of the Old School—wants to know if Gov. Seymour will veto the "Nebraska bill" Please give information through your paper, for nobody knows here whether it would be constitutional or not for him to do so.

Answer.—He is the man probably who during the extreme depression in business during the years '49, '50, '51, and '52 thought it was owing to the operations of the Old Bank of the U. S. (a fact,) and who still votes regularly for Jackson. We hope this information will be satisfactory, and sufficiently elucidate the quere of our correspondent.—[Ed Rep.

[Local Correspondence.]

CROWN POINT, June 12, 1854.

MR. EDITOR,—When speaking of 'monster eggs' I wish you would state facts definitely. "A fraction less," is very indefinite The presumption is that "Mr Barnes's" egg weighed 1-8 of a lb. Don't be afraid to state definitely the exact size and weight of your "monster eggs," and certainly until you do, the laurels of Crownpoint are in no danger of being lost. I think the egg was wanting, as there would have been no occasion of such indefinite statements.

CROWNPOINT, June 12, 1854.

Silas Buckman Esq., of Crownpoint, has a "monster egg" laid by a native hen owned by him, measuring longest way, 8 1 2 inches, shortest way 6 3-4, weighing 5 1-2 oz. Affidavit of the above if required.—There Mr. Editor "try again." and please to take notice, that 8 1 2 inches above mentioned, is a "fraction less" than nine inches. The laurels are made fast.

TRUTH.—Every word of it. Cut it out and learn it by heart,

We should make it a principle to extend the hand of friendship to every man who discharges faithfully his duties, and maintains good order—who manifests a deep interest in the welfare of general society—whose department is upright, and whose mind is intelligent—without stopping to ascertain whether he swings a hammer or draws a thread. There is nothing so distant from all natural claim as the reluctant the backward sympathy, the forced smile, the checked conversation, the hesitating compliance, the well off are apt to manifest to those a little lower down, with whom in the comparison of intellect and prinoiples of virtue, they frequently sink into insignificance.

Sir James Graham had stated in Parliament, that the French and English squadrons were by this time in the Gulf of Finland; that the united force amounted to 28 sail of the line, exclusive of frigates and steamers, and that we should probably soon hear of something decisive.

He also announced the receipt of advices from Sir. Charles Napier, who was off the Bay of Hango, at the entrance of the Gulf of Finland.

Sir Charles gave an account of a brilliant affair in which the steamer Arogant and the steamer Hecla were engaged, which the Admiral pronounced to be worthy of the best days of British Naval warfare.

THE LAST RAIL DOWN.—The Cincinnati papers state that the last rail connecting that city with Louisville, was laid by Messrs. Linsey, Wells & Co., of the Ohio and Mississippi railroad, on Monday evening. This is an event of far-reaching importance. The iron bridal of Cincinnati and Louisville must be remembered as a marked era in the history of the cities, and it should be celebrated. Obituary.

The Late LATHROP P. GARDNER.—The language of eulogy (not always discriminate,) is so commonly applied to the dead that it has been captiously remarked, "no bad men die." In speaking however of the person whose name heads this article the writer feels assured that those who have known Mr. Gardiner best, his earliest and his latest friends, will most cordially respond to the truth of the words of praise which it is just to use in referring to his history and character. In the village where he passed his boyhood his remains as he hoped have been permitted (after a winters struggle with disease in a strange land,) to rest; and there it is needless to speak of the kindly traits of character which had attached to him all classes of people. To his subsequent career it is proper to refer as a model and example to younger men for imitation. Removing about the time of his majority from Keeseville to Troy he there entered an established mercantile House as clerk, wherein he was in a few years admitted a partner, and with which under varied auspices he was connected until his impaired health about a year ago compelled him to withdraw from active business During the last ten years he (as resident partner) has made his home in this city. On his return from the south in April last his wasted form showed too plainly the triumph of disease to leave his friends any hope of his recovery. The writer whose sad pleasure it was to be often with him will never forget the high heroism with which he uncomplainingly and calmly awaited the great event which he knew was near at hand.

As a business man Mr. Gardiner was distinguished for great industry and prudence, a clear judgment and the strictest integrity. However great the excitement or temptations of traffic, or whatever the allurements held out by promises of gain, he will be remembered by all who have had business relations with him as an eminently honest and honorable merchant. In prosperity he never forgot his younger and less fortunate friends, many of whom like the writer will always gratefully attribute a measure of such success as may have attended them to his counsel and encouragement.

Mr. Gardiner was fortunate in the possession of very attractive social qualities which won upon the regard of every acquaintance. Intelligent, of pleasing address, unassuming in his manners, warm and genial in companionship, considerate and respectful to the feelings and opinions of others, he made no enemies, he lost no friends.

Of the religious belief or the "inner life" of any man (living or dead) the writer would not presume to judge, but he deems it proper in closing this brief notice of his friend to add that if "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep oneself unspotted from the world," (and who shall gainsay authority above all human creeds,) then was Mr. Gardiner a good man and a christian.

He lived a pure life; in early manhood he has "gone the way whence he shall not return."

The writer could not permit his death to pass without thus gathering together a few of the pleasant memories that will always cluster around his name and laying them as a sincere tribute of friendship upon his grave. J. C. C R.

PROPOSALS FOR THE PUBLIC PRINTING.—Pursuant to the provisions of an act entitled "An Act to Provide for the Public Printing," passed March 5 1846; and an act entitled "An Act concerning the laws journals, and documents of the Legislature," passed May 12, 1847 the undersigned hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 12th day of June next, at no other time, for executing the printing for the Senate and the Assembly and for the Comptroller, Secretary of State, Surveyor General and Canal Commissioners, Attorney-General, State Engineer and Surveyor, Commissioners of the Land Office, and Canal Fund the Bank Department, and all other printing for any and every of the state Offices for the term of two years.

Separate bids will be received for the Senate, Assembly, or public offices or for the printing of either of the said offices; the whole to be performed in the same style and execution as to type and paper, as that published on the 5th of March 1846.

For the Senate and Assembly Journals the proposals should state the price for composition, press work, paper, pressing, folding, gathering and stitching each signature or folio of sixteen pages of royal octavo pages, 50 copies, and also for any additional number that may be required—the price to be exclusive of the paper furnished by the State as mentioned in the act of 1846, weighing not less than 25 lbs. to each ream of 17½ by 23½ inches, and the work in all respects to be executed to the same manner as the previous session of the bills to be numbered, and with sufficient space between them for interlining words.

For the Senate and Assembly Documents the proposals should state the price for composition, press-work, paper, pressing, folding, gathering and stitching each signature or folio, sixteen pages, 900 copies; and the rules for each additional 1,000 copies for any additional number that may be required. The price of advertisements, not to exceed the usual rates, to be specified per square of 12 lines, and each insertion; but should it be necessary to put it in smaller type or in whatis termed table or full and figure work, the size of the page must not be reduced nor will increased expectation be allowed the case. When it is necessary to put the matter in tables, the work will be estimated in the same manner as though it were printed in pages of the usual width, allowing 16 pages for a double signature, for each sheet of 32 by 21 inches, and the allowance thus made is to include every charge. The paper to be used for the Legislative Documents and Journals must weigh at least 24 lbs to the ream of 19 by 24 inches, and the quality must be equal to the best used in printing the Senate Documents in 1846.

Blank forms for the Legislative printing will be furnished by the secretary of State or Comptroller, and bidders will be required to have their bids conform to the printed schedule or the bids will not be recognized. For the purpose of making a comparison of bids, the Senate documents of 1849 will be used as a standard.

Samples of the Blanks and other printed work required for the public offices and the canals may be seen at the Canal Department, and the other Departments; and the proposals may be made in book or pamphlet form for any of the State offices, or for circulars on cap or post paper. The proposals should state the price for 1,000 ems for composition, corresponding the estimate to the printed forms and separately the price for paper and press work, folding and stitching, for 100 copies and the rate per hundred for each additional hundred required.

BINDING JOURNALS, BILLS, DOCUMENTS, AND STATUTE LAWS.

Sealed proposals will also be received until the second day and hour for the bell binding of twelve copies of the Senate and Assembly bills and forty one copies of the journals, and the annual statute laws, and for binding in boards with leather back and corners the residue of the journals and documents of the two houses; also for the binding of eighteen hundred copies of the Session Laws; as required by Sec. 6 of chapter 231, page 477 of Vol. 1 of the laws of 1847.

Sealed documents will be kept in the office of the Comptroller, and specimens of the binding required, under the above proposals, and should the bids be made in a manner inferior to the patterns, the Comptroller and Secretary reserve to themselves the right to make such deductions as they may deem just and reasonable.

To every proposal or bid or for the performance of all or any portion of the printing or binding above specified, and for one proposal or bid will be received from any person, firm or party in the case for the performance of the same work, there must be annexed a guaranty, subscribed by a guarantor sufficient in ability, that the person or persons making such bid will if the contract be awarded to him or them enter into a certificate of the Secretary of State, Comptroller, Attorney General, Treasurer, State Engineer and Surveyor of the city of Lewis county, to the guaranty proposed, that the guarantor is a man of property and able to make good the guaranty.

Each proposal or will be sealed up, with the guaranty and directed on the out side "Proposals for Assembly printing," or for any other portion of the printing or binding embraced in this notice, as the case may be; and when it is sealed up and directed, the proposition should be enclosed in a seperate envelope, and directed to the undersigned, or either of them Albany, May 10, 1854.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease contracted by promiseuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exhlusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords no pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D

From A Woodward, M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M. D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff, and too little presumption to impose, he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and, ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY has recently been Made by Dr Curtis, of this city, in the treatment of Consumption, Asthma, and all diseases of the lungs. We refer to "Dr. Curtis's Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup." With this new method Dr. C. has restored many afflicted ones to perfect health; as an evidence of which he has innumerable certificates. Speaking of the treatment a physician remarks:—It is evident that inhaling—or gently breathing an agreeable, healing Vapor, the medicinal properties must come in direct contact with the whole of the aerial cavity of the lungs, and thus escape the many and varied changes produced upon them when introduced into the stomach and subjected to the process of digestion. The Hygeana is for sale at all the druggists throughout the country. (From the New York Dutchman of January 14th.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs an Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public, as an efficious remedy it is also known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to safety. In cases as Impotency, Hoemorrhages, Disordered Sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluror Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

DEBILITY

TO FEMALES.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Long suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies would exist, where they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to, are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN,

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excess have brought on themselves Premature impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and Shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the sensital passions, occasioning the necessity of renouncing the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

It is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append long list of Recommendations, Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL,"

is put up in 8 oz. Pannel Bottles, and is easily recognized by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle, (to counterfeit which is forgery,) as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

☞Sold for $2 per Bottle; Six for $9; $16 per dozen

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

AFFLICTED READ.

PHILADELPHIA MEDICAL HOUSE—Established 20 years ago by Dr. KINKELIN, corner of Third and Union sts. between Spruce and Pine, Philadelphia, Pa.

INVALIDS

Are apprised that Dr. Kinkelin continues his practice to a particular branch of medicine, which engages his undivided attention. He cautions the unfortunate against the abuse of mercury; thousands are annually mercurialized out of life. Recent affections are promptly extinguished.

TWENTY YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

In the treatment of a class of diseases hitherto neglected and imperfectly understood, has enabled Dr. KINKELIN, [Author of a work on Self Preservation.] to prove that nine-tenths of the causes of nervous debility, local and constitutional weakness, mental and physical suffering, are traceable to certain habits, forming the most secret yet deadly and fatal springs of domestic misery and premature mortality.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

There is an evil habit sometimes indulged in by boys, in solitude, often growing up with them to manhood, and which, if not reformed in due time, not only begets serious obstacles to matrimonial happiness, but gives rise to a series of protracted insidious, and devastating affections.—Few of those who give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequences, until they find the nervous system shattered, feel strange and unaccountable feelings, and vague fears in the mind.

The unfortunate thus affected becomes feeble, is unable to labor with accustomed vigor, or to apply his mind to study: his step is tardy and weak, he is dull, irresolute, and engages in his sport with less energy than usual.

If he emancipate him self before the practice has done its work, and enter matrimony his marriage is unfruitful and his sense tells him that this is caused by his early follies. These are considerations which should awaken the attention of those similarly situated.

MARRIAGE

Requires the fulfilment of several conditions, in order that it may be really the cause of mutual happiness. Could the veil which covers the origin of domestic wretchedness be raised, and its true source in every instance disclosed—in how many could it be traced to physical disqualifications and their attendant disappointments. Apply then while it is yet time, in order to have your unstrung and relaxed organization rebraced, revivified and strengthened.

REMEMBER.

He who places himself under Dr. Kinkelin's treatment may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and rely upon the assurance, that the secrets of Dr. K's. practice will never be disclosed.

Young man—let no false modesty deter you from making your case known to one who, from education and respectability, can certainly befriend you.

Too many think they will conceal the secret in their own hearts, and cure themselves. Alas! how often is this a fatal delusion, and how many a promising young man, who might have been an ornament to society, has faded from the earth.

Strictures of the urethra are rapidly removed by the application of a new therapeutical agent, used only by Dr. K. Weakness and constitutional debility promptly cured, and full vigor restored.

Laws of New York—By Authority.

[Every law, unless a different time shall be prescribed therein, shall commence and take effect throughout the State, on and not before the twentieth day after the day of its final passage, as certified by the Secretary of State. Sec. 12, title 4, chap. 7, part 1, Revised Statutes.]

[Every Law so published in the State Paper, may be read in evidence from the paper in which it shall be contained, in all courts of Justice in this State, and in all proceedings before any officer, body or board, in which it shall be thought necessary to refer thereto, until three months after the close of the session in which it became a law, Sec. 8, title 7, chap. 8, part 1, Revised Statutes, and laws of 1845, chap. 208.]

CHAPTER 87.

An Act in relation to plank roads and turnpike roads. Passed March 28, 1854.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows;

Section 1. The directors of any plank road company or turnpike company, formed under the act passed May 7, 1847, entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation of companies to construct plank roads and for companies to construct turnpike roads," and every plank road company or turnpike company incorporated under or by any laws of this State, are hereby authorized to abandon the whole or any part of their plank road or turnpike road, at either or both ends thereof, whenever the stockholders holding two-thirds of the stock in said road company shall consent to the same by a written declaration of the surrender of such part or parts of said road, which said declaration shall be attested by their common seal, and acknowledged by the president and secretary of said company before an officer empowered to take the acknowledgments of deeds. Such declaration and consent shall be filed and recorded in the clerk's office of the county in which the part or parts of said road abandoned shall be situated, and thereupon the plank or turnpike road, or the portion thereof so surrendered, shall cease to be the road or property of the company, and revert and belong to the several towns through which it was constructed, and the said company shall be no longer bound to maintain it or be liable to be assessed thereon, or be permitted to collect tolls for traveling over the same, from the time of recording said declaration of surrender and consent, without impairing the right of said company to take toll on the remaining part of their plank road or turnpike road at the rate prescribed in its charter, or by the laws of this State relating to any such company.

§ 2. Any plank road or turnpike company within this State, which shall have once laid their road with plank, may hereafter relay the same, or any part thereof, with broken stone, gravel, shell or other hard materials, whereby they keep a good and substantial road, but such plank road company shall collect only turnpike tolls on such part of their road as is constructed with broken stones, gravel, shell or other hard materials.

§ 3. Section thirty-five and thirty-six of the before mentioned act, passed May, 7, 1847, is hereby amended by striking out, after the word 'roads' in the third line of said section, 'but not within three miles of each other.'

§ 4. Toll-houses and other fixtures and all property belonging to any plank road company, shall be exempt from assessment or taxation for any purpose whatever, but no company shall be exempt whose net annual income, over and above all expenses of repairs and collection of toll, is equal to 5 per cent on the original cost of the road.

§ 5. The directors of any plank road company may put up and maintain, at conspicuous places at each end of any bridge on their road, the length of whose span is not less than twenty-five feet, a notice with the following words in large characters: 'One dollar fine for riding or driving over this bridge faster than a walk.'

Whoever shall ride or drive faster than a walk over any bridge upon which such notice shall have been placed and shall then be, shall forfeit for every offence the sum of one dollar.

§ 6. Every company formed or organised under the act entitled 'An act for the incorporation of companies to construct plank roads, and of companies to construct turnpike roads,' passed May 7, 1847, and the several acts amending the same, shall be deemed to be a valid corporatin, although such company may not have complied with the requirement of such acts in the formation and organization of such company, and preparatory to the construction of its road, and no act or omission on the part of any such company of its stockholders or officers, shall work a forfeiture of its corporate powers or franchises, unless the same was wilful and malicious; but this section shall not affect or impair any right of action heretofore accrued.

§ 7. The provisions of this act shall not apply to any plank or turnpike road located in either of the counties of Chenango, Chemung and Steuben.

§ 8. This act shall take effect immediately.

CHAPTER 197.

An Act to designate a state paper. Passed April 11, 1854.

The People of the State of New York, represented in senate and Assembly, do enact as follows.—

§ 1. The Secretary of State, Comptroller and Treasurer shall enter into contract with the publisher or publishers of a daily newspaper published in the city of Albany, in which shall hereafter be published all legal and other notices and all advertisements now required by law to be published in the state paper by any law of this state, or which may be required hereafter to be published in such paper, at prices not exceeding the rates mentioned in the third section of this act, which paper shall be designated as 'The State Paper;' but this act shall not affect any notice or advertisement required by law to be published in the state paper the publication of which shall have been commenced prior to the passage of this act.

§ 2. Within five days after such contract shall have been made, the proprietors of the paper designated as the state paper provided shall execute a bond to the people of the state of New York, with good and sufficient sureties, to be approved by the comptroller of the state, in the penal sum of five thousand dollars, for the faithful performance of such printing and publishing; and the publication of such notices in the paper herein designated shall have the same effect when given in evidence as has heretofore been given by law to notices published in the state paper.

§ 3. For the publication of all such notices and advertisements the proprietors of the paper designated by this act, as the State paper, shall be allowed to charge and collect for the first insertion thirty cents for every folio of one hundred words, and for each subsequent insertion twenty cents for every such folio, and no more: Provided, however, that no charge shall be made for the insertion of any notices required to be published in proceedings before surrogates, where the surrogate shall certify that the property of the deceased is less than five thousand dollars in value.

§ 4. Section four of chapter twenty-four of the laws of eighteen hundred and forty-six, and so much of all laws as conflict with the provisions of this act, are hereby repealed.

§ 5. This act shall take effect on the third day of May next.

CHAPTER 285.

An act to authorize others than Overseers of the Poor to prosecute for violations of the Excise Laws. Passed April 15, 1854.

The People of the State of New-York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:—

§ 1. In case the Overseers of the Poor shall neglect for ten days to prosecute for any penalty provided by title nine, part first, chapter twenty, of the Revised Statutes, any other person, being a resident of the same county, may prosecute therefor in the name of such officer or otherwise, by giving security to the court or officer before whom he prosecutes, for the payment of all costs if he shall fail to recover judgment; and in such case, if prosecuted to effect, the penalty shall be collected and applied as now provided by law.

§ 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

CHAPTER. 2.

An Act for the incorporation of companies formed to navigate the waters of Lake George by steamboats. Passed January 14, 1851.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Any seven or more persons, who may desire to form a company for the purpose of building for their own use, equipping, furnishing, fitting, purchasing, chartering, navigating and owning vessels to be propelled solely or partially by the power and aid of steam, or other expansive fluid or motive power, to be used in all lawful commerce and navigation upon the waters of Lake George, and for the transportation of passengers, freights and mails, may organize and become and be a body politic and corporate, in fact and in name, by complying with and becoming subject to all the provisions of an act entitled 'An act for the incorporation of companies formed to navigate the ocean by steamships,' passed April 12, 1852.

§ 2. All the provisions of the aforesaid act, entitled 'An act for the incorporation of companies formed to navigate the ocean by steamships," passed April 12, 1852. are hereby declared to be applicable and extended to companies formed, or to be formed, under the provisions of this act.

§ 3. The capital stock of any company formed under the provisions of this act shall not be less than twenty thousand dollars nor more than two hundred thousand dollars, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

§ 5. This act shall take effect immediately.

State of New York, Secretary's Office. } I have compared the preceding with the original laws on file in this office, and do certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom of the whole of the said original.

ELIAS LEAVENWORTH,
Secretary of State.

THE DRUNKARDS CLOAK.—In the time of Oliver Cromwell, the magistrates in the north of England punished drunkards by making them carry what is called "The Drunkard's Cloak."—This was a large barrel, with one head out, and a hole in the other, through which the offender was made to put his head, while his hands were drawn through two small holes, one on each side. With this he was compelled to march along the public streets,

What a strange sight it would be were all the drunkards now-a-days compelled to march about wearing barrels for cloaks.

STRANGE PROCEEDINGS.—We find in our Chautauque County exchanges a somewhat novel case, which is contained in a statement of Mr. Albert H. Camp, an old citizen and well known merchant residing at Forestville, in that County. It appears that on the 8th of October, 1851, Mr. Camp received a letter from this City crouched in the following words:

"NEW-YORK, Oct., 6, 1851.

"MR. A. H. CAMP—Sir: I hold your note for $325, due next month, which I received from Mr. L. Tuffs. I am in need of the money, and if you could pay the whole or part of it this month it would be an accommodation to me. When you come in town please call on me at No. 50 Bever-st. Yours respectfully,

"E. L. BOLLES."

Mr. Camp states that he was ignorant of the existence of any note of this sort, (and those who know him will have no hesitation in giving entire credence to his assertion,) and suspecting it to be a forgery, he did not deem it prudent to allow the holder of the note to see his signature.—He accordingly directed his partner in business to make the annexed reply to the letter:

"FORESTVILLE, Oct. 10, 1851.

"Mr. E. L. BOLLES—Sir: Yours of the 6th inst., to my partner, Mr. A H. Camp, was duly received. In his absence I have charge of his affairs, and as he said nothing to me about the note, I presume he forgot to mention it, or expected to return before he had any paper falling due. Please give me a copy of the note at once, and I will inform him immediately, and follow his instructions. 'Yours respectfully,

WM COLVILL.'

To this letter Mr. Bolles never replied, but about the 20th of the same month, Mr Camp received a letter from Lucian Tuffs, running as follows:

"A. H. CAMP, Esq.; Dear Sir: I want to address you a few lines of a strictly confidential character. I have been on the point of so doing for several days, but wanting to see a person in reference to it, that it was out of my power to do so, and as you have been written to, and the letter answered by Mr. Colville, I thought best to advise you in reference to the matter.—Mr. E. L. Bolles holds in his hands a note of A H. Camp, for $300 and a trifle over, dated Nov. 1850, for one year payable to the drawer's order. This note is drawn by Arthur Henry Camp, a racing gentleman of this city; it is signed A. H. Camp. I was used in the matter to assist him to raise about $150. I stated the note good as there were collaterals left in my hands to make it safe. I raised the money on my check, and this note was left as collateral. I stated the note was good for the sum, and you are supposed by Mr. Bolles, to be the drawer and indorser. Now this is simply to say to you, that I do not wish you to say anything or to write anything, until you confer with me, and I will explain to you the circumstances to your satisfaction, and I will also say, that the note, or the loan upon it, will be paid, and you will not be troubled about it. I have thought best to say this much, and still request you to consider this strictly confidential. If you desire to know more I will inform you.

Truly yours,

L. TUFFS.

This letter Mr. Camp did not reply to; but on the 27th January, 1853, he was sued by Messrs. Baxter & Sons, merchants in this city, on a note of which the following is a copy:

"$297,46. "NEW YORK, Sept. 13, 1851

"One day after date, I promise to pay to the order of Lucian Tuffs, Two hundred and sixty-seven 46 100 dollars, value received, at the Commercial Bank of Albany.

'A. H. CAMP.

["Indorsed Lucian Tuffs."]

Mr. Camp states this was the first intimation he had that there were such a note in existence. He immediately informed his counsel that it was a forgery, and requested him to proceed immediately to New York, to see to the matter, and soon after followed himself. The note was traced to Lucian Tuffs. An answer was put into the complaint, the defendant denying the making of the note; but when it was served on the plaintiff's attorney, that gentleman stated the note was paid. Mr. Camp wished the Attorney to inform him who had paid it. The Attorney replied that the man who paid it requested him not to tell. The Attorney finally admitted that the note had been taken up by Mr Tuffs, who alleged that Mr. Camp had furnished the money. While in the office of the lawyer, Mr Camp learned that there was another note signed A. H. Camp in the hands of A. Boyer, Jr., a merchant in this City, of which the following is a copy:

"$218 NEW YORK, June 8, 1852.

"One year after date, I promise to pay to the order of Lucian Tuffs, two hundred and eighteen dollars, value received at Commercial Bank, Albany,

[Indorsed Lucien Tuffs.] A. H. CAMP

Accompanying this note, was the following certificate:

"This is to certify that a note of A. H. Camp, of Forestville, dated June 8, '52, to one year payable to the order of L. Tuffs, is a genuine business note, and given for a valuable consideration.

LUCIAN TUFFS."

"New-York, Sept 11, '52.

Mr. Camp states that he ascertained this note was passed to Mr. Boyer by Mr Tuffs. He then called on Mr. Blunt, District Attorney of the City of New York, and informed him of these notes. That gentleman directed him to go to one of the Police Justices, and gave him a letter to Justice Osborne, on whom he immediately called and made complaint against Tuffs, charging him with having forged these notes. Witnesses were subpœned, affidavits taken, and a warrant issued against Tuffs, who was arrested and brought before Justice Osborne. Tuffs put in counter affidavits, made by himself and others, but he was held to bail, and soon after indicted on the Bolles note and on the Boyer note, they being the two that could be produced to the Grand Jury. The trial of the indictment was put off by Tuffs from term to term for about a year, and in February last his trial came on upon the Bolles note.—Mr. Bolles testified that Tuffs told him Mr. Camp's name in full, and stated that he was a merchant residing in Forestville, and that the note grew out of some business in relation to some mill or distillery property in Westfield. Mr. Tuffs then called upon the stand as witnesses his brother and J W. Porter, who swore that he (Camp) gave Lucian Tuffs permission and authority to sign his name to notes for the purpose of raising money in the City, and he was acquitted by the jury.

In the fore part of April. 1853, and after the indictments were procured, Mr. Camp states that he ascertained that Richard S. Williams & Co, merchants in this City, held a note, of which the following is a copy:

"$235 54 ALBANY, Nov. 24, 1852.

"Five months after date, I promise to pay to the order of Lucian Tuffs, at the Commercial Bank, two hundred and thirty-five 54-100 dollars. Value received.

A. H. CAMP."

Mr. Camp denies the making of this note which he learns was received from Mr. Tuffs, and has so informed Messrs. Williams & Co, He also states that he never authorized Lucian Tuffs, or any other person, to use his name as maker or indorser of those or any notes whatever.

Thus matters stand at present. The statements are sworn to, from which it is evident there has been hard swearing somewhere. Where it is we do not undertake to decide but it must be admitted the case has some extraordinary features. It looks as though unwarranted liberties had been taken with name of Mr. Camp. That is certainly his opinion, and it is no doubt very honestly entertained, whatever the real merits of the case may be.

It should, perhaps, be added, that Mr Camp was arrested in May last on a charge of perjury in swearing before Justice Osborne, and before the Court of Sessions, that he did not give Tuffs authority to sign his name to the notes. The warrant for the arrest of Mr. Camp was issued by Justice Steuart of this city, upon the affidavits of Lucian Tuffs, John Tuffs, and J. W. Porter. An examination of the matter was had before the Justice, and when the testimony on the part of the prosecution closed Mr. Camp was at once acquitted.—[Tribune.

Alleged Murder.

A man by the name of Patrick Sweny, an Irishman, was shot dead by Cornelius Austin, of Clinton in this County, on Tuesday the 13th instant, under the following circumstances: A dispute had for some time existed between Austin and Sweny, about the possession of the house and lot which Austin occupied. On the day which the fatal affair occurred, Austin with his wife left for the 'Summit' depot, barring the doors and windows of the house, and also leaving his children within it. While at the Summit, he learned that Sweny had been to his house and removed all the furniture, and put his children out of doors Whereupon Austin procured a gun and shot, and returned to his residence and entered the house. Sweny learned that Austin had retaken possession of the house, went to his own residence, and got an axe and proceeded directly to Austin's house, and not being able to enter the doors or windows, climed up to the gable end. Having knocked off some boards he entered the chamber and had just removed a floor plank and got ready to descend, when Austin fired, and the contents of the gun, loaded with shot, were lodged in the side of the head of the deceased. Sweny is said to be a passionate man and was warned by Austin's wife not to enter the house.

An inquest was held on the body of the deceased and the jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts above stated.

Austin is now in jail, awaiting the action of the legal tribunals He is nearly 57 years of age, is very sociable, and is not backward about relating all the particulars of the affair.—[Clinton Co., Whig.

NEW WAY TO MAKE BUTTER.—"Miss Emily," a rustic lass of the Hoosier State, who has had for several years past the entire control of the milk department in her father's family, confesses that she was indebted to it for the following process of making butter surely and speedily, said to be the Russian method, and most excellent one, too, as her experience proves. She says: "Before I go to milk, I put a kettle, say one-third full of water, and large enough to let the milk pail into it, on the stove, where it will get boiling hot by the time I come in with the milk. I then strain the milk into another vessel, and wash the pail, (which should always be of tin,) then pour the milk back into the pail, and set it into the kettle of boiling water, till the milk becomes scalding hot, taking care not to let it boil, then pour it into crocks or pans, and set it away in the cellar for the cream to rise in the usual way. Cream produced in this way will seldom require twenty minutes to churn, while, by the common practice, the poor dairy maid may often churn for hours, and then, perhaps, have to throw all away, as I did on two occasions, before I became acquainted with the Russian plan, the essential features of which I have adopted in my present mode, as given above. This method is applicable to all seasons, and will answer in summer as well as in winter."

Fixed Facts in Agriculture.

1. All lands on which clover or the grasses are grown must either have lime in them naturally, or that mineral must be artificially supplied. It matters but little whether it be supplied in the form of stone lime, oyster lime, or marl.

2. All permanent improvement of lands must look to lime as its basis.

3. Lands which have been long in culture will be benefitted by application of phosphate of lime, and it is unimportant whether the deficiency be supplied in the form of bone dust, guano, native phosphate of lime, composts of flesh, ashes, or that of oyster shell lime or marl; if the land needs it, lime also.

4. No lands can be preserved in a high state of fertility unless clover or the grasses are cultivated in the course of rotation.

5. Mould is indispensible in every soil, and a healthy supply can alone be preserved through the cultivation of clover and the grasses, the turning in of green crops, or by the application of composts rich in the elements of mould.

6. All highly concentrated animal manures are increased in value, and their benefits prolonged by admixture with plaster, salt, or pulverized charcoal.

7. Deep ploughing greatly improves the productive powers of every variety of soil that is not wet.

8. Subsoiling sound land—that is, land that is not wet, is eminently conducive to increased production.

9. All wet land should be drained.

10. All grain crops should be harvested before the grain is thoroughly ripe.

11. Clover, as well as the grasses intended for hay, should be mowed when in full bloom.

12. Sandy lands can be most effectually improved by clay. When such lands require liming or marling, the lime or marl is most beneficially applied when made into a compost with clay. In slacking lime, salt brine is better than water.

13. The chopping or grinding of grain to be fed to stock, operates as a saving of at least 25 per cent.

14. Draining of wet lands and marshes adds to their value, by making them produce more, and by improving the health of neighborhoods.

15. To manure or lime wet lands, is to throw manure, lime, and labor away.

16. Shallow ploughing operates to impoverish the soil, while it decreases production.

17. By stabling and shedding stock through the winter, a saving of one fourth food may be effected—that is, one-fourth less food will answer, than when the stock may be exposed to the inclemency of the weather.

18. A bushel of plaster per acre, sown broadcast over clover, will add 100 per cent. to its produce.

19. Periodical applications of ashes tend to keep up the integrity of soils, by supplying most, if not all the organic substances.

20. Thorough preparation of land is absolutely necessary to the successful and luxuriant growth of the crops.

21. Abundant crops cannot be grown for a succession of years, unless care be taken to provide an equivalent for the substances carried off the land in the products grown thereon.

22. To preserve meadows in their productiveness, it is necessary to harrow them every second Autumn, apply top-dressing and roll them up.

23. All stiff clays are benefitted by Fall and Winter plowings, but should never be ploughed when wet. If at such ploughings the furrow be materially deepened, lime, marl or ashes should be applied.

24. Young stock should be moderately fed with grain in winter, and receive generous supplies of long provender, it being essential to keep them in a fair condition, in order that the formation of muscle bones, &c., may be encouraged and continuously carried on.

25. Milch cows, in Winter, should be kept in dry, moderately warm, but well ventilated quarters, fed and watered three times a day, salted twice or three times per week, have clean beds, be curried daily, and in addition to their long provender, should receive succulent food morning and night.

26. Full complement of tools and implements of husbandry are intimately connected with the success of the husbandman.

27. Capital is not only essential to agricultural success, but can be as properly used in farming as in any other occupation.

28. Punctuality in engagements is necessary to an agriculturalist as it is to a merchant.

29. Every husbandman should carefully read and digest matters connected with his business; his success being as dependant upon a full knowledge of its principles and details as is that of the lawyer or physician with a knowledge of the science of law or physic.

30. Wheat, rye, oats, and barley, should never follow each other in a course of rotation, there should always be an intervening hoe-crop between them.

31. Weeds should never be permitted to mature their seeds on the farm, but be pulled up or cut down as often as they show themselves, such being the only effectual method of eradicating them. To ensure this result, the ground should be planted in corn, and that kept clean.

Lines,

Written on the death of JENNY A. CLEAVES, read before the "Wesleyan Literary Association," N. Y. Conference Academy.

THE LAMENT.

As the leaf from the rose tree falling,
So gently fled her breath,
Hark! the angels above are calling,
As she lies in silent death;
"Oh come: sweet maid, from God's high dwelling,
The saints await thee here,
Our harps shall be with anthems swelling,
When thy pure soul draws near."

Weep not ye mourning ones, tho' sadness
Now clouds your hearts with woe;
Weep not: her soul now dwells in gladness,
Where heart tears never flow.
An angel, was she, pure, confiding,
An angel now more bright.
Too pure for earth, she's now abiding
In regions of delight.

To know her was to love her dearly,
"So innocent the maid."
Alas! our hearts are broken nearly—
The beautiful is dead.
From that fair cheek is gone the blossom,
Ah! never to return,
And ne'er again shall heave that bosom,
Those eyes no light discern.

Thus in the spring time of her being,
While in the freshest bloom,
Filled with fond hopes, and ne'er forseeing
She was so near the tomb.
Thus died she, as a flower in summer,
Plucked by a ruthless hand,
Yields its pure breath without a murmur,
Leaving its sister band.

Go make her grave where weeps a willow,
In some calmly silent spot,
There, the green turf for her pillow,
Not soon to be forgot.
And tho' from our sweet JENNY severed,
These thoughts our peace restore;
That her pure soul now dwells in heaven,
To live forever more.

E. LAMONT.

WOMAN.—The following extract from a speech delivered in the California Senate by Mr. SOULE is touchingly beautiful.—The subject was a bill authorizing women to act as sole traders. There are married men out of California as well as in it, who may look in that glass and see themselves:

When I reflect upon the conduct of many married men in California—their faithlessness to every vow which they made at the alter—how completely they fail in the performance of their duties—how virtuous and industrious, faithful and patient women are imposed upon by worthless brutes of husbands, as great tyrants at home, and drunkards and debauchees abroad, my respect for the sex prompts me to do all within my power, to protect her rights and secure he happiness.

I love woman, I have loved her all my life, and dying hope to be faithful to the same high and inspiring sentiment. For amid all the varied scenes, temptations, struggles and hopes of existence, one star, brighter than all others, has lighted and guided me onward; if I ever had any high and noble ambition the exciting energy has been in the approving smile coming from the eye of woman. And I judge her influence is thus upon others. Gentle in her affections, yet mighty through her influence—her medium rule is as powerful as the ballot box, and she only needs the protection of law against those who have no law in their habits and propensities. She has ruled me from my boyhood with the soft and winning influence of her virtues and beauty.

I remember my first love; my baby affections at four years of age. I have been in love nearly every month since—save the dark and rayless days and years which succeeded the desolate hearth and made the heart too desolate. And never, sir, while I remember my mother, long since in her grave—I remember the night when she died—never while I recollect my sisters, and the abuses that might have been theirs—never while I hold in memory one other—and her memory is all that is left me—shall I refuse to give my voice and my influence and my vote, for any measure necessary to protect and cherish the weaker and better portion of creation against the oppression, neglect or abuse of my own sex. I hope the bill may pass.

WHAT IT REMINDS US OF.—When we hear a man boasting of having succeeded in business without ever having advertised, it reminds us of the old fogy who boasts of how far he has walked in a day to save the expense of riding in a railroad car. 'I would work an hour sawing wood,' said a shrewd Yankee 'and earn a quarter to pay my fare twelve miles, and go it in twenty minutes, before I'd spend four hours to walk it.' A man can get along without advertising, so he can go on foot to Albany, but what a fool he is to do either?

In the day of the patriarchs a woman's conduct was the index of her heart. When for example, the father of Rebecca asked if she would go with the servant of Isaac, she immediately replied, 'I will go.' Had she been a daughter of the nineteenth century, she would have answered, 'Pshaw!' go with him! Why, Mr. Isaac must be sick! Go with him! Of course I wont,' And then she would have gone with him.

☞ A Mass State Convention of the citizens of Michigan has been called to meet at Kalamazoo on the 28th of this month, 'to concentrate their opposition to the rapid strides of slave power in such a manner as shall be deemed most practical and efficient, and to protect their own cherished rights as citizens of Free States.'

The Gossip of Washington.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 15, 1854.

The certainty now of a recess in Congress from the middle of October, leaves no doubt as to the 'manifest destiny' of Cuban conquest by this Administration, with the aid and assistance of George Law and his muskets. The apple of discord is ripening, and according to Mr. Cobb's desire, expressed in the House of Representatives a few days since, it will fall into our lap before the meeting of Congress in December next.—Mr. Cobb is a southern statesman of high standing among his collegues, and enjoys more of the confidence of the President perhaps than any other man in Congress. It was upon Mr. Cobb's advice that Col. Forney refused to resign the Clerkship of the House.

The Nebraska and Kansas appointments are all made, There were over seven hundred applicants for these few Territorial offices. The numerous friends of the Hon Ely Moore at the North will be gratified to learn that he has been appointed Governor of Kansas. His important services in extinguishing the Indian titles in that Territory, has long and faithful services in the ranks of Democracy, and his having been a colleague in Congress with the President is said to have produced this unexpected appointment.

The Presidential aspirants are all agog on the Know-Nothing demonstrations, already made at elections in divers places.—It is said that Judge Douglas, on his recent serenade visit to New York, endeavored to enroll himself among the indefinite number of Know-Nothings. but his squatter sovereignty in Nebraska caused him to be black balled. It is thought that Gen Cass in his speech had the vote of the Know-Nothings in his eye, and that it was an understanding and a ruse between him and Archbishop Hughs. It is also said that Gen Rusk of Texas went over to Baltimore and enrolled himself among the order of Know-Nothings Gen Pierce is already a Know-Nothing from instinct, and an old hereditary disease in the family. He was born one.

Gen. Houston contemplates resigning before the recess. He is shocked and bewildered at the chaos of parties and principles; at the ebb of patriotism and the flow of corruption which surrounds him. His sleep is disturbed with the roar of disunion, a sort of scorpion nightmare, and he indulges the gloomy fear and foreboding that the day of evil has dawned upon this people, and that the day of small things has surely come to pass. He weeps over the two extremes of rascality and fanaticism, North and South, as our Savior wept over Jerusalem; but tears did not save the sacred city from becoming heaps, and a desolation, and they will not ware away our iniquities.

Col. Bissell's extremities are paralized, and the probability is he will never walk again, even were some Uncle Tobys to arise and swear he should. D.

Another Tragic Affair in Clinton

We had just heard of the shooting affair in the town of Clinton, when the report reached us that another man had been shot there, by accident We learn from Judge Watson, who was on the ground soon after that a party had gone out after sundown, on wednesday, to shoot deer that were in the habit of coming out into the openings, about that time of evening. Mr. Harwell Giles one of the party, lay down by the side of a fence, watching for game and he saw something near the roots of a tree, which he thought to be a deer, and was confirmed in this opinion by the color of the object, and a slight movement which he noticed. He fired his gun, and immediately he saw the form of a man rise and fall to the ground Mr. Giles hastened to the spot, and found that he had killed a man, the ball pasing through the chest. It turned out that the deceased was not one of the hunting party, and lived some miles from the spot His name was Bruno, a Canadian by birth. He leaves a wife and five children. Judge Watson says that the bodies of the two men who have so suddenly met with untimely deaths, lay within a stone's throw of one another when coroner Platt held inquests over them.—[Clinton County Whig.

BROKE JAIL.—A man by the name of Anson Wing escaped from the Jail, in this village, on the evening of the 13th inst. W. had been imprisoned on the charge of stealing a horse, but, from his own representations, and those of his counsel, he was considered a subject of persecution. and was allowed to go outside of his cell and into the yard. Taking advantage of the kind treatment of the Sheriff's family, he made his escape, at the same time lifting forty dollars in the possession of Mrs. Chamberlin, from a table drawer. $100 dollars reward is offered for his delivery at the Jail. —[Clinton County Whig ☞ SILISTRIA, or as the Turks call it, Dristra, which is just now so hard pushed by the Russians, is an important post at the head of ship navigation on the Danube It is a town of about the size of Syracuse, standing on the south side of the river. in Belgaria, about 275 miles from Constantinople. It is the capital of the sub-province in which it is situated. It is strongly fortified and its capture would give the Russians at that point, command of both sides of the river. At the last advices 25.000 men had been detailed to storm it. The bridge which the Russians are said to have constructed across the river, is of boats probably, as the stream is very wide.

TROUBLE IN NEW HAMPSHIRE. — The Boston Atlas of the 17th says:

The no longer "unterrified" Democracy were in great commotion Wednesday.—Sundry mysterious missives from Washington, via the the telegraph, startled divers holders and expectants of office from their propriety. Cabs were ordered; large tracks were incontiently made in the direction of railroads leading to the capital of the Granite State. It is an ill wind that blows no one good, and the railroads profited by the apprehensions of the White House.—Whether the grand rally of the officials at Concord will effect its object, or whether the Administration has already touched bottom, and has brought up the last Anti-Nebraska Democrats in the market, remains to be seen.

Vermont Autograph & Remarker

This little sheet is printed at Huntington Vt. It is entirely and neatly executed with a pen. and with what ability we leave our readers to judge, from the articles that follow. The Editor was in early life deprived of the advantages of education, save what he gathered from the school children and their books. As he approached manhood, however, he was found to have outstript his mates, tho' they had had teachers. and he had been self-taught from infancy. We had the pleasure of an introduction to the Editor in Burlington a short time since, and through that introduction we are favored with an exchange. The following selections from his little sheet will be read with interest.

"THE NEBRASKA ACT—Never since the organization of the United States Federal Government, has there ever been such a reckless, determined, and defiant disregard of all respect for compacts long since agreed to, and till lately held sacred, as has been exhibited in Congress, in introducing, forceing through. and passing the bill for organizing the territories of Nebraska and Kansas, without any provision for excluding slavery, as should have been, according to the terms of the Missouri Compromise; by which voluntary, deliberate, ommission, that Compromise itself is virtually, if not expressly repealed. [I understand it to be expressly.] In view of this arbitrary faith-destroying act, one can plainly perceive two or three things in its tendency and spirit, which are painful and odius to contemplate. The first is, that the Missouri compromise, the fence run by agreement in 1820, between slave and free territory, as the condition of admitting Missouri as a slave State, being thus thrown and trampled down as it were, by the combined influence of northern dough-faceism, and southern slaveocracy, there is no security so far as the disposition of slaveholding interest is concerned, against its extension and introduction into any territory further north and east where it has not existed; yea, into any of the now free States, even Vermont, if slave owners so will it. Secondly, that the object of the getters up of this freedom defying act, is something more than what they pretend it is, merely to leave it to the free discretion of the people, whether they will permit slavery in Nebraska or not. It is their determination that slavery shall be introduced there, whether or no. If it were not, they would not be so determined and wilful in pushing it through, despite and in utter contempt and disregard of the remonstrances of the people; which stubborn perseverance shows: Thirdly, that all this demoniac desperation in striving to push slavery over the line reoce, as we might call it, of the Missouri Compromise, is merely on purpose to aggrovate, spite, and insult the anti-slavery feeling in the free States, because it opposes their aspiring schemes and domineering spirit. In view of this pandemonium, perfidious compromise-breaking disposition, manifested by the author and abetors of the Nebraska act, the masses of the people at the north, must, as they undoubtedly do, feel that further yielding, compromising, and trying to keep on terms with the southern slaveocracy is forfeited, canceled; and that henceforth they will oppose the admission of any more slave territory. Let the southern slaveocracy bear in mind, that if they won't stand by compromises in observing limits to slavery, we shall not in tolerating it. It is a poor rule that won't work both ways."

DEMOCRACY.—What an abused and prostituted word is Democracy! Made to accommodate itself to principles of action as opposite to its proper original meaning as is darkness to light, or despotism to liberty. Implying as it does in its original derivation from the Greek, the power or will of the people, as exercised, or represented in the exercise of government; it may with pertinency be asked, whether the small majority in Congress, whose votes passed the Nebraska bill, despite the numerous petitions and publicly expressed voice of the majority of the people, whom some of them represented, under the pretext of leaving it to the people of the territory to introduce slavery or not, have acted on true consistent democratic principles? For my part, I must say, that if obstinately disregarding the voice of the people in more than half the States, under the pretence of consulting the wishes of one, be democratic, then is the Czar of Russia one of the veriest democrats in the world."

The Vermont Autograph and Remarker, is issued as leisure and inclination suggest The matter is all original in its composition, and written as here presented, directly from the dictates of my mind. By close application, can complete one in half a day One copy of a date is (generally) all that I pretend to get out at a time."

THE VALCOUR HOUSE,—at Port Kent is to be kept by W. B. Parkell of Essex. long well known on Lake Champlain, and will keep such a house as the place demands. The house has been thoroughly repaired and re-furnished and travelers will find there very comfortable quarters, and a clever landlord.

4TH OF JULY.—We stop the press to acknowledge the receipt with request to publish, but too late for this week, the Programme of an Excursion on Lake Champlain, on the 4th, on the Line Boats, from Rouse's Point to Ticonderoga, touching at all landings as far as Port Henry. There will be a band of music on board, and the Norwich Vt. Cadets will join the Excursion at Burlington. Tickets $1.00. Further particulars next week.

POLITICAL SPECULATIONS.—It seems to be probable that the Hunker State Convention will endorse Nebraska, while the Pierce section of the democracy will probably repudiate it. The result will be. that the hunker state ticket will scarcely poll on this issue. 30,000 votes. We are sorry The principle of popular soverignty we could submit to, though personally in favor of the Wilmot Proviso, but the Nebraska bill has not the first feature of self-government in it, and any party that adopts it will be swamped. We had hoped to see Whigs and Hunkers acting together on this question, We entertain a high respect for the latter personally, and in many respects politically. They are gentlemen of character and ability, and as politicians, bold and fearless in the utterance of their sentiments. We should regret to part here. but if they will try to carry Nebraska they must carry it alone. As a general thing the Pierce democracy are an unconscionable set of rowdies, as men, and utterly rotten and corrupt as politicians and we should regret to see them poll a large vote this fall by taking the popular as it is the right side of the Nebraska swindle.

PORT HENRY,—is a first rate place for a new bank—the best one we know of in Northern New York It should be a bank with a capial of $150,000. at least and ought to be $200,000. Crownpoint, Moriah, and Westport would furnish all, and more business than a bank of the latter size could do. Witherbees, in their own and the business of Lee, Sherman and Witherbees use $1000, a day, of the best kind of city paper on short time. and is at present furnished by Burton. The Furnace Co. and Cheever ore bed Co must use as much more, also of the first class paper, Goff must use half as much, Jackson at Westport, do. and Hammond's, at Crownpoint as much as the most. These men are all responsible and aside from their own ability, the paper they use is of itself the most desirable by banks. We call the attention of money men to this subject.

WHIPPED.—S. H Hammond of the Albany Register returned from the Saranac Lakes on Tuesday whence he went about a week since to be absent about three weeks. He looked like a subject of the Small Pox, the effects of the bites of black flies, which he says are thick this season beyond all precedent Although an "old hand" in the bush and on the lakes, he owns up whipped, and fled unceremoniously, tho' we believe from appearances he saved his rifle, fishing tackle and baggage. In taking his departure from our village he said, "would never do to give it up so," and that he should come this way again within four weeks. Hammond loves a "tramp" but not for fishing alone. The pure air, the beautiful scenery, the resources of the country, and the people absorb his attention far more than sporting. To no one man probably is Northern New York more indebted than to him for having her riches and her resources brought to the notice of the public. He is not merely a whole souled, jolly good fellow, but a man of ability. Luck to him.

PERSONAL.—Fred Allen, Son of A. H. Allen of this place has been home on a visit for a few days past. He is Teller in the Bank of Troy one of the largest Banks in that city with a large salary. Fred is a right worthy young fellow, an honor and a blessing to his parents. That's the way to do it. 'Act well your part' &c.

COL. THS. A. TOMLINSON,

——Who has been travelling in the West for six weeks past, speaks in glowing terms of that section of the country, its business, prospects, &c., &c. Crops are excellent. emigration still settles rapidly in that direction, and the country is apparently full as far as he went. On the Nebraska question, there is in the west as in the east, but one sentiment, among all parties, and that is one of deadly hostility to the measure and to the men who vote for it.

Foreign Papers.—Mr. James Wilson Esq. of this place, has favored us with the perusal of seval papers from England, with which we have been highly gratified and instructed. We are promised their perusal in future, and we intend to quote from them for the benefit of our readers. They are large, well printed, and similar, but rather better looking than American papers. Their contents have a style peculiar to the English system. Births are as minutely published as marriages and deaths. In the London Times of May 10th, we see John B Gough, the celebrated American Temperance Lecturer, now in England advertised to deliver an Oration that evening at Exeter Hall.

SOMETHING NEW.—Mr Kendall, of Albany has established a branch Cigar and Confectionary establishment at this place, wholesale and retail. A fine establishment has been fitted up, and apparently the project is a good one and must meet with success

The Masonic Register, is the title of a new Masonic Journal, started in N. Y. city. It is weekly, at $2, a year, or 5 copies for $8. 10 copies for $15, 20 copies for $25. Office 343. Broadway.

IN LUCK.—Mr. William Reolofson son of Mr C. Roelofson late of this place now of Detroit, has married a lady worth $200,000. So says an informant who God greater than Man.—A sermon preached June 11th, after the rendition of Burns, by Rev. Joshua Young, of Burlington, Vt. Published by S. B. Nichols, Burlington, and for sale at Hasbrouck's. It is spoken of as a great production, but our copy came to hand too late to speak by authority, this week.

☞ THE "MUSICAL CONGRESS" at the Crystal Palace in New York has proved remarkbly successful. Yesterday there were said to be 40 000 persons present. The effect of the music was magnificent.

It will be repeated and continued for a short season, with the same orchestral force. The price of Tickets, however, for the ensuing days will be reduced one half, viz: $1 for a ticket entitling the holder to a reserved seat, or 25 cents for a simple admission ticket.

The Tribune, in its article says:—

"The three parts of the Concert fetched it up to five hours nearly—Beethovens' Symphony only being given in part, even then The entire effect of the performance was splendid. M Jullien spoke a few appropriate words on being called out before the audience; so did the President of the Crystal Palace, Mr. Barnum.

It was a great and with the reservations we have made, a sublime occasion, well carried out—even beyond expectation—without a balk from first to last

TICONDEROGA, June 1, 1854.

COL. TARBELL,

DEAR SIR:—Agreeable to previous arrangement, several of our farmers met yesterday, at the Hotel of J. W. Holcomb, for the purpose of shearing and comparing sheep.

They brought in about fifty sheep of the Spanish Merino stock—27 of which were sheared, being all that time would permit. A large number of citizens gathered in and manifested a pleasing interest in the exhibition. Below is statement of age, weight before shearing; and weight of fleece. The clip was from 11 months 10 days, to 12 months growth.

I think exhibitions of this kind are beneficial as they tend to institute enquiry and investigation and create useful competition in the collection and improvement of fine flocks—all parties deriving mutual benefit by comparing notes on general management of keeping and care.

I suppose the main points desirable in fine wool sheep are good form. and constitution, fair size, fine and heavy fleece. In these particulars the flocks of Mr. Wm. H. Cook, Mr. Clark and Messrs. Delano's will doubtless favorably compare with any in this section of the state These gentlemen are entitled to much credit for the enterprise they have evinced in the introduction, judicious management and dissemination of this valuable stock of sheep. The other gentlemen named, and several others in town who did not contribute to the exhibition have commenced to rear flocks of the same blood. Mr. Wm. H. Cook, Mr. Clark and Mr Ths. Delano have spared a few sheep, mostly yearlings, to neighbors who were migrating to the distant west at prices ranging from $25 to $100 per head. and I am informed that the same quality command nearly double the prices named in Vermont. This to unbelievers in Merino may seem a little like a parsimonious matron who resided on the bank of Lake George in old ntime, who "would spare a little butter at 25 cts, pr pound to accommodate poor people!" But if this kind of sheep will produce, on an everage double the value in wool, with the same keeping, that an other kind will produce, then it certainly seems the greatest remuneration is to be found in raising the Merinos. MONTPELIER, June 21.—11 A. M.

The Democratic State Convention is now in session. It is ascertained there is a decisive majority present against the Nebraska bill.

SECOND DESPATCH, 3.30 P. M.

Gov. Robinson and Lieut. Gov. Kidder both decline.

Hon. Merritt Clark, of Poultney, and Wm. Mattocks, of Peacham, are chosen candidates in their stead. J. A. Page, of Montpelier, is candidate for State Treasurer.

FROM EUROPE.

BOSTON, June 21.

The most important intelligence is that Marshal Arnaud had sent 70 000 Anglo-French troops to Silistria, which is surrounded on all sides by the Russians.—These troops it is expected will reach Silistria about the 14th inst. and was doubted if the fortress could hold out until that time.

There are some deep political moves going on at Vienna, between the Emperor of Austria and the King of Prussia.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—The New Hampshire Whig State Convention at Concord yesterday, nominated Hon. James Bell of Exeter, for Governor, by nearly a unanimous vote.

Great enthusiasm was manifested, and a series of resolutions, taking strong ground against the Nebraska bill, were passed, and inviting the co-operation of all friends of Freedom in resisting Slavery extension.

WASHINGTON, June 20.

A DUEL IN PROSPECT.—In the House today, Mr. Churchwell charged Mr. Cullom with adding to the published reports of his speech, statements not made in the House, and which were false. Mr. McCullom leaped over the desk to Mr. Churchwell, and shaking his fist in his face, called him a liar and a scoundrel, whereupon Mr. Churchwell drew a pistol and cocked it, friends interfered and the Sergeant-at Arms coming up, order was restored. A duel will probably grow out of the affair.

SMALL POX—We understand that exagerated rumors of Small Pox in our village are again in circulation. Now, probably in all villages of the size of Keeseville, Plattsburgh and Burlington, there is not a month in the year, without a case of this disease; yet the fact is, that at this present writing, there is not a solitary case in the village. People having business here, need have no fears whatever, as, if a case occurs, it is so taken care of as to preclude all possibility of exposure. Danger is the merest moonshine imaginable.

GREAT ATTRACTION.—Mr. T. W, Johnson, Agent of the Manufacturing and Mercantile Union, No. 360 Broadway N. Y. has taken rooms at the Ausable House in this village, where he has on exhibition and for sale some of the most beautiful specimens of Porcelain and China ware of American manufacture one can conceive of. Our citizens should call to see if not to purchase. The beauty of the specimens are the surprise of all beholders.

The following notice of this establishment is taken from the N. Y. Tribune.

We trust that the days of American ill success in respect to American Porcelain are numbered The establishment of Mess. Cartlidge & Co., Green Point, L. I., appears to have passed safely the point of peril. and is henceforth destined to expand and flourish, until it shall supply the American market. We therefore fulfil a cherished purpose in giving an account of it.

Mr. Charles Cartlidge, the master-spirit is an Englishman by birth, who, after thoroughly acquiring the art of Pottery, in all its finer branches, came out here as a seller of wares, some ten or twelve years ago. Extensive travel and inquiry convinced him that Porcelain of the best quality might be made here as cheaply as in any part of Europe, and he commenced a series of experiments which led to the foundation of his present business. He now occupies extensive buildings and employs a large number of operatives, though his establishment is but three years old. He uses none but American materials in any part, and considers them decidely superior to any existing in Europe. He has made important improvements in his processes, substituting machinery for hand labor so extensively and profitably that although his master workmen are necessarily drawn from England or France, and of course require much higher wages than they obtained over the water, he yet avers his ability to furnish Porcelain equal in fineness to any European, and far surpassing the best imported in hardness, transparency, capacity of resisting the fire, &c., at lower prices than any Old-World Porcelain was ever sold at, in America.

That the American ware is elegant and excellent, our senses vouch; its relative cheapness and worth, as compared with those of rival European products, is a point which purchasers, and especially dealers, will determine for themselves. But if it be, as we presume it is, not only a better but a cheaper than the Porcelain ordinarily imported, why should not the success of the manufacturer be regarded as a National triumph? We very decidedly prefer that wares for American consumption shall be made by artisans and workmen who are, rather than those who are not, customers to American newspapers; we admit that self-interest is one reason for this choice; but is not the interest of the American farmer, hatter, shoemaker, tailor, &c., identical in this respect with our own? If it be so, they should, as we do, welcome every new art established among us as an added element of National and individual prosperity. And thus regarding it, they should welcome and encourage those who successfully introduce branches of productive industry previously unknown here, and should do what they fairly may to promote their prosperity.

Ten Names to be Remembered.

The outh is not quite so badly off as the ancient city for which Abraham interceded, for there are ten honest men found in it.

John Bell, William Cullom. Robert M. Bugg, Emerson Etheridge, and A. Taylor, Whigs from Tennessee; Theodore G Hunt, Whig of Louisiana; Sion H. Rogers and Richard C. Puryear, Whigs of North Carolina; Thomas H. Benton of Missouri, and J. S Millson, of Virginia, Democrats, voted against the Nebraska Bill on its final passage. Long after their colleagues shall have been charitably forgotten, these names will be remembered by the People, North and South, as men who in the time of trial stood firmly up for Public Faith and National Justice. And distinguished as some of them have been, we are mistaken if the time does not come when they and their constituents will point to this as the best deed of their Congressional life.—[Albany Journal.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The following notices of Prof Hart's Whole World are cut from the principal Newspapers of New York:

Prof. Hart's Great Gift Enterprise is taking the City by storm. Almost everybody we meet has either purchased a ticket or is about doing so. The exhibition itself is one of the most interesting instructive and ingenious ever exhibited in this country, and is worth fully one dollar to view it. The Prof. will give a grand Free excursion to every purchaser of his one dollar tickets to his elegant country seat, which is one of the gifts in his great enterprise, and a year's subscription to his valuable Journal, and also one of the 300,000 gifts.—Atlas

Prof. Hart's Whole World.—This instructive and entertaining exhibition of the Whole World is at Nos 377 and 379 Broadway.—For one dollar four tickets may be procured for the exhibition and one valuable gift which may be an independent fortune for the receiver, and also one year's subscription to the Illustrated Journal called The Whole World.—Dispatch.

Prof. Hart's Whole World.—The success which the extraordinary, ingenious and comprehensive work of art is meeting is commensurate with its merits: it is the first and only one of the kind ever conceived, and it stands forth as a monument of the unwearying patience and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mental fertility.—Tribune.

Prof. Hart's Whole World.—We hear that this Gift enterprise is going ahead vigorously. It is in energetic hands, and if business capacity will achieve anything, the prospects are all in favor of it. The immense number of gifts to be distributed renders it almost certain that every subscriber will receive something valuable.—Sunday Times. 528 3m.

THE LAMPLIGHTER. THIS WORK IS a decided hit. Its fair author—for Madame Rumor attributes it to a Woman has astonished herself as well as the public. Her book is not only a good one in the fullest sense of that word, but it almost approaches to the dignity of a great one, nearer by odds than any other fiction published within the last five years Uncle Tom's not excepted.
